Chehalis Flood Control Zone District Plans Expanded Role

POLICY: New Comprehensive Plan Expected to Include More Than Dam and Levee Projects

By Alex Brown
abrown@chronline.com

At present, the Chehalis River Basin Flood Control Zone District essentially exists to sponsor the dam project that local leaders have been working on for years.

The district was reorganized in 2011, after years of dormancy, and the dam — along with the linked Chehalis-Centralia Airport levee expansion — have been almost its entire focus. It operates on a slim budget compared to its counterparts, the Chehalis River Basin Flood Authority and the Office of the Chehalis Basin.

But the district's role as a single-issue entity may be about to change. It's beginning work on creating a Comprehensive Flood Hazard Management Plan, which will outline the role of the district going forward, which will include looking beyond the proposed dam.

"It will be our policy guiding document," said Betsy Dillin, district staffer and a senior engineer with Lewis County Public Works. "It will have other recommendations. ... They would like to be more active than just putting (the dam project) on paper."

The district's last comprehensive plan dates back to 2009, and does not reflect the current ambitions of the district. State law requires the group to main-

County Plans Outreach on 911 Regionalization

CONSOLIDATION: Answer to 911 Problems Could Be a Regional Approach

By Alex Brown
abrown@chronline.com

As Lewis County explores the possibility of merging with Thurston County's 911 service, officials are planning to hear from local cities and fire districts before undertaking any formal studies or putting together a plan.

"The (county) commissioners want to ensure that there is a conduit for information, questions, concerns to be funneled back to the process, once and if they get into it," said county Manager Erik Martin. "They didn't want it to seem like the commissioners were doing this and hadn't asked for permission and input."

With that in mind, the Lewis County Board of Commissioners are planning to attend the next gathering of local fire district leaders, scheduled for May 20, and they expect 911 service to be a topic of conversation at their monthly meeting of local mayors next Friday.

"It's a dialogue, take a look at the options, take a look at some of the studies that need to happen and how can we work together," said county commissioner Edna Fund. "When we look at potentially going into a partnership with TCOMM (Thurston County 911 Communications), there's questions to be answered on that. They will be very helpful, because they

One of Centralia's well known eyesores is in line to become a flashpoint for future growth in the Hub City.

The remains of King Solomon's Restaurant at 1225 Mellen St. are to be razed as part of plans to construct a four-story La Quinta Inn and Suites on the property. The Chronicle obtained site plans submitted within the past month as part of a building permit application by LQ — Centralia LLC.

Dan Taylor, the listed representative of the limited liability corporation, did not provide a specific timeline for construction outside of a desire for completion by the end of 2020. The planning documents and permit application are currently under review by various Centralia agencies.

Documents cite details such as an expected 88 hotel rooms and the redrawing of four lots that make up the derelict property. The most recent officer-involved shooting in Centralia occurred in February 2014 after a man told officers in the parking lot of the abandoned building that he had a knife and gun before attempting to flee down Elm Street.

19-Year-Old Onalaska Resident in Need of Second Liver Transplant

SEARCH: Family Remains Strong Despite Hardships

By Lydia Denney
ldenney@chronline.com

In 2015, Marquise Reynolds was given three days to live after he and his family found out he needed an emergency liver transplant. A donor was found within 15 hours and, after a nine hour surgery, Marquise had a new liver.

However, even with the donated liver, Marquise continued to experience health issues, turning his life into doctor's appointments, medications, biopsies and hospitalization.

Recently, the family got more bad news. Marquise was put back on the transplant because his donor liver is failing.

"He blames himself for everything," his mother, Dawn Reynolds said. "He blames himself for our financial issues because he got sick. It's like, 'You didn't make yourself sick, you didn't do this to yourself... It's just the hand you've been dealt.'"

FOUR YEARS AGO, while living in Boise, ID, Marquise and his sister both became ill. Their mother, Dawn Reynolds, took them to urgent care, and positive results came back for Marquise's sister. When Marquise's symptoms weren't improving, Dawn took him back to urgent care, then his primary doctor and eventually the emergency room, all of which related his fever and full-body rash to strep throat.

After Marquise and Dawn were again sent home with medication, he began hallucinating. When his blood work came back, it showed his liver counts were through the roof, Dawn said. After Marquise saw a liver specialist, he was immediately admitted to a children's hospital, where doctors still weren't completely certain of his illness. Eventually, doctors decided to have him airlifted to a hospital in Salt Lake City.

"He looks at me and asks me, 'Am I going to die?'" and of course, I'm a mother and I'm like, 'No, you're not going to die.' But then again, I'm like, 'Is he going to die?'" Dawn said.

After driving five and a half hours to Salt Lake City, Dawn arrived at the hospital and was immediately asked to sign papers for Marquise's liver transplant. Dawn was told Marquise has Drug Reaction with Eosinophilia and Systemic Symptoms (DRESS) syndrome, something that was probably caused by acne medications Marquise tried taking just four weeks earlier.

"I lost it again, I was like, 'Someone needs to pay for this... This isn't right. This is a medication. This is supposed to help him. And now it's killing him? I don't understand,'" Dawn said.

Marquise was put at the top of the transplant list and a donor liver was found within 15 hours. On Feb. 4, 2015, Marquise had a liver transplant, a nine hour surgery and the longest nine hours of Dawn's life, she said. After the surgery, Marquise and Dawn spent a month in the hospital while he regained strength. Before returning home to Boise, he was admitted again for an infection in his incision and spent two more weeks in the hospital.

"It's not right. He's a good kid," Dawn said. "Why him? Not that I want anybody else's child to have to go through this, but why him?"

When the Reynolds were approved to return to Boise, Marquise was able to return to school after missing his whole sophomore year. He eventually graduated from high school, working on what homework he could while he was in the hospital.

"He didn't get to have a whole high school experience," Dawn said. "Basically his life consists of hospitals, doctors, blood work, testing... that's his life."

Over the past four years, Marquise has had around 150 biopsies, 50 stents put in his bile duct and they have lost counting of the number of procedures, Dawn said. The Reynolds eventually moved to Onalaska and transferred Marquise's care to the University of Washington Medical Center. She said she continues to research DRESS syndrome and is a part of a Facebook group containing other people who have been affected. There still isn't a lot of information, but there is more than there was four years ago, Dawn said.

"You can't necessarily blame the doctors, because they don't know," Dawn said. "But then again you kind of do want to blame the doctors, because it's like, you're a doctor, you should know this stuff."

There was no time for Dawn to become informed for his first transplant, but now they don't know when there will be a liver available. The paperwork containing information on his discharge, medications and support groups has become their "Bible," Dawn said.

The Reynolds family fears what will happen with Marquise's liver; whether they will find a donor, if the donor liver will make him better. Doctors told Dawn that Marquise's case is special and complicated, which can be frustrating, but the doctors are still trying, she said.

"We're all scared he's going to die," his sister Celena said. "My fear is that he's not going to be around much longer... I've had that fear for a while."

WHEN MARQUISE'S liver transplant went into rejection, he was diagnosed with severe depression and PTSD. Many things that he wanted to do were no longer options, like playing baseball or going to college.

"I'm forced to live my life one day at a time and I can't even look at the future. Thought I would already have my driver's license by now, still don't. I thought I would have a job, still don't."

"I can understand my family's fears of whether I'm going to die or not," Marquise said. "I don't blame this all on the liver transplant, I blame it on DRESS syndrome and the lack of knowledge on it."

Wanting to eventually become a film director, Marquise completed one semester at Centralia College. However, when he learned he needed a second transplant, the school suggested he stop taking classes, Dawn said. While she understands that decision, she said it's important to let Marquise mourn the things DRESS syndrome has taken from him. Even though it hasn't taken his life, in a way it has, Dawn said.

"I'm forced to live my life one day at a time and I can't even look at the future," Marquise said. "I thought I would already have my driver's license by now, still don't. I thought I would have a job, still don't... I think the worst part about it is, even if this secondary transplant is successful, it's still going to affect me my whole life."

As Marquise continues to wait for a new transplant, he wants people to be aware that DRESS syndrome is real. Dawn said she wants people to do research before taking a medication, because even though the chances of someone getting DRESS syndrome are low, it can still happen.

"I want people to know that DRESS syndrome can happen to anybody," Dawn said. "I mainly want parents to know, if your doctor wants to put your kid on a medication, just research, at least get that information."

Onalaska Man Pleads Guilty in Wife's Shooting Death

By Cody Neuenschwander

cneuenschwander@chronline.com

Bruce E. Reed, an Onalaska man who was accused in January of shooting and killing his wife, pleaded guilty to first-degree murder Thursday.

Reed, 67, is scheduled to be sentenced 9 a.m. May 13 in Lewis County Superior Court.

During Thursday's hearing — a change of plea only hearing — Judge Andrew Toynebee read a statement from Reed, succinctly stating that on Jan. 22, "with premeditation, I shot and killed my wife."

Reed, through negotiation between his attorney Kevin Nelson and Deputy Prosecutor Paul Masiello, pleaded to amended charging information differing slightly from how he was originally charged.

Masiello explained that the first-degree murder charge Reed pleaded guilty to was stripped of all aggravating factors that were tacked onto the initial charge. Those aggravators included a deadly weapon enhancement, deliberate cruelty and lack of remorse.

Masiello said those factors might have opened Reed to being sentenced beyond the standard some point during the argument, Reed loaded a .32 caliber semi-automatic handgun "made a few statements to his wife" and then fired all eight rounds.

"Mr. Reed explained once he had the gun in his hand he felt Mrs. Reed had essentially challenged him. Mr. Reed stated Mrs. Reed said something to the effect of, 'This is how you're going to do it huh,'" reads an incident report from the sheriff's office.

aren't bound to attorneys' sentencing recommendation.

Reed's been held in the Lewis County Jail on $2 million bail ever since he called 911 directly following the shooting, informing the dispatcher he had shot his wife, 67-year-old Frances Reed.

Court documents indicate the two had been in a non-physical altercation about finances and a home remodeling project. Reed told responding deputies she "had pushed him too far." At

POULI MAMEA:

$50,000 Bail Set for 46-Year-Old Accused of Touching Two Teenage Girls

By The Chronicle

A Seatac man was charged in Lewis County Thursday with sexually touching two teenage girls on multiple occasions.

Pouli Mamea, 46, was charged with first-degree sexual misconduct with a minor and fourth-degree assault with sexual motivation. He was being held, as of Friday, on $50,000 bail.

According to a probable cause affidavit, Centralia police first received a report of the alleged molestation in February, and launched an investigation at that time.

Two teenage girls recounted numerous times when Mamea sexually touched them. During the course of the investigation, a third person came forward with similar allegations, according to court documents.

Police records indicate Mamea was arrested 3:10 p.m. Wednesday.

During a hearing in Lewis

County Superior Court Thursday afternoon, Judge R.W. Buzzard imposed $50,000 bail, in tune with a request from Senior Criminal Deputy Prosecutor Will Halstead.

Halstead noted that Mamea doesn't have a criminal history, but that the allegations against him represented a threat to the community and the alleged victims.

Additionally, Buzzard ordered Mamea have no contact with minors or the alleged victims.

He has an arraignment hearing scheduled for May 2 in Lewis County Superior Court.

News in Brief

Centralia Police to Host Series of Community Meetings to Discuss Crime Trends

By The Chronicle

The Centralia Police Department plans to host a series of four community meetings throughout May and into June to discuss ongoing crime trends and issues within the city's four districts.

The meetings will be held every Thursday starting May 16, and will be hosted by the patrol sergeant that oversees whichever district is the topic of the meeting.

"These meetings are a continuation of the Centralia Police Department engaging with our community partners to help solve crimes, identify issues, and hear concerns within the districts they work or live," reads a police press release.

The meeting time and locations are 6 p.m. May 16, at Edison Elementary School, 607 H St., for council district 3 residents; 6 p.m. May 23, in the City Hall courtroom, 118 W. Maple St., for council district 2 residents; 6 p.m. May 30, at Oakview Elementary School, 201 E. Oakview Ave., for council district 1 residents and 6 p.m. June 6, at Fort Borst Park Kitchen No. 2, in Borst Park, for council district 4 residents.

"The Centralia Police Department strongly encourages citizens that live or work within those council districts to attend the meeting in their area," reads the press release.

If you're not sure which council district you live in, check out the City of Centralia website.

5k Run to Benefit Lewis County Drug Court Program

By Cody Neuenschwander
cneuenschwander@chronline.com

For many entering the Lewis County Drug Court program, there's a time of readjusting to a world free of drugs — and a number of events are planned throughout the year to help them re-learn how to have fun without illicit substances.

Next month, one of those events — a 5k run starting in Stan Hedwall Park — will be held for the second time ever, and the public is invited to attend and take part.

The run begins 5:30 p.m. Monday, May 13, with participants asked to meet in the covered shelter at the park. The route will continue down Rice Road, said Jan Self, community outreach worker with Lewis County Drug Court.

Self said drug court participants are required to attend the event, and through mingling with others who show up, the community learns a bit more about the program and how it works.

After speaking with people in attendance last year, Self said she met runners who didn't know much about drug court and had preconceived notions about the people who are in the program.

"We are very, very fortunate that drug court is very well supported by the community," said Self.

Last year, Self said, they had a speaker and microphone, but the outdoor venue proved complicated, so that part of the event has been nixed this time around. There were 224 people in attendance then — a lot more than the 80 to 100 expected.

It made for a chaotic time at the registration table, but it was good to see such a large turnout, said Self.

Even more are expected this year, thanks to increased promotion, involvement with local running clubs and word-of-mouth.

Anyone interested can reach out to Lewis County Drug Court on Facebook to receive a registration form. They can also call or text 360-880-1060 or 360-880-3871 or visit the Drug Court office in the second floor of the Law and Justice Center in Chehalis.

Registration costs $20, but is free for kids 12 and younger — unless the kid wants an event T-shirt, then the $20 price will be required. The smallest T-shirt size is an adult small.

The 5k is one of four annual events considered "pro-social" that drug court participants are required to attend. Other events, called "give-back" events, are scattered throughout the year — Self said there's usually somewhere between four and six per year.

"It's awesome to see, because until they're in recovery, they know how big the drug world is out in our community, but then they get into Drug Court and the recovery community, and they realize how we have a huge recovery community in the Twin Cities and Lewis County," said Self.

Self said the give-back events give drug court participants the chance to make positive contributions to the community. Many participants have, at one point or another, done something destructive within society, and the events are ways to make amends.

Centralia Sponsors Neighborhood Cleanup Initiative on May 4

By Will Rubin
wrubin@chronline.com

The City of Centralia is sponsoring a citywide neighborhood cleanup effort on May 4 in hopes that everyone will pitch in a little bit of their time and energy to spruce up the city ahead of summertime.

Inspired in part by spring cleaning projects by the Centralia Downtown Association, the Lewis County Historical Museum and others, the city will be processing bagged litter from noon to 3 p.m. at 2600 Reynolds Road. Free garbage bags and protective gloves are available inside the lobby of City Hall and at the public works building located at 1100 N. Tower Ave.

Only bagged litter will be accepted by the city — no mattresses, appliances or other large items. Citizens who wish to participate but are unable to do so during the event hours or who cannot transport their bags to the processing location are encouraged to make arrangements by calling 360-330-7512.

Councilor Sue Luond suggested the city get involved in the cavalcade of cleanup efforts during a previous council meeting. Citizen volunteers led by Steve Kopa pick up garbage near Interstate-5 exit 81 each weekend, but there is no one group that sweeps the residential areas for litter and debris.

Luond's idea was met with universal support from other councilors, including Peter Abbarno, who likened it to an Adopt-a-Block program some communities have that mirrors the Adopt-a-Highway initiative put on by the Washington State Department of Transportation.

Luond credited Lewis County Commissioner Edna Fund for reminding her that people should always wear protective gloves when handling trash.

"I really want to encourage the people who live in the city of Centralia to just take an hour, take 25 minutes, go around your block and pick it up," Luond said. "It doesn't matter if someone else threw it down, you can pick it up. I really believe if our community will get behind this, it's really going to look nice when it's all done."

Mineral School Names Artist Residents for 2019 Season

By Alex Brown
abrown@chronline.com

The Mineral School is readying to welcome its biggest class of artists yet, as it enters its 5th year offering its residency program in a historic schoolhouse in East Lewis County.

"We're kind of in the stage of motherly worry," joked Jane Hodges, the school's founder and volunteer director, discussing preparations currently underway for the summer residencies.

The school will welcome 21 artists this year, including writers, painters, visual artists, poets and filmmakers. The program received 320 applications for the residencies, an "embarrassment of riches," Hodges said.

The 2019 class of artists hails from everywhere from Seattle to New York to Bahrain.

"We are gonna have quite a lot of people in Mineral this summer," Hodges said. "People want time to work on their work, and they want to be in an unusual and pretty place."

The program gives artists who are in the middle of ambitious projects some time and solitude to devote to their work. The school provides lodging and food, and the residency includes a presentation from a visiting artist, as well as a show-and-tell night for those staying at the school.

"Basically we've found that two-week residency experience, feeding people and leaving them alone leads to very good results," Hodges said.

The residency program is housed in a 1947 elementary school in Mineral that was sold by the school district due to declining population numbers. It was purchased in 2013 and soon began work to become a space for artists, working with the nonprofit agency Shunpike.

The core program the school offers is two-week residencies, which runs the last two weeks of June, July and August. In September, it runs a one-week program for artists who are parents and can't spend as much time away from their children. This year, the school is also offering a screenwriting residency in conjunction with the Rainier Independent Film Festival in nearby Ashford.

The school charges a modest fee to cover food costs, and volunteers — many of them past alumni — take care of cooking and upkeep. It also offers 10 fellowships, fully covering the costs of the artists who earned them.

This year's artists are working on everything from novels to screenplays to nonfiction to visual art to poetry. Though they're covering a broad range of topics, Hodges said one of the recurring themes is the idea of diaspora, the experience of people living outside of their homeland.

"There's a lot of negotiation of identity in this group," Hodges said. "There are a number of people who are writing about the concept of diaspora in different ways, leaving one world for another and what is lost in that translation."

Denver-based Alexis Stratton is writing a retelling of Virgil's "Aeneid," as told by a lesbian protagonist in the South. Sean Hovendick, from Albany, New York, is working on a portrait project called "Lives of Men." Corinne Manning, a Seattle author, is writing a novel about trauma within the early 20th century Italian diaspora. In conjunction with the Lummi Nation, Beth Pielert, a writer/director from Half Moon Bay, California, is developing a series about a tribal member who returns to her ancestral reservation following her mother's disappearance.

Another common theme is the human impact on landscapes, and the clear-cut slopes surrounding some parts of East Lewis County make for thought-provoking images on the subject.

During residency, the school puts out the Mineral Daily Minute, a newsletter telling artists "gossip from town, the weather and what they're gonna eat," Hodges said.

The school puts on a public art fair in July, in conjunction with the Mineral Lake Lions Club. It also hosts dessert potlucks during residency, designed to connect artists and locals.

"The town is kind to us," Hodges said.

While organizers are eager to see the work that artists produce this summer, right now they're focused on their stomachs.

"A lot of what we're focusing on right now is making sure that cooks for the summer have information on how people eat," Hodges said. "We start doing planning behind the scenes so that we can be homey for people."

Governor Jay Inslee signs House Bill 1801 on Thursday in Olympia. The bill allows municipalities such as Centralia to receive a permit to access abandoned cemeteries such as Greenwood Memorial Park. Those in attendance at the signing ceremony included state Rep. Ed Orcutt (third from the left), Centralia City Manager Rob Hill (directly behind Inslee) and Marveen Rohr (third from the right).

Inslee Signs Cemetery Bill, Clearing Way for Centralia to Access Abandoned Greenwood Property

By Will Rubin
wrubin@chronline.com

Washington Gov. Jay Inslee signed House Bill 1801 into law Thursday afternoon, clearing the way for Centralia staff to apply for a permit to access abandoned cemeteries such as Greenwood Memorial Park for the purposes of maintenance, restoration and visitation.

State Rep. Ed Orcutt, R-Kalama, co-sponsored the legislation with state Rep. Richard DeBolt, R-Chehalis following years of consternation from Centralia residents unhappy at the state of disrepair the historic graveyard fell into under the ownership of John C. Baker.

The two state legislators are now focused on working with Centralia City Manager Rob Hill to secure short and long-term state funding to finance repairs to concrete gravesites, dilapidated roads and a litany of other issues on the property. They are seeking an amendment to the current capital budget to unlock about $100,000 for use in advance of Memorial Day while also attempting to keep close to $400,000 in the final version of the 2019-2021 budget slated to take effect July 1.

Hill singled out the numerous damaged and collapsed vaults as one aspect that will require a hefty sum of money to address.

“There’s money sitting in the current budget, but the language says it’s only for the purchase (of Greenwood Memorial Park),” Hill said. “The city doesn’t want any part of that, so until the attached language is amended, it’s of no value to anyone. The funding in the upcoming budget would be used to make it a proper memorial park. What is available to us to do improvements out there is going to dictate how much work can be done, but there’s a lot we can do in the interim to clean and spruce it up while we wait for that all to play out.”

Regardless of lingering financial questions, watching Inslee sign his name to the bill marked a significant milestone for those with a vested interest in Greenwood and other abandoned cemeteries in Washington. The legislation takes effect immediately due to an emergency clause inserted by Orcutt, who was relieved to see it take effect as soon as it did.

“I didn’t want to wait for it to be delivered and then wait another 20 days for it to be signed,” Orcutt said. “The city still has a little bit of work to do with the Department of Archaeology and Preservation to formally get the permit, but our whole goal when I met with the city was they said they wanted to try to get some of the work done prior to Memorial Day. As soon as they get the permit,

Marveen Rohr of Centralia attended the ceremony Thursday along with Orcutt, Hill and a number of other stakeholders. She and Hill each testified to committees in both the House and Senate as the bill worked its way through the legislative process before receiving unanimous votes of approval.

Rohr has long been at the forefront of a group of volunteers who have pitched in over the years when granted access to weed and clean the grounds. She told a story to state legislators about her childhood neighbor being buried at Greenwood after he was killed while deployed during the Vietnam War.

Hill said city officials are slated to meet with members of the community next week to discuss forming an oversight committee to handle volunteers and examine how to approach the wide-ranging possibilities for restoration. Rohr believes there to be a large contingent of citizens who want to be involved, some because they haven’t felt comfortable on the grounds for the better part of a decade.

“I think it would be wonderful if it could be restored to the striking, beautiful field of painted graves it was before,” Rohr said. “This isn’t going to be done by Memorial Day weekend. This is going to be a long-term effort, but I know from the people who have talked to me about how very hopeful they were that, now that the legislation is signed, they want to go inside. It’s not only law now, it’s an opportunity for us to go forward from the precipice of correcting what is wrong and unacceptable.”

'No Bar Was Too Low': Shoreline Man Sentenced to 55 Years for Sexually Exploiting Hundreds of Girls

By Sara Jean Green
The Seattle Times

The exploitation of hundreds of girls was bad enough, but even Michael Berenson's cohorts in an online community of men — who worked to coerce girls into undressing and performing sex acts in front of web cameras — drew the line at blackmailing their victims and distributing sexual images of the girls on the Internet.

Berenson, a 30-year-old Shoreline man, did both without hesitation and enjoyed torturing the girls he victimized, Assistant U.S. Attorney April Russo wrote in a sentencing memo filed in federal court in the Eastern District of Michigan. He ridiculed and encouraged girls to harm themselves and made fun of at least three girls who died by suicide as a result of the online sex abuse, Russo wrote.

On Monday, Berenson was sentenced in Detroit to serve 55 years in federal prison, 15 years more than the 23 other men who were sentenced earlier for their roles in the elaborate online scheme that targeted girls ages 8 to 17, court records show.

Though investigators have been unable to identify hundreds of the victims, Berenson was also ordered to pay $95,000 in restitution, split among his 19 known victims, including the mother of one of them, Amanda Todd. Amanda, 15, took her own life in October 2012, a month after posting a powerful YouTube video about the bullying she suffered as a result of being sexually exploited by Berenson and his co-defendants.

According to court records, Berenson and the other men pretended to be teenagers and would strike up online friendships with girls, flattering them and spending weeks earning their trust, then getting them to agree to "flash" their stomachs or bras for webcams. Things would gradually escalate until the girls agreed to undress and perform sex acts as directed by the men, who recorded the sessions without the girls' knowledge, then traded the videos among themselves.

Berenson — who admitted to sexually exploiting 1,000 girls over more than a decade — took over some of his victims' web cameras, spying on them for months at a time in their bedrooms, the sentencing memo says. He also obtained pornographic images of children from other pedophiles, remotely downloading the men's hard drives, changing their passwords and stealing their files while protecting his own collection of more than 110,000 images and videos with a double-layer encryption system, according to the government.

"No bar was too low for him, no conduct too evil, no girl too young. He stalked, he blackmailed, he terrorized. Some girls cut themselves because of him, some attempted suicide and at least one may have actually ended her life," Russo wrote of Berenson.

Berenson, the most tech-savvy of the nearly 30 men charged in the scheme, compiled personal information about some of his victims, including their parents' and friends' contact information and photos of the girls' houses, according to the memo. In one instance, after a 14-year-old girl tried to end contact with Berenson, he threatened to "tell everyone her father was molesting her" and release sexual videos Berenson had made of the girl, the memo says.

April Russo
Assistant U.S. attorney

In 2010 or 2011, Berenson and a group of six to eight men began targeting girls on a specific webcam site, court records say. The men, who all posed online as teenagers, established an online "base" where they could strategize and divvy up roles for each member: "Hunters" were in charge of finding kids on monitored websites and tricking them into coming to unmonitored chat rooms, where "talkers," such as Berenson, would take over, court records say.

Talkers were responsible for grooming girls, often over the course of weeks, and eventually enticing them into performing sex acts that the men recorded. If a girl resisted, a "looper" would play a previously recorded video of another victim and pretend to be that girl, garnering compliments from the group who would ignore the target until she engaged in the same activity, according to the records.

The original group of men disbanded after 10 months, largely because Berenson "thrived on blackmail and he widely distributed the images and videos he made," causing a division in the group, the records say. Berenson — who continued exploiting girls, alone and in concert with other men — also pitted girls against each other in a game he devised, giving them points for taking off items of clothing and engaging in sexual activity, according to court records.

After an investigation that began in 2015, FBI agents and members of the Seattle Police Department's Internet Crimes Against Children unit showed up at Berenson's parents' Shoreline house in May 2017, where they executed a search warrant and took Berenson in for questioning, The Seattle Times reported at the time. He was initially charged in King County Superior Court with first-degree possession of depictions of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct.

Then in August 2017, federal prosecutors in Michigan — who were prosecuting at least one of Berenson's co-conspirators — charged Berenson with 10 criminal counts, including engaging in a child-exploitation enterprise, coercing and enticing minors to engage in sexually explicit conduct, and charges related to the production and viewing of pornographic images of children, court records show.

Berenson pleaded guilty to a single count of engaging in a child-exploitation enterprise in June.

Rep. Matt Shea Doesn't Deserve a Place in the Republican Party

The Seattle Times Editorial Board

Washington Republicans should reflect on the old saying that a person is known by the company he keeps. State Rep. Matt Shea has kept some very bad company. If the House GOP caucus doesn't disavow him, it becomes party to the reprehensible views Shea and his friends espouse.

Shea, a Spokane Valley Republican, participated in group text messages among right-wing activists in 2017, which were recently published by The Guardian.

The group was developing plans to respond to anticipated liberal protests that they thought could become an "Antifa revolt."

Shea's friends' texts were abhorrent, advocating violence and intimidation against liberal activists, referring to a specific woman, in particular.

"Fist full of hair, and face slam, to a Jersey barrier. Treat em like communist revolutionaries. Then shave her bald with a K-Bar USMC field knife," one of Shea's text-friends wrote. (We are not repeating some of the more disturbing comments.)

"When we locate antifa members we can confront their parents their workplaces their landlords. We can hit them in there [sic] safe spaces. ... This should become a Pure psyops operation ... If we can catch a few of them alone and work him over a little bit," wrote another over three messages.

Shea didn't personally advocate violence, but he also didn't condemn it. In fact, he offered to help the cause by conducting background checks on suspected enemies. "What BG checks need to be done. Give me the list," he wrote.

A sitting state lawmaker keeps close company with the violent fringe of the conservative movement. Is that the company that the rest of Washington's Republicans want to keep?

At a minimum, House Minority Leader J.T. Wilcox and the rest of the GOP leadership should kick Shea out of the House Republican caucus and issue a statement strongly condemning Shea's offer to conduct background checks against political opponents that his chat-room buddies wanted to attack and brutalize. Washington state should not have someone like Shea even appear to condone such activity.

This can't even be excused as a single lapse of judgment on Shea's part. He has a history of engaging with radical conservative movements. He conducted "fact-finding" visits to Nevada and Oregon during standoffs against the federal government by the Bundy family, including the occupation of the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge in Oregon.

Wilcox did take a hard line with Shea's friends when he spoke to us on Wednesday.

"I will absolutely repeat my condemnation, in the strongest possible terms, of that kind of language, imagery and any kind of threat of political violence. We're at a place in our country where — we're just a powder keg. And we should be denouncing that when it happens," he said.

Yet when it comes to Shea, Wilcox disappointingly is not ready to do more than talk. Although Wilcox has taken action against others for outrageous behavior, Shea's offer to do background checks for this ill-intended group does not rise to that level, Wilcox said.

"I've proven that I will deal with issues inside the caucus. And I have explained what some of those issues were, and whenever we have things that reach those levels, I am not afraid to take action," he said.

Yet Shea remains part of the caucus, brother to every other Republican in the House and in Washington. Judge them by the company they keep.

Cleaning Up for Spring, Both Outdoors and Offline

Spring cleaning is a uniquely satisfying experience. There's nothing quite like watching the trees explode into green as you clear up the space around you, knowing that your life and personal surroundings are improving as the weather brightens.

This week offers a number of ways to step out, step up and turn away from the distractions as we enter this season of growth and delight.

First, downtown enthusiasts are hosting a multi-weekend "Downtown Centralia Spring Cleanup" this Sunday, and both days of next weekend, from noon to 5 p.m. each day.

By Brian Mittge

Folks are invited to come downtown to help clean up sidewalks and storefronts for spring.

"If you have a few hours, bring a pair of gloves and join our volunteers to scrape cracks, pull weeds, pick up debris, and get the sidewalks ready for pressure washing. Following our cleaning, our beautiful downtown flower baskets will be hung the week before Mother's Day," the Centralia Downtown Association said about the event.

It's a way to show pride in our community and to make our town shine for visitors.

In the same way, former long-time downtown Centralia business operator Steve Kopa has been leading a series of trash pickup activities around the area. He'll be at it again with his merry band of de-trashifiers this morning. They're meeting at Fiddler's Coffee at 8:30 a.m. with free coffee for volunteers, then moving to meet up at the Exit 81 Park n Ride at 9 a.m. before embarking to clean up at both Centralia exits.

"We pick up litter and debris at our main entrances to our city," he said in a Facebook post inviting any and all to join the grassroots civic activism. "It's great exercise and gratifying to give back to your own community."

Volunteers should wear good boots and bring gloves. Kopa's group will provide pinchers and bags.

I'm involved with several other spring activities this week at the Seminary Hill Natural Area. Normally we do our cleanup on Earth Day, but this year our Friends group that organizes those events (full disclosure: I serve as president of that group) decided to change up the order a little.

Instead, the year of activities on the hill will kick off Tuesday, April 30 with a dedication/celebration that marks the living history of the energy that saved the hill as the city's first natural area. Thanks to a partnership with the state Military Department, the hill has a new set of historical and interpretive markers at the main hiking entrance to the natural area, which we'll be dedicating at 5 p.m. Tuesday. We'll have cupcakes and goodies before setting out on our annual Wildflower Walk at 6 p.m., led by Centralia College naturalist Lisa Carlson.

And next Saturday, May 4, we'll have our own spring cleanup at Seminary Hill, from 10 a.m. to noon. As with the roadside cleanup, wear good shoes and bring gloves. We'll have tools, or you can bring your own.

It's a pleasure to work together to clean up our city, from the freeway to the forest.

Spring is always gorgeous, but it looks and feels even better when you get your hands dirty.

It's Screen-Free Week

And as springtime unfurls, there is a national movement to encourage us to step out and enjoy life — it's called Screen-Free Week. (It was once known as National TV Turn-Off Week, but then we all started carrying little TV's around in our pockets, so they expanded the name and mission.)

The idea is that we would all intentionally tune in to life and the real world by intentionally turning off the screens on our walls and pockets. You can still use your computer for work and essential communications, of course, but the goal is to re-tune your life for the next seven days to live without social media, TV watching, video games and other screen-based activities.

This isn't to say that screens, television or the internet is bad. In fact, this event has its own useful website, www.screenfree.org, with ideas on activities and how to get your kids used to the idea.

The idea is that, as with spring cleaning, by pulling ourselves out of our digital habits for a week, we can better connect with each other and our surroundings on a personal and physical level.

After seven days of "digital detox," we and our children can choose to dial back in to the level of screened life that truly serves our needs, rather than indulging our old habits.

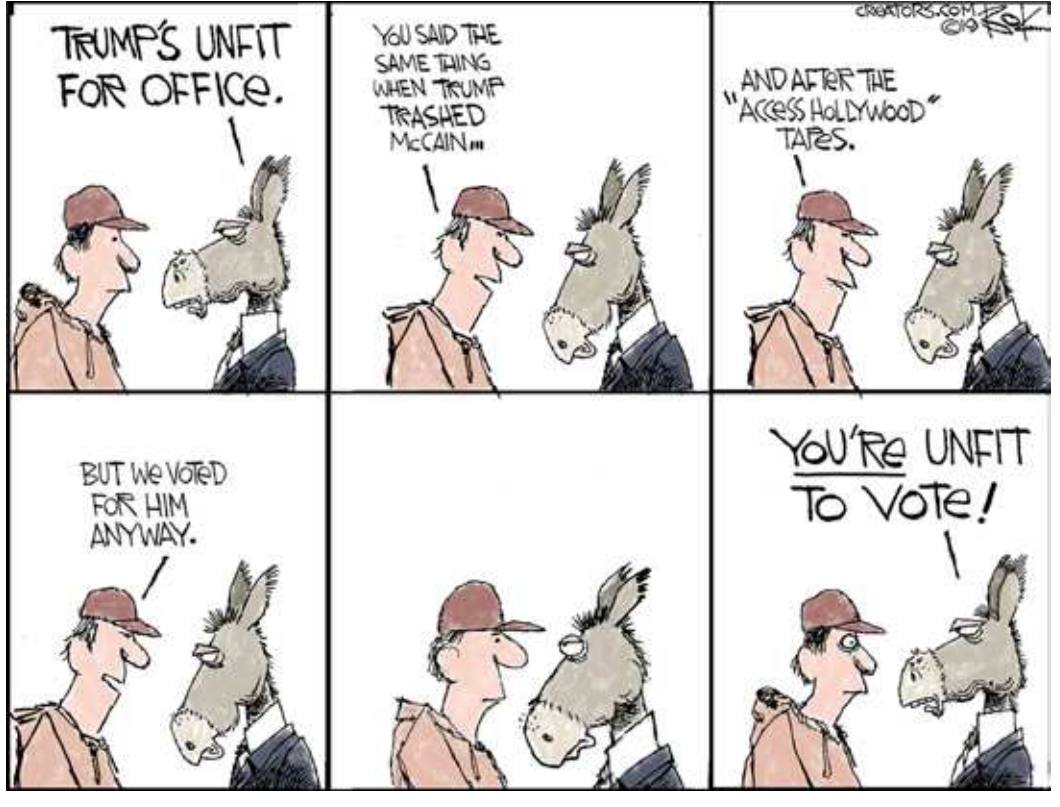

Real life beats the digital version. Spring is proof of that.

As the leaves emerge on the trees, I'd encourage you to find a way to step into screen-free life and spring cleaning to improve your own life and our community.

You'll be glad you did.

Keep Politicians Locked Away

My wife went to Olympia to lobby and talk with politicians. While there she learned that a bill has been drawn up that would release all of the mental patients out of the mental hospitals, including Western State Hospital in Lakewood.

I think that is just terrible letting all those politicians back on the street.

Thanks From Chehalis School District During Transition

The Chehalis School District would like to give a big thank you to everyone who helped us this past Saturday to unpack the moving boxes at the new Orin C. Smith School location.

We have received tremendous support from our local community, and the move to our new location is going smoothly thanks to all of you! We look forward to our first day of school on May 1, and we plan to be fully moved in because of the hard work of our staff and our volunteers. Again, thank you!

Deputy DeRosier Remembered as Courageous, Loyal 'Boy Wonder'

By Alex Bruell

The Daily News

Cowlitz County Sheriff's deputy Justin DeRosier was remembered Wednesday as a loyal and courageous lawman who "had a heart the size of a mountain" at a funeral service in the University of Portland's Chiles Center that attracted thousands of law enforcement officers.

DeRosier was honored at a two-hour service after an hour-long funeral procession that brought his body on a winding path through Longview and Kelso and ended with funerary pomp, motorcycles, bagpipers and thousands of uniformed personnel on the University of Portland campus.

The Chiles Center, which holds nearly 5,000 people, was nearly full.

Brett Myers, Whitman County sheriff, spoke first during the ceremony. DeRosier began his career in law enforcement at the Whitman County Sheriff's Office.

Myers quoted the saying "Heroes are ordinary people who do extraordinary things."

"I would take exception," Myers said. "Justin was anything but ordinary. Justin was an extraordinary person who did extraordinary things."

DeRosier was the kind of guy "everybody liked" and had a work ethic second to none, Myers said, relating that he often called DeRosier "Boy Wonder."

"He had qualities you can't train," Myers said. "(They were) almost heaven-sent."

"Justin did everything right that night," Myers said of the night of April 13, when he died of a gunshot wound during a blocking vehicle call in Kalama. "But heaven called for that Boy Wonder."

Woodland Police Chief Jim Kelly joked that after knowing DeRosier nearly his entire life, he wanted to convince him to leave the sheriff's office for Woodland PD.

"Few deputies or officers ... would sign in (over the radio) with the enthusiasm of Justin," Kelly said.

When he learned DeRosier had been shot, "I realized Cowlitz County had lost one of the greatest officers I have ever known," Kelly said, adding

Hal Bernton / The Seattle Times

A memorial of flowers and flags honors slain Deputy Justin DeRosier at the pulloff on a rural road in Cowlitz County. DeRosier was mortally wounded after he stopped to check on a motor home parked at this spot.

"Rest well my son."

Cowlitz County Under-sheriff Darren Ullmann said DeRosier "never thought twice" about facing the danger.

"Justin's destiny (was): To make s--- happen as loudly as possible," Ullmann laughed. "He had a heart the size of a mountain and an insatiable appetite for knowledge."

And "because of him, we know it's OK to hug and cry while in uniform," Ullmann said. "We really need more Justin DeRosiers, not only as cops but as friends."

Multiple speakers said they believed that DeRosier, 29, wouldn't have hesitated to go into law enforcement even had he known he would be die in the line of duty just five years after he graduated from the police academy.

The procession into the university began with dozens of police motorcycles, followed by the Seattle Police Pipes & Drums and Portland Police Highland guard performing on drums and bagpipes to lead the rest of the group in.

Hundreds, if not more than a thousand uniformed personnel lined the route, arms raised as they stood stoically. Deputies from the Cowlitz County sheriff's office overlooked the transfer of DeRosier's casket to the ceremony.

Personnel came from Washington and Oregon sheriffs' offices and police departments, EMS and firefighting agencies. Even Homeland Security was present.

A Pierce County sheriff's deputy who only gave his first name — Bob — said it was an honor to be there representing another agency.

"It's a fallen brother, killed in the line of duty ... I think it's an honor to do this. Come out and show support."

Two crossed firefighter ladders on the route of the procession displayed the same flag used in the 2011 memorial service held at the Chiles center for Rainier Police Chief Ralph Painter, who was shot in the line of duty that January.

The "crossed ladders" tradition is a symbolic way of honoring the fallen, said Vancouver Fire Department Captain Perry LeDoux.

"It's difficult, because you know the cost that is associated with this," LeDoux said. "Whether it be a loss in either law enforcement, or fire service, it hurts no matter what. We're all partners. ... We all know the underlying reason why we're here, and that kind of hurts, but it's good to support and honor Justin and his family. That's what we want them mostly to see. That's the reason why we're here, is to show them how much care for him and to know that they're not alone."

It's a demonstration of support for DeRosier and for fellow first responders, LeDoux said.

"We're all in the same mission. Any day could be our last day, and we see it. It's a fairly tight bond. We're all looking out for each other. ... If we have an issue, they're there for us."

"We're together in the streets, and we grieve together," Longview fire Lt. Scott Kerker added. "For a lot of the guys who work in the same jurisdiction or area, it's a first-name basis. You see them on EMS calls. They have a problem, we're there for them and vice-versa."

Amazon Earns Record Profit, Vows to Shift to One-Day Delivery for Prime Members

By Benjamin Romano

The Seattle Times

In its relentless bid to maintain a lead in online commerce, Amazon said Thursday it will shift to one-day shipping as the standard delivery speed for members of its Prime subscription program.

The company currently offers two-day shipping standard as part of the $119-a-year Prime subscription, which also includes media and shopping discounts. The Seattle-based commerce giant intends to spend $800 million in the current quarter to deliver twice as fast.

"We think that that will open up a lot of potential purchases, and open up convenience to those (Prime) customers," Amazon chief financial officer Brian Olsavsky said.

The announcement came after Amazon reported a record first-quarter profit of $3.6 billion, or $7.09 a share, rocketing past analyst expectations. Net sales for the first three months of 2019 rose 17% from the year-earlier period to $59.7 billion, at the high end of the company's revenue guidance and in line with analyst expectations.

Olsavsky said the outsize profit in the quarter was a result of operating efficiencies and slower cost growth in Amazon's network of warehouses and logistics operations, employment and infrastructure investment. Spending growth in those areas had declined significantly in 2018 from the previous two years, when Amazon built up capacity. That decline continued through the beginning of this year.

"We probably overestimated a bit how much we would spend and hire in the first quarter of the year," Olsavsky said. He added that the company expects to increase spending to build

Ellen M. Banner / The Seattle Times

Amazon reported a bigger-than-expected surge in quarterly profit, driven by its cloud-computing services.

out warehouse and logistics capacity in the future for initiatives such as the move to standard one-day shipping.

"But right now, we're on a nice path where we're getting the most out of the capacity we have," he said.

The one-day shipping program — which will expand in selection and geographic availability over the course of the year — puts more daylight between Amazon and its biggest online retail rivals. Walmart, for example, offers free two-day shipping on orders of $35 or more.

But the greater impact could land on the physical retailers that have struggled most with the shift to online commerce. The move could win Amazon more of the purchases that people might make at a nearby store when they can't wait for two-day shipping or don't want to pay extra for one of Amazon's faster shipping offers, helping accelerate growth in its core North American retail business.

"I think it's worse for the mall," said Tom Forte, managing director at brokerage D.A. Davidson.

That said, there continue to be large product categories where Amazon is not an effective competitor, no matter how fast it can deliver the goods, he said.

"Being able to get an unfashionable piece of women's clothing one day faster will not be the death knell for a physical store retailer who sells fashionable women's clothes," Forte said.

Moreover, the current two-day shipping from Amazon doesn't always live up to expect-tations. "The reality is, it's a broken promise many times over," he said.

Olsavsky said Amazon will use its third-party logistics vendors, such as FedEx, UPS and the U.S. Postal Service, as well as its own growing delivery services in the shift to one-day delivery.

The company said it expects sales to grow in the current quarter by 13% to 20%, reaching $59.5 billion to $63.5 billion.

Olsavsky said Amazon's decision not to build a major office in New York City will not have a meaningful effect on its capital spending this year. Spending on Amazon's so-called HQ2 expansion, which is going forward in Virginia, is yet to come.

"A lot of that is going to be in future years," he said. "We're just getting going with planning and lining up temporary office space for the most part in 2019."

Amazon's cash-gushing cloud-computing business brought in $7.7 billion in revenue, up 42% year-over-year, excluding foreign-exchange impacts. It generated more than half of Amazon's $4.4 billion operating income while accounting for only 13% of the company's net sales.

Amazon's "other" business segment, which primarily includes advertising — a closely watched source of growth and profit margin for the company — grew at its slowest rate in the last six quarters. Revenue from other businesses was $2.7 billion, up 36%.

Olsavsky said accounting changes mask what's really going on with the advertising business. While it appears to be slowing on a reported basis, "Advertising is actually growing faster than this," he said.

Shipping costs continue to outpace revenue growth, amounting to $7.3 billion in the first quarter, up 21%.

Sales in Amazon's fleet of physical stores, including Whole Foods Markets, grew just 1%, to $4.3 billion. There again, Olsavsky said Amazon's revenue recognition practices mask stronger growth at Whole Foods: Online orders for goods from Whole Foods don't count toward physical store revenue.

Counting those orders, physical store sales growth would have been closer to 6% in the quarter, Olsavsky said.

The company reported 630,600 full- and part-time employees, not including contractors or temporary workers, a 12% increase from a year ago. That's a slight slowdown from 2018, when the year-over-year employment growth rate was 14%, but Olsavsky sees hiring accelerating again.

Phyllis Zumbuhl

1928 ~ 2019

Phyllis Zumbuhl, 90, passed away Easter Sunday, April 21, 2019, while walking to church with her son, Billy. Phyllis was born Oct. 18, 1928, to John and Violet Girard in Nallpee, Wash.

Phyllis married Robert Zumbuhl Aug. 23, 1947, and together they had seven children while settling into their home in Frances, Wash.

She is survived by her two sons, Gerald (Theresa) Zumbuhl and William "Billy" Zumbuhl; grandchildren, Scott Granger, Heather Granger, Jason Pickett, Jennifer Zumbuhl, Amy (Nate) Smith, Bret Zumbuhl, Jake (Jamie) Zumbuhl and Elizabeth "Biz" (Ben) Schremp; and several great-grandchildren, Melanie Hanson, Chase Fuller, Megan Zumbuhl, Railey Smith, Max Smith, Romie Zumbuhl, George Zumbuhl and Gracie Schremp.

Phyllis was preceded in death by her husband, Robert; three children, who passed away at birth; son, Bradley (Kathleen); daughter, Donelda "Donna" (Alan) Pickett; and her brother, Wesley Girard; in addition to her parents.

Phyllis loved seeing her family and attending church. She loved all types of animals, especially dogs and birds, but particularly hated snakes. Phyllis and Robert were well known for their large, community Easter egg hunts, which people fondly remember to this day.

A celebration of life will be held May 5, 2019, at 1 p.m., at the Lebam Community Church. There will be a reception following the service. Arrangements are in care of Stoller's Mortuary in Raymond, Wash. You may visit www.StollersMortuary.com to leave condolences for the family.

Darlene Dafeo

Jan. 20, 1944 ~ April 18, 2019

Darlene Anita Dafeo, longtime resident of Tenino, Wash., passed away April 18, 2019, surrounded by her family. She was the second of three children. Darlene was born Jan. 20, 1944, to Don and Bernadine Dafeo of Priest River, Idaho. The family lived throughout Idaho, Colorado and Washington in her childhood, eventually settling in the Rochester area.

She graduated second in her class from Rochester High School in 1962, where she met and married Terry Davis. They would soon after have two daughters, Lori and Carol. Darlene was a stay-at-home mom for many years, but after a time, she would begin working as a legal secretary. At 38 years of age, Darlene decided to go to college and earned a bachelor of science degree from Evergreen State College in 1985. Shortly afterwards, she obtained her master's degree in psychology from Saint Martin's University. Darlene would go on to dedicate more than 20 years working at Lewis County Mental Health.

Darlene was bright and creative, always trying out different hobbies and interests. She loved to decorate her house and her garden, forever rearranging and perfecting both. Throughout the years, she dabbled in writing, photography, sewing, doll collecting and antiques. All through her life, she was an avid reader, especially appreciating classic and historical books, stories and movies. Darlene enjoyed traveling the Pacific Northwest and loved the Oregon and Washington coastline most of all. She was a fun-loving woman, goofy at times, who never lost her sense of humor, even in her years-long battle with Alzheimer's disease.

Above all, Darlene loved her family, brothers, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren deeply. She is survived by her brother, Dave Dafeo; and sister-in-law, Ginger; daughter, Lori Lencioni; and son-in-law, Robert Lencioni; daughter, Carol Crum; four grandchildren; three step-grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

An open house celebration of life will be held Sunday, May 5, 2019, from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., at The Vault, 225 Sussex Ave. W, Tenino, WA 98589. In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorial donations be made to Providence Sound Homecare and Hospice. # Legislature's Democrats Announce Tentative Deal on New State Budget

By Joseph O'Sullivan

The Seattle Times

Democratic budget writers for the Washington House and Senate on Thursday afternoon announced that they had reached a tentative deal on a new two-year state operating budget.

The announcement, made in a news statement, didn't release any details on the deal — and indicated some final work must still be done to complete it.

"We have reached a tentative budget agreement between the two chambers and look forward to finishing our work on a final budget by the end of the legislative session on Sunday," reads the joint statement by Sen. Christine Rolfe of Bainbridge Island and Rep. Timm Ormsby of Spokane.

Lawmakers were still discussing proposals to raise the cap on how much money school districts could collect through local property-tax levies, according to House Majority Leader Pat Sullivan, D-Covington.

Budget writers anticipate releasing the budget on Saturday. As in past years, that would give little time for the public — or even lawmakers — to review the details.

Legislative staff were working quickly to ready the budget, according to Sullivan, with the hope of making it available for 24 hours or more before final votes.

That would be a marginal improvement over 2017's final budget, which was made public less than 24 hours before being signed by Gov. Jay Inslee.

Democratic lawmakers, who have comfortable majorities this year in the state House and Senate, have faced hard decisions about how much money to raise through taxes — or what spending they should skip.

Without any new taxes, legislators are expected to have nearly $50.6 billion to fund the new budget. That amounts to a nearly 16% increase from the existing budget when Inslee first signed off on it in June 2017.

But Democratic leaders have said new revenue is necessary to adequately fund government. They cite the costs of Washington's recent court-ordered K-12 schools funding plan and a mental-health system in need of overhaul.

Proposed budgets this year by House Democrats, Senate Democrats and Inslee each included a plan to change the state real-estate excise tax (REET), which is paid by those selling homes, from a flat 1.28% to a graduated rate.

The idea is that people with less-expensive homes would get a lower rate, and people with pricier homes would pay a higher share. Democrats have called it a way to raise new revenue while also making the tax system more progressive.

"I think that's likely," said Sullivan earlier in the week, when asked about the REET in a final deal. But, "I think we're still working through the details on that as well."

Sullivan said a final budget deal would wind up somewhere in between the Senate's proposal of about $52 billion over two years and the House proposal of $52.6 billion.

GOP Rep. Drew Stokesbary, of Auburn, argued that recent growth in tax collections should translate into a legislative session that finishes on time and without new taxes.

"We could write a budget that funds all of our priorities without raising taxes," said Stokesbary, the ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee.

Stokesbary called the change to the REET "poor tax policy" and said it might place a burden on sellers of multifamily housing units right as the state experiences a housing-affordability crisis.

House Democrats and Inslee also introduced different versions of a new tax on capital gains and increases in the business-and-occupation tax, as well as ending some tax breaks.

One of those business-and-occupation tax proposals was essentially offered up by Microsoft.

House Bill 2158 would among other things apply a surcharge to a handful of Washington's biggest tech companies. That money would be used to make college and apprenticeships more affordable, according to Rep. Drew Hansen, D-Bainbridge Island, sponsor of the bill.

"It's not every day that you have a revenue proposal presented to you gift-wrapped on a silver platter, with support from one of the state's largest companies," said Hansen.

A capital-gains proposal has always faced an uncertain fate in the Senate, where three of the chamber's 28 Democrats late last year said they opposed the governor's version.

Conservatives have argued that a capital-gains tax is unconstitutional, meaning it would almost immediately face a court challenge.

A bill to raise the cap on local levies that school districts can propose has been considered another key point in negotiations.

It comes after local school districts say they have struggled to adjust after the Legislature's 2017 K-12 school funding plan, under which the state increased its share of funding for basic-education costs.

School districts say they need authority to raise local property-tax levies in order to be properly funded.

Sen. Reuven Carlyle, D-Seattle, said he didn't want to vote on a state budget that raised taxes and still come home to face layoffs in Seattle Public Schools.

"At the end of the day," said Carlyle, "I'm not going home with serious cuts to the district."

Judge Blocks Trump Abortion Rule That Foes Called 'an Outrageous Attack on Patients'

By Ryan Blethen

The Seattle Times

A federal judge in Yakima on Thursday blocked new Trump administration rules that could cut off federal funding for health-care providers who refer patients for an abortion.

The planned changes to the Title X family planning program, which was created in 1970 and serves 4 million patients nationwide each year, could affect the health care of tens of thousands of Washington women. The new rules were due to take effect May 3.

U.S. District Judge Stanley Bastian in Yakima granted the preliminary injunction in cases brought by the state and abortion-rights groups, the Washington attorney general's office said.

As the state's attorneys made their arguments in Yakima, U.S. Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., visited a Planned Parenthood health center in Seattle's Central District to meet with leaders of the organization and hear from women who use services funded through Title X.

"This is about women making the right decisions for themselves, for their health care, so they can be capable of doing what they need to do, whether that is going to school, having a family later, getting their house in order if that is what they need to do," Murray told the women.

Thursday's ruling came two days after a federal judge in Oregon, hearing a separate challenge by 20 states, said he intended to at least partially block the rules. At the hearing, U.S. District Judge Michael McShane said, "At the heart of these rules is an arrogant assumption that the government is better suited to direct women's health care than their providers."

The rule change was issued by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in February. Ferguson sued the Trump administration that same month.

The lawsuits said the administration's plan was a transparent attack on Planned Parenthood and would curb access to care such as contraception and breast-and cervical-cancer screening for millions of low-income people.

"All over the country, there are Title X providers looking at their patient schedules and wondering what they were going to do. Now we know that everyone can continue to do their care as they have been doing for the past 50 years," said Clare Coleman, president of the National Family Planning & Reproductive Health Association. Arguments in that organization's separate lawsuit were also heard in Yakima on Thursday.

Judge Bastian made his ruling from the bench and said he would issue a written opinion early next week, Coleman said.

In addition to banning abortion referrals by taxpayer-funded clinics, the changes would prevent clinics and programs that use federal money from sharing facilities with abortion providers — which critics said would force many to find new locations, undergo expensive remodels or shut down.

About 91,000 women in Washington state use health care funded through the Title X family planning program. A few of them spoke at the Planned Parenthood clinic in the Central District on Thursday.

Cindy Figueroa, who is from Yakima, said she began going to Planned Parenthood when she was a student at Central Washington University. Because she went in for regular checkups, the clinic was able to diagnose her cancer while the disease was in its early stages. "Planned Parenthood saved my life," Figueroa said. "Literally."

For University of Washington student BreAnna Girdy, the Planned Parenthood location in the University District means she doesn't have to drive to Mount Vernon, her hometown, to see a doctor. Girdy said she has insurance through Medicaid — called Apple Health in this state — which limits the clinics she can use.

"There really is nowhere for me to go," she said. "Planned Parenthood is constantly giving me access to not only reproductive health but access to other health services as well."

Murray said she would take the women's stories back to Washington, D.C., and share them with lawmakers who are trying to curtail what clinics can offer women seeking health care.

Jennifer Allen, CEO of Planned Parenthood Votes Northwest and Hawaii — an independent organization that lobbies for Planned Parenthood — sat next to Murray and took in the stories told by Girdy, Figueroa and Amberly Riegler. Allen spoke about the impact the reduced funding would have for women, not only in Washington state but across the country.

"The restrictions that the Trump administration is trying to put on that program with this gag rule are outrageous," she said. "They are an outrageous attack on patients and on providers who are being told that they should withhold information from their patients. That is crazy. We have to fight back against it."

Abortion is a legal medical procedure, but federal laws prohibit the use of taxpayer funds to pay for abortions except in cases of rape, incest, or to save the life of the woman. Religious conservatives and abortion opponents have long complained that Title X has been used to indirectly subsidize abortion providers.

Services funded by Title X are mostly used by low-income patients. Planned Parenthood works with about 40% of those patients nationwide. The grant program costs taxpayers about $260 million a year.

In 2017, 14,000 patients across Washington state received federally funded services at 85 clinics, many of them operated by Planned Parenthood.

The U.S. abortion rate has dropped significantly, from about 29 per 1,000 women of reproductive age in 1980 to about 15 per 1,000 in 2014. Although abortion remains politically divisive, polls show most Americans do not want the Supreme Court to overturn Roe v. Wade, the 1973 ruling that legalized abortion nationwide.

Attorney General Bob Ferguson's lawsuit said Trump's policy violates the Affordable Care Act, which protects providers and patients from government interference in the health-care relationship, and also violates a federal law that requires doctors to provide information about abortion and prenatal care to patients in an unbiased manner.

It also violates the Administrative Procedures Act by contradicting Title X regulations without sufficient justification, and it violates doctors' right to free speech and women's right to an abortion under Roe v. Wade, the lawsuit alleged.

Pursuit Ends in Tacoma When Suspect's Car Crashes, Rolls Over and Catches Fire on SR 509

By Stacia Glenn

The News Tribune

A man driving erratically led troopers on a high-speed chase from DuPont to Tacoma early Friday before his car rolled over and caught fire on state Route 509, according to the Washington State Patrol.

The pursuit started about 1:30 a.m. on northbound Interstate 5 near Mounts Road after a trooper tried to stop the driver.

Instead of pulling to the side of the road, the man sped off.

Troopers temporarily ended the chase after the man gained speed through a construction zone.

Tacoma police put down spike strips near South 56th Street, which flattened the man's tires.

He exited at Interstate 705 and drove onto SR 509 before his car crashed into a pole, rolled over and caught fire near Taylor Way.

Troopers said the chase reached speeds up to 80 mph.

The driver, who also had a federal warrant for his arrest, was taken to Tacoma General Hospital to be treated for minor injuries.

He is expected to be booked into Pierce County Jail after he is released.

Kelso Police Warn of Sophisticated Scammer Posing as a Cop

By Alex Bruell

The Daily News

A fraudulent caller identifying himself as Kelso police's Sgt. Kevin Tate and demanding money has targeted some people in the Kelso area, according to reports the Kelso Police Department said it has received recently from the public.

The scam calls are "very elaborate," a press release from Kelso PD said, in part because they appear to come from the Kelso police phone number (360-423-1270) on caller ID.

People have reported that the scammer claims he has a warrant for someone's arrest, leaves a message and asks for a call back about a "personal matter." He also lists personal information about the person receiving the fraudulent call.

That information can come from publicly available social media information and posts, so people should be careful about what they share, especially if their social media accounts aren't private, the release said.

Those who receive similar-sounding calls should not provide any information and should not give them money, credit card information or buy gift cards from the store for the scammer, the release said.

Unless a person falls victim to a scam call by providing payment or information, there is no need to report the call, the release said.

The release concluded: "And remember, Sgt. Tate is not going to call you."

Mobster 'Whitey' Bulger's Official Cause of Death Revealed

Tribune News Service

James "Whitey" Bulger Jr., a cold-blooded mobster who was found dead in a West Virginia prison cell six months ago, died of "blunt force injuries of the head," according to a death certificate obtained Thursday by an NBC affiliate in Boston.

The document states the 89-year-old was assaulted inside his cell, where he was found shortly after 8 a.m. on Oct. 30, 2018. The manner of death was homicide, according to the document.

Although the document provides the first official word on how Bulger died, law enforcement officials previously said his killers struck him with a padlock stuffed inside a sock and then wrapped him in a blanket to try to conceal the attack.

Bulger lived as a fugitive for 16 years and even topped FBI's most-wanted list before he was found living near in Santa Monica, Calif., in 2011. He was convicted two years later and was serving a life sentence for 11 murders, extortion and racketeering schemes that authorities said earned him more than $25 million.

Biden's Nascent Campaign Racks Up Congressional Endorsements

Tribune News Service

Within hours of former Vice President Joseph R. Biden's long-awaited announcement early Thursday that he would wage his third presidential campaign, he had already received endorsements from a raft of members of Congress.

By late morning, nods had come from Sens. Bob Casey Jr. of Pennsylvania and Doug Jones of Alabama, as well as and Rep. Tom Suozzi of New York.

Biden, who represented Delaware in the Senate for more than 30 years, also collected endorsements from the state's entire congressional delegation: Sens. Chris Coons, Thomas R. Carper, and Rep. Lisa Blunt Rochester. The endorsements made reference to decades of friendship and work alongside Biden, who won his first Senate election in 1972.

Carper referred to a relationship that dated to 1982, when he said Biden "first encouraged" him to run for Congress, and was deepened 18 years later when Biden encouraged him to run for the Senate.

"For months, I have encouraged him to seek the highest office in our land and, today, I could not be more proud to endorse my friend Joe as he launches his campaign to be the next President of the United States," he wrote.

'Unlocking American Dream': Bill Proposes to Seal Non-Violent, Weed-Related Federal Crime Records

Tribune News Service

A bipartisan coalition in Congress wants to give a second chance to Americans arrested for nonviolent federal crimes related to possession of marijuana.

Rep. Lisa Blunt Rochester, a liberal Democrat from Delaware, and Rep. Guy Reschenthaler, a conservative Republican from Western Pennsylvania on Monday re-introduced the Clean Slate Act. If passed, the bill would automatically seal the federal criminal records of people arrested for minor federal cannabis offenses.

H.R. 2348 is modeled on a similar first-of-its-kind law enacted by Pennsylvania last year, which allows residents with non-violent misdemeanor convictions to have their records sealed if they have stayed out of trouble for 10 years.

Sri Lanka Says Leader of Easter Bombings Died During Attack

By Shashank Bengali and Munza Mushtaq

Los Angeles Times

Sri Lankan police said Thursday that the alleged leader of the Easter attacks died in the blast at the Shangri-La hotel, one of six hotels and churches targeted in the bombings that left more than 250 people dead.

It was the first official confirmation of the death of Mohammed Zahran, a radical Quran teacher who was pictured in a video of the purported bombers released this week by Islamic State, which claimed responsibility for the blasts.

Zahran was the leader of an offshoot of the Islamist group National Thowheeth Jamaath whose violent speeches, spread in Quran classes and on social media, had been reported to the government by Sri Lankan Muslim groups three years ago.

President Maithripala Sirisena confirmed Zahran's death in a speech in which he said that there were 130 to 140 Sri Lankans with suspected links to Islamic State, some of whom are believed to have traveled to the extremist group's former strongholds in Iraq and Syria.

Police had arrested about 70 of them, Sirisena said, adding, "We will arrest them all very soon."

The island nation off the southern coast of India was on high alert as police combed neighborhoods across the capital, Colombo, and the U.S. Embassy warned Thursday that "terrorist groups continue plotting possible attacks."

Panic has also spread due to the government's botched response, starting with reports that security agencies did not act on intelligence provided by India about a possible terrorist plot against churches. Sirisena was accused of failing to share the intelligence with Prime Minister Ranil Wickremesinghe and his Cabinet due to a political feud, a charge Sirisena has denied.

On Thursday, health of-officials said that they had miscounted the number of dead by more than 100, because so many body parts had arrived at morgues after the attacks that some were tallied more than once.

The defense secretary has resigned on the orders of Sirisena, who has also demanded the police chief leave his post.

Echoes of Big Tobacco Fight in Big Pharma Hearings

By Emily Kopp

CQ-Roll Call

Congress has made curtailing high drug prices a priority this year and has hauled in some of Big Pharma's top executives to prove it.

Committee hearings on drug prices — the House and Senate have held a half dozen this year — have sought accountability from the industry for drug prices that have forced patients into agonizing decisions about how to budget their lives and caused one-in-four diabetics to ration insulin.

A recent study shows the cost of brand-name medicines has increased sharply in the last decade, driven largely by price increases on existing drugs, not new breakthroughs.

The Senate Finance Committee called in the CEOs of seven of the world's largest drug companies to testify in February. Ranking Democrat Ron Wyden of Oregon likened the panel of executives raising their right hands to testify truthfully about a growing public health crisis to the landmark tobacco hearings of the 1990s.

The headline of a New York Times editorial in January read "It's Time for Pharmaceutical Companies to Have Their Tobacco Moment."

"It does look very much guaranteed that something will happen on drug prices. There is too high a critical mass calling for change," said Alex Lawson, executive director of Social Security Works.

But pharmaceutical companies have leveraged the high-profile hearings into an opportunity to muddy the waters.

In their testimony, drugmakers and sympathetic interest groups have pitched policy solutions that seem promising, but would ultimately pad their profits, and possibly drive up prices for patients in the long run.

The risk, advocates say, is losing momentum on weak measures that do not lead to lower prices at the pharmacy counter.

Some experts say it's a well-worn tactic, and harkens to that earlier anti-tobacco fight.

"This strategy of kind of acknowledging the problem and proposing a solution that would actually worsen the problem was pioneered by Big Tobacco in the mid-1980s," said Stanton Glantz, a professor of medicine at the University of California, San Francisco and director of the Center for Tobacco Control Research and Education.

The CEOs of seven companies — AbbVie, AstraZeneca, Bristol-Myers Squibb, Johnson & Johnson, Merck, Pfizer and Sanofi — used the February hearing to pitch Congress on nixing rebates as a solution to high drug prices. (Rebates are the payments drug companies make to pharmacy benefit managers, or PBMs, which manage the drug benefits paid out by insurers.)

"We hope to be a constructive partner in finding solutions," said Pascal Soriot, the CEO of AstraZeneca. "The fact that many patients struggle with out-of-pocket costs despite the discount and rebates we provide stands counter to our mission of improving patient health."

Critics of PBMs, which include pharmaceutical companies but also independent patient advocacy groups and health policy experts, say rebates create a perverse incentive for pharmaceutical companies to increase their prices.

But Wyden followed up with the drugmakers, requesting written testimony on whether, should federal regulators scuttle the rule that allows for rebates, they would lower their prices commensurate to the value of the rebate.

In those written responses, made public this month, the companies hedged, saying that pledging to lower their prices equal to the PBM markup would be premature without knowing how other players would respond to the change.

Drugmakers stand to reap tens of billions of dollars more in revenue from such a change, but when pressed, the companies stopped short of committing to passing along that revenue to hurting patients.

"In case there was any doubt, Big Pharma is not about to start self-policing their pricing practices," Wyden said in a statement. "In order to prevent a cash grab that gives drug makers a windfall and leaves consumers stuck with high prices, Congress must take significant action to end business as usual in the broken drug pricing system."

The drug hearings have served as "a venue to promote industry-friendly priorities, such as measures that put controls on PBMs and other players, but not manufacturers," said Elizabeth Rowley, the director of T1International, a diabetes advocacy group that does not accept funding from the drug industry.

"Patients will keep speaking out until true, long-term solutions are created because our lives depend on it," she added.

Meanwhile, advocates sympathetic to drugmakers have used the committee hearings to pitch measures that reduce out-of-pocket costs for patients, while allowing drug companies to charge the same prices.

The Diabetes Patient Advocacy Coalition, or DPAC, a 501(c)(4) advocacy group that does not disclose its industry donors, said in testimony during a House Energy and Commerce hearing on insulin prices earlier this month that Congress should undo the anti-fraud regulations that prevent some Medicare patients from accessing the coupons and patient assistance programs offered by drugmakers to encourage them to choose pricey brand-name drugs over cheaper generics.

"For the 2.3 million Medicare beneficiaries who use insulin, this is the ultimate betrayal," DPAC President Christel Marchand Aprigliano said.

But experts say there are already avenues for Medicare patients to benefit from these programs, and rolling back those regulations would only encourage fraud and siphon away federal health care spending to drug companies and away from other priorities.

World in Brief

Putin and Kim Meet in Summit Heavy on Pledges but Light on Specifics

Tribune News Service

North Korean leader Kim Jong Un met with Russian President Vladimir Putin for the first time Thursday in a summit filled with gifts, pleasantries and champagne, but with few specifics on how to achieve what both men have said they want — denuclearization of the Korean peninsula.

Kim and Putin met behind closed doors for about two hours in the eastern port city of Vladivostok after brief opening remarks broadcast on Russian state television in which the Cold War allies emphasized their historic ties.

Putin told reporters in a news conference following the talks that he believed North Korea was willing to denuclearize but needed security guarantees ensuring its sovereignty and confidence-building steps along the way.

"If we move step by step with respect for each others' interests, then this goal can be achieved in the final end," Putin said. Kim's "main interests are stability and safety of his country," he added.

Kim's visit to the Russian city less than 100 miles from North Korea's northeast border is his first foray out of his country since his second summit with President Donald Trump, held in Vietnam in February, was abruptly cut short without an agreement. Working-level talks between the U.S. and North Korea have also come to a screeching halt after a year of whirlwind diplomacy over the North's nuclear program.

A Kremlin spokesman had said even before Kim and Putin met that there would be no deal or agreement from the summit, the first meeting between North Korea and Russian heads of state since Kim's father, Kim Jong Il, met with then-President Dmitry Medvedev in 2011.

Analysts said Russia has little to offer by way of direct investment or aid, given the international sanctions placed on North Korea in retaliation for its nuclear and ballistic missile programs. Russia, along with China, has made the case before the United Nations Security Council that those sanctions should be eased in exchange for incremental steps by North Korea to denuclearize.

U.N. reports have accused both Russia and China of helping North Korea dodge sanctions, which severely limit oil imports and block many of the country's key exports, including textiles and seafood.

Trump and his advisers said at the Hanoi summit and in the weeks since that the U.S. will only agree to lift the sanctions after North Korea has fully denuclearized.

Trump Denies Paying North Korea Money to Secure Warmbier Return

Tribune News Service

President Donald Trump denied paying a $2 million medical bill to North Korea in order to secure the June 2017 release of U.S. college student Otto Warmbier.

"No money was paid to North Korea for Otto Warmbier, not two Million Dollars, not anything else," Trump said in a Friday morning tweet.

The Washington Post reported Thursday that Pyongyang presented the U.S. with a $2 million medical bill before allowing Warmbier to be flown to the U.S., where he later died. The main U.S. envoy sent to get Warmbier signed an agreement to pay the invoice, according to two unidentified people cited by the Post.

A person familiar with the matter told Bloomberg News on Thursday that the U.S. rejected North Korea's request for payment before Otto Warmbier's release.

Following his hastily adjourned summit with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in February, Trump said he takes Kim "at his word" that he wasn't aware of North Korea's imprisonment and torture of Warmbier, who died after being detained for more than 17 months.

Federal Lawsuit Filed Against Aberdeen to Stop Homeless Evictions

By Louis Krauss
The Daily World

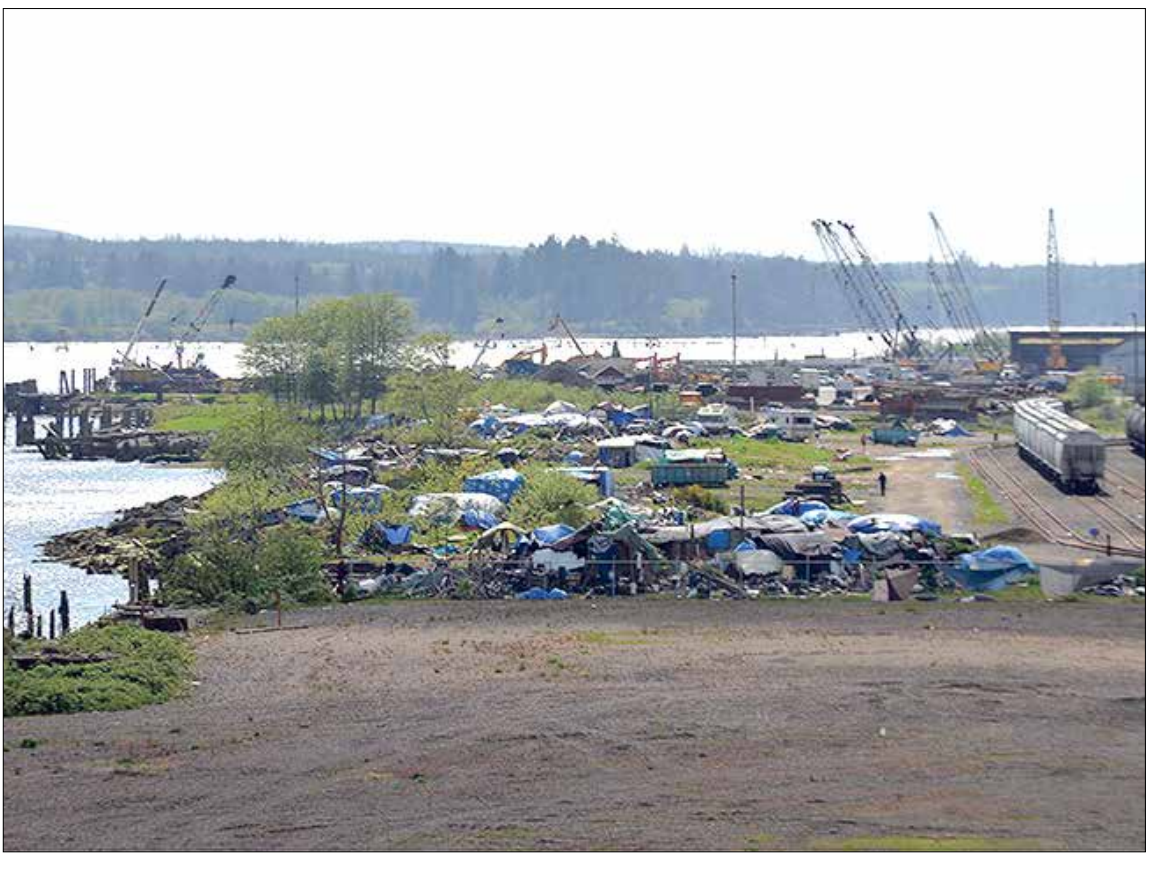

Another federal lawsuit has been filed against the City of Aberdeen over its dealing with the homeless population. This time it's an attempt to stop Mayor Erik Larson's proposal for an ordinance that would clear the city's major homeless encampment along the Chehalis River.

The lawsuit was filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Tacoma, and asks for an injunction to prevent the city from moving the many people living in tents, shacks and vehicles along the river unless alternative shelter is provided for them. It was filed by eight people currently living along the river, along with the Rev. Sarah Monroe and Apryl Boling who were both plaintiffs in an earlier lawsuit to stop the city's permit system for visitors to the homeless camp. They were successful in changing the policy and won court costs.

Mayor Larson declined to comment on the latest lawsuit, simply saying he has "no comment on pending litigation." City Council President Tawni Andrews declined to comment Wednesday afternoon, saying she needed some time to read through the lawsuit first.

The City of Aberdeen owns the property occupied by the homeless camp, which is a thin strip of land between the river and the multiple train tracks near downtown. The city bought it for $295,000 last year with the intention of evicting people off the property, Larson has said. He believes the property is unsafe and unfit for habitation, citing previous accidents with people crossing the train tracks. One woman lost her legs after getting caught under a train.

The ordinance would "prohibit all public access" to the riverfront property, meaning all the people living on it would be forced to leave and not allowed to live there. Larson has refrained from discussing the specifics of how he thinks people would be moved, citing the potential for litigation as part of the reason he doesn't want to discuss it.

The council passed the first reading of the ordinance April 10. Ordinances have a three-step process. This one would take effect immediately on passage. The council voted 10 in favor of the ordinance to clear the camp, one against and one who abstained.

It was scheduled to consider a second reading Wednesday night.

Last fall, 108 people were registered by the city as living down at the city-owned property. The mayor reported that the number of people has been cut in half at a recent public meeting for city leaders, but staff at the homeless assistance group Revival of Grays Harbor say it's still over 100 people there.

This ordinance comes not long after Monroe, Boling and businessman Tim Quigg filed a federal lawsuit in November to stop the city's controversial permit system that prevented anyone from visiting the riverfront property without a permit. The federal judge Robert B. Leighton sided with the homeless advocates, and led to the city throwing out the permit system for less stringent restrictions and 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. visiting hours.

The latest lawsuit requests an injunction to prevent the city from evicting homeless people from the riverfront if the city does pass the ordinance. And it asks for compensatory damages if the city does go through with evictions.

The lawsuit's "prayer for relief" section also asks that several city codes restricting public camping be deemed unconstitutional as applied to the homeless. These include the city's policy that it's unlawful for people to "camp or use camp paraphernalia" in public parks unless authorized, public streets, sidewalks, or other improved public rights-of-way, and in "public owned or maintained parking lots or other publicly owned or maintained areas." The city code also says it's unlawful for people to occupy a vehicle for the purpose of camping while it's parked in the previously mentioned public spaces.

The suit also targets the city's prohibition to place objects in the city's streets or on sidewalks that obstruct "the free use and passage thereof" without obtaining a permit from the city, and that it's the "special duty" of the city's street commissioner and staff to see the street restrictions are "strictly enforced" and to cause the arrest of any person violating them.

In January, the city amended the city code in an attempt to better comply with last September's U.S. Court of Appeals decision "Martin v. Boise," in which the courts deemed that Boise's restrictions to public sleeping and camping were unconstitutional in circumstances in which homeless people had nowhere else to go.

The amendment by Aberdeen added some strictness to the public camping restrictions, saying they shall be enforced at all times, but also attempted to comply with the Boise decision by saying the camping restrictions on street right-of-ways will not be enforced when there is no overnight shelter available for those homeless people, and reducing public camping violations from a misdemeanor to a civil infraction.

The city also restricted people living on the streets with an ordinance a year ago that prohibits sitting and lying down on the city's downtown improvement district between 6 a.m. and 11 p.m.

After the April 10 council meeting, Larson asserted that it's not illegal to be homeless in the city, as some suggest, and said there are places homeless people can live, such as city right of ways, sidewalks and other spaces. He didn't respond to questions about the ordinances targeted by the lawsuit that seem to prevent camping in those public spaces.

If the city council accepts the second reading of the ordinance at the Wednesday meeting, which also includes a public hearing on the ordinance, it will only require one more vote at the next meeting May 8 to finalize it.

Vancouver to Hire Leader for Homeless Response

By Patty Hastings
The Columbian

Vancouver is hiring a homeless resource manager to oversee the city's response to homelessness.

This newly created full-time position will be under the direction of the city manager's office and pay between $93,765 and $121,884 annually. It's paid for through the general fund and is a two-year position that could possibly be extended.

According to the job description, the homeless resource manager will lead efforts to combat the impacts of homelessness by working with community partners, stakeholders, members of the public and government officials; adopt plans, strategies and best practices for enhancing homeless response systems; and be the city's policy and technical expert and primary point of contact for the homeless response system.

"It's going to be an amazing opportunity for someone to do all this stuff that's designed to make our community better," said Peggy Sheehan, the city's community development programs manager.

She said the idea for the position and a larger Homeless Assistance Response Team came out of a conference held last year in Long Beach, Calif., about police response to homelessness. The conference discussed how a city's response to homelessness requires more than police officers; it's a multifaceted, multidepartment issue. For now, the homeless resource manager is the only position the city is hiring.

Cities around the country, including Seattle, Portland and Detroit, have hired similar individuals or teams tasked with addressing homelessness, which Sheehan described as a current "best practice."

Sheehan said the city spoke with people about how other cities provide homeless services and reviewed job descriptions for similar positions before creating one specific to Vancouver.

tain a list of capital projects — a list that will certainly include the dam — before any projects can move forward. The capital projects list will be part of the overall comprehensive plan, which is not itself a mandated document.

“The plan itself is not a requirement, but it certainly is a very useful tool,” said district administrator Erik Martin. “We have to have that (capital projects) list to be able to build anything. ... The plan itself is just a very useful tool to look at what the district can do.”

Phase 1 of the creating the plan, currently underway, has been funded with $75,000 from the Flood Authority. That portion is expected to be completed on June 30. The district is planning a stakeholder meeting for April 30 to discuss the plan, which will include city and county representatives, the Washington State Department of Ecology and the district’s advisory committee.

Much of the planning centers on the county’s Community Rating System, a number given by Federal Emergency Management Agency that evaluates floodplain management and can lead to reductions in flood insurance rates of up to 45 percent. The district is following the CRS coordination manual to try to meet FEMA’s outlined prescriptions.

“To maximize the point capability of your planning process, you have to follow a pretty defined scope,” said Kirk Holmes, project manager and a civil engineer with the Pereteet infrastructure consulting firm. “We want to make sure that the plan is developed consistent with that planning process.”

The initial portion of the project is more focused on engaging stakeholders than drawing up blueprints. The next step, which will also likely be funded through the Flood Authority, will outline a clearer vision.

“Right now that includes a lot of public outreach, so that’s kind of what we’re doing with the first phase,” Martin said. “The second phase will include a lot of techni-

One of the things the planning will likely explore is the future of the dam, if and when it’s built. The project, which has been in the works for years, is designed to mitigate some of the flooding that has devastated the area, particularly the Twin Cities, in the past. The facility would be installed near Pe Ell, allowing the river to flow unimpeded the majority of the time, but raising gates to create a temporary reservoir to decrease flooding during severe events.

The dam, which is currently under a state and federal environmental review that will take more than a year, faces many more steps — and likely controversy — before hundreds of millions of dollars are committed to the project years down the road. But if it gets built, it’s still unclear who would operate it, fund maintenance and make decisions about its future. As the project’s sponsor, the Zone District is expected to ask those questions as part of its comprehensive plan.

“Once we have the water retention facility built, who pays for the operating budget?” Edna Fund, a district supervisor. “That could take many forms. It depends on what’s available, what authority we have, what maintenance is needed, what’s the dollar amount. We can’t give an answer to that until we go through all of these steps.”

Meanwhile, district leaders acknowledge they’ll have to think carefully about their work, as the Flood Authority and Office of the Chehalis Basin have longer-established roles doing projects in the basin. But they think there’s still room for the district to maneuver.

“We kind of have to work together and make sure we’re not overlapping anything,” Dillin said. “There are a lot of different groups, but one thing that has been very good is that we all actually do talk to each other.”

Fund, who has a leadership role with all three Chehalis River groups, said the Flood Authority is the boots-on-the-ground, localized body, while the Office of the Chehalis Basin takes a broader view. Leaders will have to “sort out” how the Zone District fits in the picture.

“We’ve tried to find our niche,” Martin added. “This planning process will help the supervisors come to a vision of what the district’s gonna look like going forward.”

need to be careful about their particular entity.”

Commissioners are following a work plan for the look at 911 governance that outlines visits to the elected officials in the Combined User Committee — the Lewis County first response agencies that use the county’s 911 dispatch center. The Phase 1 portion of the plan also includes dialogue with TCOMM and seeking funding from the Washington State Emergency Management Department, presumably for a feasibility study.

The feasibility study will help inform the county — and the various agencies and cities it currently serves — if merging with TCOMM is the best option. But county leaders want to make clear that the input of local leaders comes first. Talking to the front-line agencies, Fund said, will help the county know what questions to ask when it comes time to commission a study.

“People don’t like the word

‘study,’ but that does need to happen,” she said. “I see it as one big team doing this study, so how does this impact the people on the team? I’ll be interested to hear what folks have to say. They may have some more information based on where they live, where they operate.”

The discussion comes after years of tension. Last year, the county and users signed a new interlocal agreement, following complaints from the agencies over service levels and internal upheaval at the 911 center. While the county says conditions have drastically improved, Centralia and Chehalis have nonetheless begun exploring options to split from the county, including a defection to TCOMM. Martin has held continued discussion with the cities on a director-to-director level, but commissioners felt it was important for elected officials to dialogue as the county-wide planning begins.

Steve Mansfield, the county’s emergency management director, said his focus is on maintaining service at the 911 center — which he believes is on the right track — so that future decisions are not made with a sense of urgency over a dysfunctional system.

“I’m extremely encouraged about the effort those folks up there are making,” he said. “I’m encouraged at where we are. It’s not where we want to be, but we’re making progress. ... They’ve done an amazing job this past year, both in the management of the center and the delivery of the service. The questions that need to be asked — is this what’s best for public safety, economics and the most efficient way to utilize our resources?”

Previously, Martin told The Chronicle that user agencies filed 49 inquiries related to the 911 center in 2018, compared to 76 the year before. Dispatchers also worked 36 percent less overtime and spent twice as much time on training exercises, he said.

Still, the county faces the pending challenge of expensive infrastructure replacements, including the radio repeaters necessary to provide connection in the county’s mountainous terrain. The total for the necessary infrastructure project could come to $4 million, Mansfield has said.

It’s unclear how those needs and costs would change if Lewis County was to merge with TCOMM. It’s one of the many questions that will need to be explored going forward.

“The county and cities, what will be our involvement as a group in the governance and operation (of 911)?” Martin said. “What will be the cost, how would we fund it? What level of service are we going to be able to maintain? ... Mostly, when you come right down to it, is it going to meet the requirement we have and the expectation the public has for public safety?”

night, we want them here having a positive impact on our lodging tax dollars."

Municipalities in Washington receive a portion of the taxes collected on overnight stays at hotels and motels within their boundaries. Many, including Centralia, have a standing Lodging Tax Advisory Committee to redistribute those dollars to local nonprofit or government organizations for projects related to local tourism, with the expectation of generating more tax dollars.

Centralia doled out $250,000 in lodging tax funds for 2019, including $133,000 to pay down its own bond debts and repay itself for a loan given in 2018 to the Fox Theatre nonprofit. The Centralia-Chehalis Chamber of Commerce, Centralia Downtown Association, Downtown Centralia Festivals Association and Discover Lewis County also received LTAC grants.

The addition of a large hotel in Centralia also coincides with planned expansion of the NW Sports Hub adjacent to the Centralia Middle School. The Lewis County Public Facilities District recently sold $2 million worth of bonds to help finance projects such as completion of the second level at the current building and the addition of 20,000 square feet for more indoor fields and courts.

Many athletes and their families do stay in Centralia, but some venture north to the Fairfield Inn and Suites in Grand Mound or south to the Best Western Plus or Holiday Inn Express in Chehalis in search of more modern accommodations. The only large chain hotels currently operating in Centralia are the Quality Inn off I-5 exit 82, the Peppermill Inn off exit 81 and a pair of Motel 6 locations.

"We wanted to add another higher-end hotel option," Hill said. "I know that our staff in community development and engineering have worked very hard, I know they've had some challenges and I appreciate the fact they've been diligently working to meet them and get to this point."

Representatives of the planned La Quinta and Centralia staff have worked for many months to iron out unspecified issues prior to the application being submitted. The Centralia City Council has discussed aspects of the project at least a half-dozen times during executive sessions.

Ultimately, Hill said, everyone is very excited to have reached the review stage and is looking forward to continued progress.

Calls to developer Brent Nicholson of Kirkland, Case Design Group of Portland and Baldwin General Contracting of Albany, Oregon, were not returned prior to press time.

Morton-White Pass' Emarey Hampton (14), Kylie Davis (1), and Hailey Brooks (5) exchange high fives at the end of an inning during a Central 2B League softball game on Friday in Napavine.

Timberwolves Sweep Napavine in High-Scoring Twinbill

By The Chronicle

NAPAVINE — Morton-White Pass scored a total of 41 runs here Friday to beat Napavine, 21-18 and 20-13, in a Central 2B League softball doubleheader.

The Tigers led 11-2 after the first inning of Game 1, only to see MWP rally back with a six-run fifth frame, then tie the game in the seventh and win with three runs in the top of the eighth.

"Our kids battled," MWP coach Rob Hazen said. "It wasn't a pretty game, but give credit to Napavine. They put the ball in play, and we had a lot of mental mistakes."

Sydney Brooks went 4-for-6 with a homer and two doubles to pace MWP. Emmalee Hazen was 2-for-3 with a homer and a double, and Shelby Karns went 4-for-5 with a double.

Rae Sisson and Kaiya Larson were both 5-for-6 for Napavine, while Nicole Neumann had four hits and Ada Williams was 2-for-4.

The Timberwolves didn't wait as long in Game 2, scoring 11 runs in the third inning to take a 15-5 lead and holding on from there. Brooks was 3-for-3 with a homer, Emmalee Hazen went 2-for-3 with a homer, Taylor Hazen hit a grand slam and Tayla Pierson added a home run.

"It was better than the first game," Hazen said. "That third inning we broke it open. We finally attacked the ball and played a little better defense."

Jones Lifts Bearcats Past Tigers in Pitchers Duel

SHUTOUT: Brock Jones Strikes Out 12 Batters to Help W.F. West Clinch League Title

By Matt Baide
 mbaide@chronline.com

W.F. West's Brock Jones and Centralia's Benito Valencia each turned in a complete game on the mound, with Jones prevailing to lead the Bearcats to a 3-0 win in an Evergreen 2A Conference baseball game here on Thursday at Wheeler Field in Centralia.

The win secures the EvCo title for the Bearcats, now 11-0 in league games.

Jones allowed four hits, no runs and two walks while striking out 12 batters. He helped his own cause at the plate with a double, a run and a RBI.

"Brock was getting ahead of hitters today and really pounding the strike zone and he's tough when he does that," W.F. West coach Bryan Bullock said. "Defensively with him on the mound, things are pretty good. Offensively, we've got to do a better job of swinging the bats a little bit better."

Lane Douglass added a hit and a run and Leandre Gaines recorded a double and a RBI. Daniel Fagerness also had a base knock for the Bearcats.

Valencia allowed four hits, three earned runs and four walks while striking out five batters.

"I was definitely proud of our pitcher. Benito gave us everything he had and more and he kept them off balance," Centralia coach Rex Ashmore said. "He gave us a chance to win or at least compete and stay in the game and you know, defensively, we still made a couple mistakes that cost us a run or two. Obviously with Brock pitching, that can't happen, we've got to stay tight and not give them anything."

Centralia's Jeremy Wood, Robbie Aldrich and Tyler Milton each tallied a hit and Derek Bearsto hit a double.

The game started on Monday in the rain. Jones hit a double followed by a Gaines double to bring home Jones for a 1-0 lead after one inning, but the game was called after two innings and resumed on Thursday.

W.F. West plated a run in the third to begin the game on Thursday for a 2-0 lead. Jones hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh for an insurance run.

Ashmore was looking for the Tigers to generate a little more offense and maybe a run or two, but Jones was too good on Thursday.

"The problem with high school kids is somebody is throwing that hard, they think they have to swing harder and they don't," Ashmore said. "They've got to find a way to put the bat on the baseball and make contact. We obviously didn't do that and like I said, the kid is tough. He's obviously the best we've seen this year. We've got to make better adjustments and hopefully we'll learn from that moving forward."

Seahawks Trade Down Twice, Pick TCU Defensive Tackle L.J. Collier in First Round of NFL Draft

By Bob Condotta
The Seattle Times

The Seahawks did the expected not just once but twice Thursday, making two trades with their two first-round picks to acquire four more picks in later rounds.

And then they also did what has come to be expected, using the one first-round pick they kept to take a player in TCU defensive tackle L.J. Collier who overcame personal tragedy — the death of his mother to cancer during his freshman year — and a slow start to his college career to emerge as a first-round pick.

“We fell in love with the fact that he had a big chip on his shoulder,” said Seattle coach Pete Carroll of Collier, who said he had 25 people in his graduating class at Munday, Texas High School.

The two trades — the first with the Packers and the second with the Giants — mean that Seattle will have eight total picks in the draft after entering the week with just four, with one pick in the second, one in the third, four in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Seattle’s remaining picks are 37, 92, 114, 118, 124, 132, 142 and 159.

“We feel like we are back in the mix of this draft,” said Seahawks general manager John Schneider.

And the Collier pick means Seattle adds to a defensive line that appeared to be the team’s biggest need entering the draft, something that appeared to grow even more urgent after trading Frank Clark earlier this week.

The 6-foot-2, 283-pounder, whose style of play has often been compared to former Seahawk Michael Bennett, is regarded as a best fit as a five-tech defensive end and had 14.5 sacks in three years at TCU. He played primarily tackle in his first two seasons with TCU before moving to end as a senior when he made a career-high six sacks. Collier said the Seahawks told him he could play either spot, but primarily end with the ability to move inside when needed — as Bennett was used during his Seattle career.

“He’s very flexible and can move around,” Carroll said.

“He’s a lot like Michael Bennett.”

Seattle picked Collier at 29, the selection it got earlier in the week in the Clark deal.

“I’m on cloud nine man,” said Collier, who was holed up for the draft in a hotel room in Frisco, Texas, with 20-30 family members. “It’s a crazy feeling.”

Collier took one of his pre-draft trips to Seattle and said Thursday night, “I had a great visit. It was fun. I knew we hit it off right then and there.”

The Seahawks have often found themselves attracted to players who have shown they can overcome some bumps in the road along the way and Collier fits that bill. He lost his mother, Ruby, to cancer after his freshman season at TCU and saw the field sparingly during his early years there.

Collier said after the draft that “my mother means the world to me” and he feels she is still watching over him.

Seattle had earlier traded its pick at 21 to Green Bay to get the 30th pick and pick up two fourth-round selections — 114 and 118.

Seattle then traded the 30th pick to the Giants and acquired the 37th overall pick as well as Nos. 132 and 142. Seattle also had picks 92, 124 and 159.

It was the eighth straight year Seattle has traded its original first-round pick — the last time Seattle used it was for offensive lineman James Carpenter in 2011 at 25.

It’s also the second straight year Seattle has traded with Green Bay to move down in the first round and acquire more picks.

In 2018 the Seahawks moved down from 18 to 27 to acquire picks in the third and sixth rounds.

The Seahawks had been thought hoping to trade down to acquire more draft capital after entering the draft with what was tied for the fewest picks of any NFL team.

Seattle made the trade with defensive end Montez Sweat — thought to be one of the team’s targets — still on the board.

But getting more picks proved to be more enticing to Seattle and by the time the Seahawks picked he was gone, taken by Washington at 26 after Washington traded with the Colts to move up.

Seattle may also have been swayed to move down by the fact that many of the other top defensive linemen were gone by the time they would have picked.

The draft had been billed as being especially strong on defense, and especially in linemen and the picks bore that out — four of the first seven and five of the first nine and seven of the first 13 selections and nine of the first 17 and of the first 19 were defensive ends or tackles.

Seattle had just four picks entering the week thanks to three trades over the previous 18 months that cost the Seahawks their selections in the second round (Duane Brown), sixth round (Brett Hundley) and seventh (Shalom Luani).

The Seahawks have now made trades to move down during the draft in trades involving picks only 14 times since John Schneider took over as general manager and Pete Carroll as coach in 2010. They have moved up five times.

Atlanta Falcons Trade Up to Make Kaleb McGary the Huskies’ Lone First-Round Pick of 2019 NFL Draft

By Adam Jude
The Seattle Times

Kaleb McGary, the Huskies’ rock of a right tackle the past four years, was selected with the 31st pick of the first round in the NFL draft on Thursday, making him UW’s highest offensive lineman drafted since Lincoln Kennedy went in the first round in 1993.

McGary, 6-feet-7 and 320 pounds out of Fife High School, was the Morris Trophy award winner for 2018 after helping the Huskies win the Pac-12 title for the second time in three years.

McGary got the call from Atlanta’s assistant GM, Scott Pioli, at 8:40 p.m. informing him of that they were trading up to draft him. He then spoke to coach Dan Quinn and team owner Arthur Blank.

An hour later, he had 150 text messages of congratulations.

“Dude, dude ... I don’t even know what to do with myself,” McGary said. “I’m ecstatic, man. I’m so happy. There are no words.”

He then celebrated at his Laurelhurst apartment with his family, his longtime girlfriend, Brianna, and his two agents, Cameron Foster and Collin Roberts, late into the night Thursday.

He started six games for UW as a redshirt freshman in 2015, and then overcame a heart arrhythmia discovered in high school to become one of the most dependable linemen the Huskies have had in recent memory.

McGary started every game at right tackle for the Huskies in 2016, 2017 and 2018, playing virtually every snap over that period.

He is the first UW offensive lineman to be drafted since Senio Kelemete went in the fifth round (to Arizona) in 2012.

The heart arrhythmia is not all McGary has overcome. In January 2018, a fire damaged about half of the McGary family’s house in Fife.

The family had already relocated once, in 2012, after losing their family farm in southwest Washington. Kaleb’s dad, Justin, during the economic recession, saw his shifts as a union longshoreman dwindle, and soon after he was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis.

The family’s resolve would be tested again when Kaleb’s heart issues surfaced during his junior year at Fife High. It took several years and several minor procedures, but Kaleb reported in December 2018 that he hasn’t had any recent issues.

He continues to have perspective through all of these experiences.

“I’ve been really very fortunate,” he said. “The fire: Yeah, a lot of really important stuff went up in the fire, but nothing that lived or breathed did. You can always replace that other stuff. My heart: Yeah, it was a big pain, and certainly a big scare. But in the end, it turned out OK. It was a simple couple procedures, and I was right back at it. I would say, never losing sight of what’s important — very, very stubborn determination and persistence.

“And not being afraid. Not being afraid to give it what you got. I’ve only got one shot at this, so I need to give it what I have. So here I stand, man. Here I stand.”

Eagles Trade Up in NFL Draft to Pick WSU Offensive Tackle Andre Dillard

By Theo Lawson
The Spokesman-Review

In a spiffy maroon suit, with a Washington State lapel pin fastened to the left side of his chest, Andre Dillard walked up to the stage in Nashville, cordially greeted Commissioner Roger Goodell with a handshake, slipped the Philadelphia Eagles hat over his head and posed with the midnight green jersey he’ll be wearing this fall.

The 2018 Cougars aren’t done making history. Not just yet.

Not until the Eagles selected Dillard with the 22nd overall pick of the 2019 NFL draft had a Washington State offensive lineman been selected in the first round of an event that’s going on its 83rd year of existence.

But Dillard, once a 240-pound offensive line recruit whose only offers came from WSU and a few regional Big Sky schools, got his moment almost three hours into this draft, embracing mother Jennifer Bollinger in the “green room” and fist-bumping Cougars O-line coach Mason Miller before he started down the runway to the draft stage.

Once he got there, Dillard proudly flashed three fingers in the air, a tribute to former teammate Tyler Hilinski, the WSU QB who wore No. 3 for the Cougars before tragically taking his own life last January.

Grabbing Dillard must have been a high priority for Philadelphia, because the Eagles traded with the Baltimore Ravens to move up three positions in the first round. They snatched the Woodinville native right before Houston, another team eyeballing Dillard, made its pick at No. 23.

“I was feeling every emotion in the book,” Dillard told ESPN host Suzy Kolber. “I was anxious, I had to keep standing up. It was such an amazing moment to share with everybody. I’m speechless right now.”

He had to wait longer than some anticipated, but it had been all but guaranteed Dillard would end a long drought for WSU when the left tackle received one of the 23 phone calls made by the NFL earlier this month, inviting Dillard and 22 other elite prospects to Nashville for the 2019 draft. Not since quarterback Ryan Leaf in 1998 has a WSU player been given that opportunity and the NFL typically only invites players projected to be taken off the board Thursday.

The Cougars hadn’t managed to place an offensive lineman in the first round, but putting them in the draft hasn’t been a problem and Dillard’s selection keeps a recent fad going.

WSU has had an offensive lineman snapped up in three of the last four drafts and Dillard joins former teammate Cole Madison, taken by Green Bay in the fifth round of the 2018 draft, and Joe Dahl, a 2016 draftee of the Detroit Lions who was one of the first that showed Dillard how to pass-protect in the Air Raid when he got to Pullman in 2014.

“We’re excited for him and he’s a good quality player and has worked hard for it,” WSU coach Mike Leach said of Dillard earlier this week. “Went from being a pretty non-recruited guy by most teams to where he’s at now, so yeah, I think it’s been a pretty impressive path.”

Dillard has scaled up mock draft boards over the last four months, piecing together a strong week at the Senior Bowl in January, posting some of the best marks by an offensive lineman at the Scouting Combine in February and cementing his pre-draft process with an impressive showing at WSU’s Pro Day, where he performed positional drills for 28 NFL teams including Philadelphia.

“I’m so happy for him, it’s been a great ride with him,” said WSU junior Liam Ryan, who’s expected to replace Dillard at left tackle this fall. “Three years and I just enjoyed every single moment with him. ... I’m just so excited for him and his family because he’s worked so hard to get where he’s at right now.

Dillard showed an expert-level understanding of the pass protection schemes required in Leach’s Air Raid, sealing off the left side of an offensive line that allowed only 13 sacks in 13 games last season. Dillard was an Associated Press Third Team All-American, and All-Pac-12 First teamer, as a senior and finished with 39 consecutive starts at left tackle.

In the on-stage interview, Kolber alluded to Dillard’s gentle personality away from the field, which is contrary to his violent blocking style on it.

“GMs tell me that you’re one of the nicest guys in the draft, but man you are nasty on the field,” Kolber said. “How do you turn that on?”

“I know what I’ve got to do when I’ve got to do it,” Dillard responded. “Off the field, I just like being someone people like to be around, but when I’m on the field I know I’ve got to do my job.”

In Leach’s patented Air Raid, that usually meant shielding a quarterback who was going to air it out between 40-60 times per game. But what’ll be asked of Dillard should change — at least somewhat — at the next level, as he adapts to more run-oriented, pro style-driven league.

It could explain why Dillard fell below three other offensive linemen Thursday night, and one other tackle: Alabama’s Jonah Williams.

“Obviously he’s going to have to be multi-dimensional and move defenders off the line,” ESPN Draft Analyst Mel Kiper Jr. said on Thursday’s broadcast. “He doesn’t have great arm length for a left tackle compared to Jonah Williams of Alabama, longer than Andre Dillard’s. But here’s a guy that’s proven he has good feet.”

Of course, Dillard’s No. 1 priority with the Eagles will be to keep the club’s franchise quarterback upright, something Philly’s offensive line hasn’t been able to do successfully or consistently the past two seasons.

Carson Wentz’s 2017 season was shortened by an ACL tear, though the Eagles managed with backup Nick Foles, beating the New England Patriots in Super Bowl LII. That caused Wentz to miss the first two games of the 2018 regular season and though he’d return to play in 11 games, Philadelphia’s No. 1 suffered a back injury that sidelined him for the rest of the season.

Jason Peters, considered a future Hall of Famer, occupies the left tackle spot for the Eagles now, but he’s also aging quickly at 37 years old and Dillard is thought to be his heir apparent in Philly, or someone who could fill the position immediately.

Mariners Break Out Bats Big Time in 14-2 Smashing of Texas

By Scott Hanson
The Seattle Times

It was a welcome return to T-Mobile Park for the Seattle Mariners, and a very unwelcome introduction to the major leagues for Texas starter Taylor Hearn.

The Mariners, who scored three runs combined in their previous two games, scored five in the first and knocked Hearn out of the game after a third of an inning.

The runs kept on coming, not that Marco Gonzales needed much help. The left-hander improved to 5-0 with seven shutout innings in the Mariners' 14-2 victory over the Rangers on Thursday night at T-Mobile Park. The Mariners snapped a three-game losing streak and a six-game losing streak at home after going 0-6 on their previous homestand. And with Houston losing, the Mariners moved back into first place in the American League West, a half-game ahead of the Astros.

"You go from being shut out (1-0 Wednesday at San Diego) to scoring 14 points," said Mariners manager Scott Servais, "That's baseball. It was a really good offensive night, but Marco Gonzales really set the tone. He was much crisper than we have seen him, coming out of the chute. I thought the last three innings the other day against Anaheim he kind of got it going ... and tonight it carried over from that one. It starts on the mound and he certainly led us tonight."

There wasn't much suspense after the first inning.

Hearn, 24, was called up for the game after going 1-3 with a 4.05 earned-run average in four starts with Class AAA Nashville. He looked out of his league against Seattle.

Hearn walked the bases loaded to start his outing, then gave up a run on an infield single to Tim Beckham. With one out, Ryon Healy drilled a 3-1 pitch into the left-field corner for a bases-clearing double to make it 4-0. After another walk and a single loaded the bases, Hearn was mercifully relieved.

"They had a rookie out there and we were making him work and making him throw strikes," Servais said. "We got to him early. And we tacked on, which was nice to see. We didn't let up."

Seattle added one more run in the first, two more in the fourth and fifth and three in the sixth, including a pair on Tim Beckham's two-run homer to center field.

The 12-0 lead was overkill for Gonzales, who was in control throughout. Only once did the Rangers get a base runner to second base against him and he allowed no more than one base runner in any inning.

Gonzales allowed six hits, walked none and tied a career-high with nine strikeouts while becoming the first pitcher in the big leagues to reach five wins this season.

"He's a great competitor and he's got four quality pitches," Servais said. "He's a complete package. He's a good fielder, he hold runners well, but ultimately it comes down to his competitiveness. He's a tough nut out there."

The only downer for the Mariners was missing out on a chance to tie their most lopsided shutout in history at 14-0 when the Rangers scored two unearned runs in the eighth inning off Roenis Elias.

Not that the Mariners were complaining. Not with that kind of a start to a six-game homestand.

"Everybody chipped in and it was a nice way to start the homestand," Servais said.

Mariners Recall Top Prospect Justus Sheffield for Friday's Game, DFA Reliever Shawn Armstrong

By Ryan Divish
The Seattle Times

The Mariners made the requisite roster moves for Friday night's shortened start for Yusei Kikuchi, officially recalling top prospect Justus Sheffield from Class AAA Tacoma. To make room on the active roster, Seattle designated reliever Shawn Armstrong for assignment.

As part of a designed throwing program to control his usage and health, Kikuchi will pitch just one inning of his scheduled start vs. the Rangers and then give way to Sheffield, who was called up to "piggyback" off the start. The Mariners wanted to bring up a starter from Tacoma to pitch extended innings after Kikuchi, instead of taxing their beleaguered bullpen.

With Erik Swanson already in the rotation because of the injury to Wade LeBlanc, the obvious choice for the Mariners was Sheffield, who is expected to be inserted into the starting rotation by the end of the season. Seattle even prepared Sheffield for this cameo by having an "opener" pitch the first inning of his last scheduled start with Tacoma on Sunday before bringing him in for the second inning. He'll be working on only three days rest though the Mariners believe his last outing of only 40-plus pitches was more like an extended bullpen.

Sheffield's stay in the big leagues will be brief. The Mariners are expected to option him back to Tacoma after the game to make room for reliever Mike Wright, who they recently acquired from the Orioles in a trade.

Sheffield, who turns 23 in May, has made three starts and the one relief appearance for the Rainiers, posting a 0-1 record with a 3.93 ERA with 11 strikeouts and 14 walks. The walks and the lack of fastball command that have plagued him early in the season are a concern, but the Mariners also planned to use him in this situation early in the season to get a gauge on his readiness for the rotation. He was acquired from the Yankees as the centerpiece of a trade return that included Swanson and Dom Thompson-Williams for lefty James Paxton.

Sheffield made his MLB debut last September with one start and one relief appearance for the Yankees. He spent most of the 2018 season with Triple-A Scranton Wilkes-Barre in the Yankees organization, where he went 6-4 with a 2.56 ERA (25 ER, 88.0 IP) with 84 strikeouts and 36 walks in 20 games (15 starts).

The move to designate Armstrong for assignment was a product of a bullpen with minimal roster flexibility, service time and his own inconsistency following an oblique injury that he suffered just before the team went to Tokyo in March. In four appearances after coming off the injured list on April 12, he's posted a 0-1 record with a 14.73 ERA. In 3 2/3 innings, he has three strikeouts and three walks.

With only Chasen Bradford having minor league options available in the Mariners bullpen, Seattle was expected to have to designate a reliever without options and remove him from the 40-man roster. The two candidates were Armstrong and Cory Gearrin. Since Armstrong has minimal service time and has struggled of late, there is a strong chance that he would clear waivers and accept an outright assignment to Class AAA Tacoma to receive his full MLB salary for the season. Gearrin, who has pitched well of late, has enough service time to refuse any outright assignment and become a free agent while still getting his retaining his full $1.4 million salary from the Mariners.

The Mariners informed Armstrong of the decision after Thursday night's win over the Rangers. They have 10 days to trade, release or outright him. The waivers process can take up to 48 hours.

Seattle Had its Greatest NBA Moment Since Sonics Left When Damian Lillard Waved 'Goodbye' to OKC

By Matt Calkins
The Seattle Times

PORTLAND — Mention "the tip" in Seattle, and fans will think of Richard Sherman, the cornerback whose deflection on the final play of the NFC Championship Game sent the Seahawks to the Super Bowl.

Mention "the point" in Seattle and they'll think of Jake Browning, the quarterback who extended his index finger at an Oregon player as he crossed the goal line in the Huskies' 70-21 rout.

But Tuesday night, a new iconic image emerged for Emerald City sports fans, and it was authored by an athlete who has never played a pro game here. Thanks to Blazers point guard Damian Lillard, this city will forever have "the wave."

There is no team more despised in Seattle than the Oklahoma City Thunder. Husky fans may loathe the Ducks and Cougs, and Seahawks fans will get caught up in divisions rivalries times — but it in terms of incessant, ear-steaming hatred, it's OKC by a panhandle.

Every year since the Sonics left in 2008, jilted fans wait for the Thunder's demise. And every year since 2008, they have experienced the joy of the Thunder's misery.

They've watched OKC lose in the Finals to the Heat and blow a 3-1 series lead to the Warriors. They've watched it lose to the Spurs and Mavericks in the conference finals as well.

Sean Meagher / The Oregonian via AP

Portland's Damian Lillard gestures after shooting the game-winning three-pointer to beat the Oklahoma City Thunder 118-115 in Game 5 of their best-of-seven first-round playoff series in Portland, Ore., Tuesday.

They've watched James Harden get traded for Kevin Martin, Kevin Durant leave for Golden State, and Russell Westbrook lose in the first round despite winning NBA MVP.

But there may never have been a more satisfying moment than Tuesday's Game 5.

Trailing the Thunder by 15 points midway through the fourth quarter, the Blazers tied the score and got the ball back with 17 seconds to go. They then gave it to Lillard, who let the clock tick down to 0:02 before drilling a 37-footer that not only ended the series, but gave him his 48th, 49th and 50th points.

It was the greatest shot in the organization's history, but not the signature moment of the night. That came two seconds later, when Lillard turned to the Thunder's bench and waved goodbye.

If ever a bond was formed between Portland and Seattle, it came right then. With all the trash-talking throughout the series, the Blazers had developed an antagonism toward the Thunder that Seattleites feel consistently. That's what was so gratifying about the wave for both the 503 and 206. It wasn't just "we won." It was also "you lost."

Usually a post-win taunt would seem unsportsmanlike, but this one didn't. It was quick, subtle, and felt justified.

Asked about it after the game, Lillard explained that this was simply "having the last word."

"I was just waving goodbye to them. After Game 3, (Thunder guard) Dennis Schroder was out there pointing to his wrist, they was out there doing all these celebrations and doing all this stuff, and we kept our composure," Lillard said. "After one win that is what they decided to do. And we was like 'OK, what we want to do is win four games. And when we win those four games, there's not going to be nothing to talk about.' So that's what that was."

Then came Lillard's Instagram post.

"It is the unemotional, reserved, calm, detached warrior who wins, not the hothead seeking vengeance and not the ambitious seeker of fortune." — Sun Tzu, the Art of War.

Brian Mankien and his wife Veronica were among those in Sonics jerseys at Moda Center Tuesday. Brian said they came down from Seattle to "twist the knife a little bit."

It was a nice sentiment, but their help wasn't needed. Lillard twisted the knife just fine.

Before the Sonics left, the Blazers were Seattle's primary NBA enemy. It went beyond proximity, too, as the teams frequently squared off in the playoffs.

The idea of celebrating a Portland victory was unfathomable at one point, but Tuesday, a Portland victory supplied Seattle with its most satisfying NBA moment in more than a decade.

Obviously, this city wants to get the Sonics back and go back to hating the Blazers. For one night, though, rivals became allies and provided Seattle with an indelible moment.

Portland is a great beer town, but if inclined, Lillard should have one up here. Just like in Rip City, he'd never have to pay.

Jaylen Nowell is 'All In' as He Prepares for the NBA Draft, Closes Door on Return to Washington

By Percy Allen
The Seattle Times

These days, every minute is scheduled, from the time Jaylen Nowell wakes up at 8 in the morning until he goes to bed at 10 at night.

Every jump shot is monitored. Every movement is measured. And every practice session is recorded and reviewed.

his blood analyzed to customize a meal plan for the 19-year-old fast-food fan, who says he happily ditched a diet of pizza, burgers and fries for ham-and-cheese omelets and protein smoothies.

"I've done these things in hopes to be a more efficient player," said Nowell, who is preparing for workouts with NBA teams that will likely determine where he'll land in the NBA draft on June 20.

Even though the Washington sophomore has until the NCAA's deadline of May 29 to decide if he's going to remain in the draft or return to school, Nowell has essentially closed the door on the Huskies.

he said. "I never go into anything half heartedly. That's just how I've been as a person. When I said I was going to enter the draft, that's what I meant and that was final.

"I really loved my time at UW. I loved being there. I loved being a part of the program and the fans letting me be a part of the program. They took a 17-year-old kid who was really just learning the game of basketball and really learning how to live on his own and really accepted him. For that, I want to say thank you. But I feel like this is my time to make that next jump."

Since announcing his decision to turn pro March 31, Nowell signed with Ryan Davis of Rep 1 Sports.

During the past 2½ weeks, Nowell flew to Irvine, Calif., to train under the direction of Gavin MacMillan and Spencer Levy at Sport Science Lab, whose clientele includes NBA star Klay Thompson and NFL standout Carson Wentz.

The 12-hour days are filled with two basketball workouts, a training session, film study, massage therapy and interview training, which begins this week.

"It's not too overwhelming," Nowell said. "This is something that I dreamed of. Being in this process now is really something that I can say I was ready for."

"So the fact that I'm here and I get to do it, and this is all that I have to focus on is actually easier to me because I'm focused on something that I love to do. So it's not really a job to me."

When it ever gets to be too much, Nowell talks to his god-brother Gideon "Shay" Royale, who traveled to Southern California with him and reminds the former Garfield High star of just how far he has traveled — literally and figuratively — in a relatively short time.

"My big brother definitely is keeping me grounded through everything," Nowell said. "Even those times when I get a bit hyped about the situation, he kind of keeps me at bay because he was there even before any of this was possible."

Huskies' Murphy Selected by Arizona in Second Round

By Adam Jude

The Seattle Times

Byron Murphy, one of the most dynamic cornerbacks in Husky history, became the second University of Washington player selected in the 2019 NFL draft on Friday when the Cardinals chose him with the first pick in the second round (No. 33 overall).

Murphy, from Scottsdale, Ariz., gets to stay home in Arizona, where he will reunite with former Washington teammates Budda Baker and Ezekiel Turner in the Cardinals' secondary.

Murphy is the sixth defensive back from UW drafted since 2013 — and that list doesn't include Turner, who made the Arizona roster last year after signing as an undrafted free agent. Three more UW defensive backs — Taylor Rapp, Jordan Miller and JoJo McIntosh — could be drafted this weekend.

Murphy was an Associated Press second-team All-American in 2018 and a first-team all-Pac-12 selection. He was the MVP of the Pac-12 championship game after he returned an interception 66 yards for the only touchdown of the game, helping the Huskies to a 10-3 victory over Utah.

After a redshirt season in 2016, Murphy had two interceptions in his UW debut at Rutgers to open the 2017 season. He appeared in 20 games for the Huskies over the past two seasons, finishing his career with 74 tackles, seven interceptions, 27 pass breakups and two forced fumbles. He missed six games in 2017 because of a broken foot.

Murphy departed UW with two seasons of eligibility remaining. As a third-year sophomore, he was eligible to enter the 2019 draft.

Seahawks Select Safety Marquise Blair in Second Round of NFL Draft

By Bob Condotta

The Seattle Times

The Seahawks may have confidence in the young defensive backs they took two years ago.

But Friday they showed they aren't done remaking the now-departed Legion of Boom, drafting safety Marquise Blair out of Utah in the second round with the 47th overall pick.

It was a little bit of a surprise pick as Blair was generally considered a third-day choice, meaning fourth round and on.

Blair, listed by the Seahawks at 6-1-and-a-half and 196 pounds, becomes the highest-drafted defensive back by Seattle since the man he is being taken to help replace — Earl Thomas. Since Thomas went in the first round in 2010 Seattle had not drafted a DB higher than the third round.

Blair, who played two years at Utah after transferring from Dodge City (Kansas) Community College, said he was watching the draft in his hometown of Wooster, Ohio with family and friends.

"I'm just grateful," said Blair.

Blair's 4.48 40 at the NFL Combine was tied for the eighth-fastest among safeties and helped reinforce the idea that the best may be yet to come for a player whom some scouts felt has more pro potential than his college stats may have indicated.

Blair said he played both free and strong safety at Utah — saying "50-50" when asked to define how much of each — and that versatility is also a trait that drew him to the Seahawks.

Seattle has Bradley McDougald set to start at one safety spot but was schedule to have a competition between 2017 draft picks Delano Hill and Tedric Thompson to determine who would play alongside McDougald.

Blair now joins that mix. He said he played no nickel corner at Utah, presumably ruling that out as a potential use by Seattle.

Blair has been noted for his aggressiveness and he was ejected for targeting three ties in 24 games at Utah, including against UW on a hit on Myles Gaskin in September.

Asked if he thinks a reputation for playing nasty on the field is accurate, Blair said "yes sir."

Lindy's Draft Preview listed Blair as a sleeper, noting that his stats were not "eye-popping" but that "he boasts an intriguing combination of size and speed to suggest that his best football could be ahead of him."

But before taking Blair, the Seahawks made yet another trade to move down and add more picks, dealing the 37th selection to Carolina to get picks 47, in the second round, and 77 in the third.

That means Seattle, in the last four days, has gone from four picks in the draft to 10. The trade gave Seattle three picks on the second day of the draft, with Seattle having six more on Saturday — four in the fourth round and two in the fifth.

Seattle has made three trades during the draft to add five picks, and also got an first-rounder in the trade of Frank Clark on Tuesday.

The pick Seattle traded to Carolina had been acquired in a trade down the night before with the New York Giants, in which the Seahawks also picked up selection 142 in the fourth round and 152 in the fifth.

Seahawks Trade Up for Ole Miss WR D.K. Metcalf as Doug Baldwin Considers Retirement

By Bob Condotta

The Seattle Times

The Seahawks are surely hoping that 6-3, 228-pound receiver D.K. Metcalf, who surprisingly fell to them at the last pick in the second round Friday, will help complement Doug Baldwin and the rest of Seattle's receiving corps in 2019.

But a few minutes after the Seahawks made a trade up with New England to get Metcalf with the 64th pick— an Ole Miss product who had been considered as a near-certain first-rounder heading into the draft — news broke that Metcalf may have to help replace Baldwin, not just help him out. Hours after ESPN's Adam Schefter reported that Baldwin "might be unable to play again due to the cumulative effect of multiple injuries" and that there was a "real chance that Baldwin ... has played his last NFL down," general manager John Schneider confirmed as much.

Rumors had circulated all offseason about the future of the 30-year-old Baldwin after an injury-plagued 2018 campaign.

But Schefter gave the most definitive report yet Friday that Baldwin's career is in doubt, stating via Twitter that he may not be able to play again due to injuries he has suffered in recent seasons.

Reported Schefter: "At the age of 30, Seahawks WR Doug Baldwin might be unable to play again due to the cumulative effect of multiple injuries, per sources. There is a real chance that Baldwin, one of the Seahawks' best and most popular players, has played his last NFL down, a source said Friday."

Baldwin has had surgeries on his knee and shoulder as well as a sports hernia surgery since the end of the 2018 season.

Baldwin at one point called last season "hell" as he dealt with myriad injuries and missed three games — the first he had missed since 2012.

Seattle coach Pete Carroll gave a vague answer on Monday when asked about Baldwin and his recovery.

"Yeah he is (here in Renton)," Carroll said. "He's working at it every day. He is here in the building and I didn't see him today but he was here and he is working at it and making good progress. It's a long haul."

Seahawks general manager John Schneider had likewise given a vague answer with no real ETA on Baldwin when asked about him last week.

"That's a process we are still working through," he said. "He is recovering from that right now and we will see where it goes. ... he's a tough guy, though. If anybody can recover from surgeries like this, it's Doug."

Baldwin has two years remaining on a four-year, $46 million contract signed in June, 2016. But there is no more guaranteed salary in the contract and the Seahawks could get some significant savings against the salary cap if he were to be released. According to OvertheCap.com, if Baldwin were to be designated a post-June 1 release the Seahawks could save $10 million and $11 million against the cap in 2019 and 2020, respectively, while taking dead cap hits of $3.1 million each year. If he were to be released prior to June 1 then the 2019 numbers would be $6.2 million in dead money and $6.8 in savings in 2019 with the 2020 numbers remaining the same.

Baldwin missed two games early in the 2018 season with a sprained knee and then another late in the year with a groin/abdomen issue, presumably the injury on which he had surgery earlier this month.

In December, prior to his return for a game at San Francisco, Baldwin talked frankly about his future stating "I do" when asked if he wondered if the 2018 season could be his last as a Seahawk.

"Oh, I am on the downside of my career," Baldwin said. "I'm 30 years old."

He rebounded to play well the next two weeks, keying a win against Kansas City with seven receptions for 126 yards and a touchdown, again speaking frankly after the game about the challenge of the season.

"This year has been hell," Baldwin said. "This year has been absolutely hell. I've been ...

oh my goodness. We don't have enough time for that. It's been hell. But I'm so grateful to be healthy enough to be on the field with my teammates to celebrate victories and just enjoying playing football again, just like a kid."

Metcalf was one of the stars of the NFL combine after running a 4.33 40, which many draft experts figured had solidified his status as a first-round pick. That was a few weeks after he became something of an internet sensation after posting a post-workout photo in which he resembled a body builder more than a receiver — he said Friday he is at 3 percent body fat.

But some had questioned Metcalf's production at Ole Miss — he had just 67 receptions in three seasons, though he showed big-play potential, averaging 18.3 yards per reception with 14 touchdowns — as well as his durability.

He suffered a neck injury in the seventh game of the season that required season-ending surgery and played just 21 games in three seasons at Ole Miss.

Mike Cameron Returns to the Mariners Organization as a Special Assignment Coach

By Ryan Divish

The Seattle Times

With multiple trades made this past offseason plus the previous few drafts, the Mariners have assembled a large group talented young outfield prospects throughout their organization. To supplement their growth and development, they made a notable hire to help the process.

On Friday, the organization announced that former Mariner outfielder Mike Cameron has been added to the player development staff. Cameron's official title is "special assignment coach." His responsibilities will include working with Mariners prospects at all levels of the organization, with a focus on outfield defense and baserunning. Besides working with minor league players, Cameron will spend some time working with the big league team.

Cameron started work immediately. He was in uniform with Class AA Arkansas on Friday night. The Travelers have three solid outfield prospects, who are all ranked in Baseball America's Top 30 prospects for the organization — Kyle Lewis (No. 8), Jake Fraley (No. 15) and Dom Thompson-Williams (No. 18).

Manager Scott Servais met with Cameron to discuss the role when the team was in Chicago a few weeks ago.

"Mike obviously had a great career and really good run here with the Mariners for awhile," Servais said. "It's a great opportunity to bring somebody with a ton of experience into the organization from an outfield, base stealing, hitting home runs aspect and all that stuff. He's had quite a career. I'm glad to have him on board."

Besides the trio at Arkansas, the Mariners have two outstanding prospects in Jarred Kelenic (No.2) and Julio Rodriguez (No.

5) in West Virginia and Braden Bishop (No. 13) in Tacoma.

"We may see him, though most if it will probably be at the Minor League level," Servais said of Cameron helping out the big league team. "We certainly have some interesting outfield prospects that he could help out a lot. I think the timing is right for him. The fit is good for us. Hopefully he can help."

Cameron played for 17 big league seasons with nine different teams: White Sox (1995-1998), Reds (1999), Mariners (2000-2003), Mets (2004-2005), Padres (2006-2007), Brewers (2008-2009), Red Sox (2010-2011) and Gators (2011). He was a three-time Gold Glove Award winner — winning two with the Mariners (2001, 2003) and another with the Padres (2006). He was named to the American League All-Star team in 2001 when the Mariners won 116 games.

In 1955 career big league games, he hit .249 (1700 for 6839) average with 383 doubles, 59 triples, 278 home runs, 968 RBI and 297 stolen bases. In four seasons in Seattle, Cameron hit .256 (554 for 2162) with 115 doubles, 19 triples, 87 home runs, 344 RBI and 106 stolen bases in 610 games.

Bearcats Take Down Warriors in Shootout

By The Chronicle

W.F. West and Rochester couldn't score in regulation or overtime, but the Bearcats came from behind in the shootout to earn a 1-0 win in an Evergreen 2A Conference boys soccer match here on Friday.

Rochester's first two shooters scored and the Bearcats missed their first two shots for an early deficit in the shootout. Cesar Morales scored for the Bearcats and after another miss, Anthony Mendez-Leal made his penalty kick and following three straight Alex Brummer saves, the shootout was tied at two after five shooters.

Beau Booth made his shot and Rochester missed the net for the Bearcats to earn the win.

"He (Brummer) came up huge in the shootout," W.F. West coach Allen Anderson said.

Anderson noted the performances of Luis Monzon-Barillas coming off the bench and playing with energy and also applauded the play of Aaron Zylstra on defense.

"I thought we didn't come out in the first half with a ton of energy. They had three or four good opportunities in the first half. We couldn't get shots on frame," Anderson said. "We picked up the intensity a lot. The passes were great and we had a lot of opportunities in the second half. We hit the crossbar twice, post once. Their goalie came up with a couple amazing saves, point blank saves to keep it 0-0."

W.F. West (5-6-3, 3-5) travels to Tiger Stadium on Tuesday to take on Centralia. Rochester (3-12, 0-9) hosts Aberdeen on Tuesday on senior night.

United Blanks Seton Catholic to Clinch Trico Title

VANCOUVER — The boys from Winlock and Toledo took their time here Thursday but ultimately found a way to clinch the 1A Trico League soccer championship with a 1-0 win over Seton Catholic.

"It was a very competitive match," said United coach Horst Malunat.

Malunat noted that it was a rare game on field turf for his team, which contributed somewhat to their slow start. As a result the game remained knotted in a scoreless tie at halftime.

"They dominate the first half. All of their shots except for two were in the first half. They probably should have scored to be honest with you. We were kind of flat," added Malunat. "The second half was our half."

United came out of the intermission with a newfound energy and promptly fired a near miss shot off of the crossbar. With their offense finally working properly United finally got on the scoreboard with a goal by Andreas Malunat in the 64th minute that was assisted by Thomas Ethridge.

United managed eight shots in the game. Their goaltender, Alan Contreras, was able to knock down all 12 shots by Seton Catholic.

"Alan got us the shutout and the whole defense stepped up," said coach Malunat. "The guy that really stepped up in the middle was Isaac Garibay. It was probably one of his best games of the season I think."

After defeating King's Way Christian 13-0 on Tuesday, Malunat noted that his team had a difficult time adjusting to the quality of their opponent on Thursday. Seton Catholic sits in second place in the TriCo League with a record of 8-2 in league.

"It's hard to transition from playing a not a very good opponent to one that can beat you," Malunat explained.

United (10-0-4, 10-0 league) will play at Castle Rock on Tuesday.

UW Matches Program Record With Four Huskies Drafted in First Two Rounds of NFL Draft

By Adam Jude

The Seattle Times

If it feels like you've read something like this before, well, things are becoming a bit redundant when it comes to the kind of talent the University of Washington is sending to the NFL.

Three more Huskies were selected in the second round of the NFL draft on Friday, following Thursday night's first-round selection of offensive tackle Kaleb McGary (31st overall to Atlanta).

With the first pick in Friday's second round, cornerback Byron Murphy was selected by his hometown team, the Arizona Cardinals, with the 33rd overall pick.

Near the end of the second round, safety Taylor Rapp went to the Los Angeles Rams with the 61st overall pick. That's two more defensive backs from UW headed to the NFL, and if you're keeping tally that's eight NFL defensive backs the Huskies have produced since 2013.

What's more, the Huskies are sending another tight end to the NFL — and Drew Sample's selection in the second round (52nd overall) by the Cincinnati Bengals was a pleasant surprise.

It also continues UW's strong tight-end trend.

Since 2014, the Huskies have produced five pro tight ends — the Seahawks notably took Will Dissly in the fourth round last year — and overall the Huskies have sent 20 tight ends to the NFL over the past 50 years.

A 6-foot-5, 255-pound graduate of Bellevue's Newport High, Sample was considered one of the best blocking tight ends in this draft, and his pass-catching ability is probably underrated. He had 25 catches for 252 yards and three touchdowns as a senior

In Arizona, Murphy will reunite with former UW teammates Budda Baker and Ezekiel Turner in the Cardinals' secondary.

"I kind of had it in the back of my mind I could be a Cardinal," Murphy said in a conference call. "This whole day has been kind of emotional, just thinking about the Cardinals' part of the Bird-gang, knowing I grew up watching the Cardinals my whole life. I'm ready to stay in my hometown."

Rapp, a Bellingham native, had slipped late into the second round because of the slower-than-expected 40-yard dash he ran at UW's Pro Day earlier this month (4.74 seconds). Still, many project the Huskies' All-American to have an immediate impact for a Rams team expected to contend for a Super Bowl berth again this year.

"I've dreamed of this moment my whole life, ever since I could walk — an unbelievable moment that I will remember for the rest of my life," Rapp told the Los Angeles media in a conference call. "I get to come in under obviously Eric Weddle — a vet — and John Johnson, he's an incredible player. To come in and learn under them, it's an incredible opportunity and the perfect scenario for me. I couldn't ask for anything better."

Rapp is the first-ever NFL draft pick out of Sehome High School. Rapp's mother is from China, his father is from Canada, making Rapp one of the few players of Chinese heritage ever selected in the NFL draft.

As a true freshman at UW, Rapp became a surprising starter at safety just a few weeks into the 2016 season. He had two interceptions — including one returned for a touchdown — in the 2016 Pac-12 championship game against Colorado, helping the Huskies win their first conference title in 16 years.

Rapp was a first-team All-Pac-12 selection in 2017 and 2018, and an ESPN All-American last fall, when he posted 59 tackles, two interceptions and a team-high five sacks.

UW's four selections in the first two rounds of the draft matched the program's record for players taken in the first two rounds of any draft.

And they're not done yet.

In the final four rounds Saturday, a handful of Huskies could come off the board — linebacker Ben Burr-Kirven, defensive tackle Greg Gaines, running back Myles Gaskin, cornerback Jordan Miller, safety JoJo McIntosh and quarterback Jake Browning.

Dolphins Trade Back in Draft, Acquire QB Rosen From Cardinals and Extra 2020 Second-Round Pick

DAVIE, Fla. (TNS) — The Miami Dolphins may have acquired their quarterback of the future.

The Dolphins traded for Arizona Cardinals quarterback Josh Rosen during the second round of the 2019 NFL draft Friday night.

The Dolphins traded the No. 62 pick in the second round to the Cardinals for Rosen, the former UCLA standout and No. 10 overall pick in the 2018 draft.

The Cardinals were poised to move Rosen after drafting Oklahoma quarterback Kyler Murray with the first pick in the 2019 draft Thursday night.

The Dolphins, in need of a starting quarterback, were a willing trade partner.

Earlier, the Dolphins traded their No. 48 pick in the second round and No. 116 pick in the fourth to the New Orleans Saints for two second-round picks, one of which is in 2020, and a sixth-round pick this year.

The Dolphins own the No. 62 pick (30th in the second round) and acquired No. 202 in the sixth.

The new 2020 second-round pick becomes Miami's 13th selection next year.

The Dolphins chose to trade back in the second round, while still remaining in trade talks for Arizona Cardinals quarterback Josh Rosen.

The Dolphins were in negotiations with the Cardinals throughout the day about a possible trade for Rosen, with Arizona seeking a second-round pick for the former UCLA standout and No. 10 overall pick a year ago.

As of now, the Dolphins chose to acquire two more picks in exchange of their second-round pick.

The Dolphins began the draft selecting Clemson defensive tackle Christian Wilkins with the No. 13 pick in the first round on Thursday.

A successful Dolphins draft in 2019 would see Miami address its dire needs for a run-stopping defensive tackle like Wilkins, an elite pass rusher, a new starting right tackle, another interior offensive lineman, and a new franchise quarterback.

The Dolphins also hope to address other areas of significant concern like finding a potential starting cornerback, a receiver who can develop into a No. 1 option, a punishing, downhill running back, and another defensive back to square away the secondary.

But, Miami expects to make a splash in the 2020 draft.

The Dolphins could potentially have a first-round pick, and two picks in each of the remaining six rounds next year.

Here's how Miami acquired their extra 2020 picks:

- Second-round pick from New Orleans.
- Third-round pick is compensatory from right tackle Ja'Wuan James' free-agent departure to the Denver Broncos.
- Fourth-round pick from their trade of former quarterback Ryan Tannehill to the Tennessee Titans.
- A projected fifth-round pick as compensatory for longtime defensive end Cameron Wake, who signed with the Titans as a free agent.
- Sixth-round pick from Miami's trade of defensive end Robert Quinn to the Dallas Cowboys

W.F. West Narrowly Defeats Tumwater on Games

By The Chronicle

W.F. West and Tumwater each won three matches, each won seven sets, but the Bearcats prevailed on games 57-56 in an Evergreen 2A Conference girls tennis match in Chehalis on Friday.

The Bearcats swept the singles matches. Sydney Cameron cruised past Kailey Hickey, 6-1, 6-1, in the top singles match. Joelle Chung won in the No. 2 spot over Courtney Borovec, 6-1, 6-3. Claire Kuykendall won in the No. 3 spot, defeating Leann White 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

"Sydney and Joelle did their normal thing. Last time we played them was the first time she (Kuykendall) played a singles match. Because she won, I played here there again," W.F. West coach Jack State said. "In the third set, I think we saw at least four rallies where it was more than 10 shots before somebody won the point. She won every one of them, I'm really pleased with the play of the freshman."

Tumwater earned the sweep in doubles matches. Sophia Koelsch and Abby Bond defeated W.F. West's Stephanie Drummond and Sadie Jerome, 6-0, 6-0, in the top doubles match. Tiana Jeffries and Kaylynne Dowling fell to Josie Grimm and Ari Kee, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3. Abby Jasper and Hannah Kolb completed the sweep for the Thunderbirds, taking down Mak Moore and Lexis Haller, 6-2, 6-4.

State noted that a game won by Jeffries and Dowling in their three set match was the difference in their close match with Tumwater.

"That was the match that finished it off. I knew it was going to be really close, we were down 2-5, won the next game, 3-5," State said. "Pulling out that game, long drawn out game, that was the difference. Every game counts, that one at that particular point in time, was really critical."

W.F. West (9-2, 4-1) hosts Aberdeen on Monday to complete a rained out match in Aberdeen and play another full match against the Bobcats.

Black Hills Edges Centralia on Sets

TUMWATER — Centralia and Black Hills each won three matches but the Wolves won on sets 7-6 in an Evergreen 2A Conference girls tennis match here on Thursday.

Centralia's Carissa Kaut cruised to the win over Alexa Hollandsworth, 6-0, 6-1, in the top singles match. Makenna Beeson took down Centralia's Shannon Johnson in the No. 2 singles match, 6-0, 6-1. Evie Rooklidge earned the win for the Tigers in the No. 3 singles match over Ainsley Dragon, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

In doubles, Selina Ryser and Abby Calvert defeated Centralia's Maddie Corwin and Liza Hopkins in the top doubles match, 6-2, 6-1. Danika Jensen and Brynna Rooklidge fell to Black Hills' Ainsley Campbell and Emily Schade in the No. 2 doubles match, 6-2, 6-2. Centralia's Gracie Wiley and Maya O'Dell took down Fiona Cowell and Brittany Chapman in the final doubles match, 6-1, 6-4.

"I am still encouraged because our number one and number two doubles fought hard. A lot of games went to deuce, and that's encouraging because you know our girls are right there," Centralia coach Deb Keahey said. "They keep getting stronger every match. Overall, Carissa continues to play aggressive tennis. Evie keeps getting stronger at singles. Gracie and Maya dominated at the net today to win in doubles."

Centralia (4-7, 2-4) travels to Tumwater to take on the T-birds on Monday in an EvCo contest.

PWV Pounds 3A Timberline

LACEY — Pe Ell-Willapa Valley knocked 17 hits here Friday at the RAC to beat Timberline, 12-1, in non-league softball action.

Kamryn Adkins went 4 for 4 with a pair of doubles and tossed all five innings, striking out four with three walks and four hits allowed.

"She was just steady," PWV coach Ken Olson said, noting that the defense was flawless behind Adkins. "She had a great game today, and we needed that."

Britney Patrick homered twice and drove in six runs, Grace Hodel went 2 for 4, and Olivia Matlock had a pair of hits for the Titans.

"We're getting all three phases, and that's good," Olson said. "We've got some tough games coming up next week. Those will tune us up for the district tournament."

PWV (13-2, 10-0 Pacific 2B League) hosts Ilwaco for a twinbill starting at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Tumwater Tops W.F. West, 11-6

Tumwater pounded out 19 hits on Friday night to top W.F. West, 11-6, in Evergreen 2A Conference softball action at Recreation Park.

ed four in the fourth to pull ahead. "We gave them too many opportunities to swing the bat, and the wind was playing with the ball a bit," W.F. West coach Cathy Lieseke said. "It's not to blame for anything; definitely, we could have played a little better for the game. We let them get ahold of the momentum and we were never able to take it back."

Annika Waring went 2 for 4, and Kenna Brinson and Paetyynn Lopez each drove in two runs for W.F. West.

"I was proud of the way we stuck together," Lieseke said. "There was no quit, even after we were down."

W.F. West (13-2, 8-2 league) hosts Rochester on Monday.

Thursday's Results

Bearcats Tear Into Tigers

W.F. West dispatched Centralia 10-0 in a six inning rendition of the Swamp Cup that doubled as an Evergreen 2A Conference softball matchup at Recreation Park in Chehalis on Thursday.

Kamy Dacus tossed a complete game shutout for the Bearcats, al-

"Some runners got on for a variety of reasons but she did a great job of stranding runners on base," said W.F. West coach Cathy Lieseke.

Paytton Crawford, Kady Taylor, and Annika Waring all had two hits for the Bearcats on the day. Waring added three RBI.

Lieseke said that the Swamp Cup is always a game that stands out on the schedule every year.

"It's one that we've been looking at. Every game is an important game but it's fun to come out and play good against our crosstown rivals," Lieseke said. "We're feeling good going into our game against Tumwater."

W.F. West (13-1, 8-1 league) will host Tumwater on Friday.

Tigers Rip Through Seagulls

NAPAVINE — Napavine collected 14 hits to earn a 15-5 win in six innings over Raymond in a non-league softball game here on Thursday.

Kaiya Larson was 2-for-3 with three runs and a solo home run in the fifth. Ada Williams was 3-for-5 with three runs, four RBI and a two run home run in the sixth. Solana Sanchez was 3-for-5 with a double for the Tigers.

Napavine scored two runs in the first before breaking the game open with eight runs in the third inning.

The Tigers only walked one batter but did commit eight errors in the win.

"We got a win and it's a non-league win so it is a win. We've got to clean it up, we're making some errors in the field and some errors on the bases," Napavine coach Chad Williams said. "If we clean some stuff up, we're hitting the ball okay, reduce the amount of errors and we'll be fine."

Napavine (5-8, 3-7) hosts Morton-White Pass for a Central 2B League doubleheader on Friday.

Shorthanded Warriors Can't Keep Pace With Aberdeen

ROCHESTER — The Warriors couldn't catch a break here Thursday as they fell 16-6 to Aberdeen in a five inning Evergreen 2A Conference softball matchup.

Rochester started the contest off behind the eight ball with a mess of players sitting out the contest for one reason or another.

"We definitely got hit by illness and injury," said Rochester coach Dave Montgomery. "We had two girls come to school hoping to play. One went home. The other went to Urgent Care. And we already had four varsity girls out."

The two teams both scored three runs in the first inning but then things started to go sideways for the Warriors, who were playing several players out of position due to their short roster. Aberdeen scored six runs in the second and seven runs in the third inning in order to push the game into mercy-rule territory.

The Bobcats had 14 hits on the day but Kiyah Kennedy, Delaney Glazer and Sadie Knutson also combined to rack up 11 strikeouts on the day.

Faith Kennedy was 2-for-2 at the plate with a walk and two RBI for Rochester. Glazer added a pair of hits and Lakota Escott had one hit and a pair of RBI.

"Maddie Bates hit a double that if our fences weren't eight feet tall it would have been a home run easy," added Montgomery.

Montgomery said it will be imperative for his team to get on the mend sooner rather than later in order to continue their push for the playoffs.

"After the game we talked about how we've had games where our hitting has been fantastic. We've had games where the pitching was on. We've had plenty of games where the pitching was fantastic. Now it's just a matter of putting those three elements together," said Montgomery. "We'll lick our wounds over the weekend and then get right back at it next week because all of our goals are still in front of us."

Rochester (7-7, 4-6 league) will play at W.F. West on Monday.

to swing the bats better but acknowledged the performance of Valencia for the Tigers.

"We had a hard time," Bullock said. "He's throwing all three pitches, he had his curveball, his changeup and his fastball, keeping us off balance and we didn't do a good job of making adjustments and he kept us at bay."

While the Bearcats have the league title and the No. 1 seed in the district tournament locked up, Bullock hopes his team can refocus for the stretch run of the regular season.

"We were just talking, we haven't practiced all week and so it's been a grind and traveling to Aberdeen mixed in with that, we're making the most of it," Bullock said. "Hopefully we can finish this week off. We're playing a good Rochester team tomorrow and hopefully we're ready to throw some strikes and swing the bats a little better."

Centralia is in a much tougher position. The Tigers are 6-5 in league games, currently tied with Tumwater and Rochester for second in the EvCo. The Thunderbirds have the tiebreaker having already won two of the three games this season and the Warriors and Tigers have each won a game against each other.

"This one is no worse than the rest of them. Obviously we've got to find a way to win tomorrow, last night hurt quite a bit," Ashmore said. "We've got to find a way to win tomorrow is the bottom line, a 2-2 week is better than 1-3."

The Tigers have a two game lead over Black Hills and have the tiebreaker having won two of three games against the Wolves. Centralia (10-6, 6-5) travels to Tumwater on Friday before wrapping up the regular season next week with games against the Bearcats on Monday and Tuesday before ending the regular season at Wheeler Field against the Warriors on Thursday.

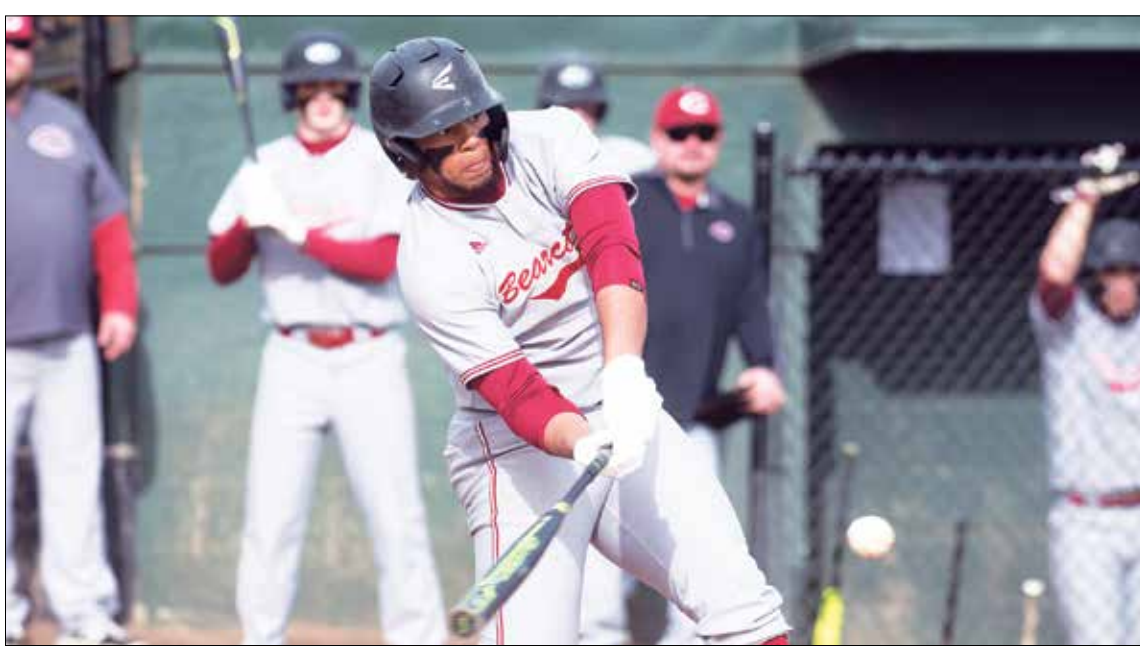

The Bearcats have two more games against the Tigers before ending the regular season in Tumwater against Black Hills on Thursday.

Smith Does It All in Rochester's Win Over Aberdeen

ABERDEEN — Bodey Smith did a little bit of everything for the Warriors here on Thursday as they defeated the Bobcats 10-2 in Evergreen 2A Conference baseball play.

Smith pitched a complete seven inning game, picking up seven strikeouts along the way while scattering two walks, four hits and two runs.

Still, Rochester coach Brad Quarnstrom said it was not his hurler's best performance.

"I wouldn't say that he struggled necessarily but he wasn't really hitting his spots in the first few innings ... I was kind of getting that nervous feeling and then he returned to his normal self from that point on," Quarnstrom said. "He's done that for us all year long. He's been our most consistent pitcher."

Smith, though, didn't just shine on the pitchers mound. He also dominated in the batters box, going 3-for-4 with two runs scored and a RBI.

Helping the Warriors offense along were Nolan Eyles and Jayden Lancaster who each had two hits and a RBI in the game. Jared Winters also had two hits and scored two runs while Logan Fry added a double and three RBI. The Warriors had 13 hits as a team. They were also mistake free in the field behind Smith.

"There were no great plays today. We just made all the routine plays which is awesome," noted Quarnstrom. "Aberdeen was a team that we needed to go get and we've got them two more times next week... We're right in the mix of looking at postseason we've just got to take care of business."

Friday's Results

Napavine Sweeps Morton-White Pass

NAPAVINE — The bats were working well for the Tigers as Napavine earned a sweep of Morton-White Pass in a Central 2B League baseball doubleheader here on Friday.

Napavine won Game 1, 21-3, in five innings. Laythan Demarest started on the mound for the Tigers and pitched four innings, allowing one hit, no runs and one walk with eight strikeouts. At the plate, he was 3-for-4 with a double and two runs.

Dawson Stanley was 2-for-2 with a home run, three runs and three RBI and Seth Butler was 2-for-2 with two doubles, three runs, a RBI and a walk.

Jake Darden was 2-for-2 with two doubles, three runs and four RBI and Tristan Ellison was 3-for-3 with two doubles, a triple, three runs and four RBI for the Tigers.

Eathan Smathers had a hit and a run and Dylan Hamre added a hit, a run and a RBI for MWP.

Napavine scored 13 runs in the second inning to pull away for good.

The Tigers took Game 2, 23-0, in five innings. At the plate, Stanley was 2-for-2 with a grand slam, three runs and six RBI and Gavin Parker was 2-for-4 with a run and two RBI.

Braiden Osborn was 2-for-3 with a double, a run and two RBI and Tristan Ellison was 2-for-3 with a double, a run and two RBI for the Tigers.

Napavine plated 15 runs in the second inning to earn the win.

"I thought we played well. We hit the ball very hard which was good to see," Napavine coach Brian Demarest said. "We had a good approach at the plate. We did what we needed to do which was good."

Napavine ends the regular season 9-7 overall and 7-6 in league games and awaits their district playoff fate. MWP ends the season 0-16 and 0-13 in league game.

Loggers Split With Mountaineers

RAINIER — Rainier won the first game but Onalaska bounced back to win the second game to earn a split of a Central 2B League baseball doubleheader here on Friday.

The Mountaineers took Game 1, 3-0. Tristen Lawrence pitched six innings for the Loggers, allowing nine hits and three earned runs with four strikeouts. Cody Cooper was 2-for-3 and AJ Volk added a hit.

Rainier's Ricky Cruse pitched a complete game, allowing three hits while striking out nine batters. Michael Green was 3-for-3 with a double, a run and a RBI.

The Mountaineers scored a run in the second, third and sixth innings to secure the win.

Onalaska won Game 2, 10-5. Tanner McLean pitched 5 2/3 innings, allowing nine hits and three runs in the win.

At the plate, Kyle Hamilton was 2-for-5 with a triple and a run and Ashton Haight was 2-for-4 with a run and a RBI.

Matt Kurzeika was 2-for-3 with two doubles, a run and a RBI and Cade Lawrence was 2-for-4 with a triple, a home run, two runs and four RBI. Cole Christensen was 2-for-4 with a run and a RBI for the Loggers.

Rainier took a 1-0 lead after two innings before the Loggers scored five runs in the third inning. Onalaska plated a run in the sixth and tallied four insurance runs in the seventh.

Onalaska (10-6, 8-5) travels to Toledo on Monday for a non-league game.

Montesano Blanks Tenino

MONTESANO — The Beavers couldn't generate any offense against Montesano as the Bulldogs earned a 6-0 win in a 1A Evergreen League baseball game here on Friday.

Alex Bratton pitched a complete game for the Beavers. Ben Wills earned the shutout in the complete game effort for Montesano.

Logan Brewer, Abe Nelson and Bratton each had a hit for the Beavers.

Montesano scored a run in the first, third, fourth and fifth innings before plating two runs in the sixth.

"He (Bratton) kept us in it the whole way, he did his job," Tenino coach Ryan Schlessler said. "When you don't score any runs, it's pretty hard to win baseball games. We had a couple opportunities we didn't take advantage of. We'll plug away and get better."

Tenino (6-11, 4-6) hosts Forks on Wednesday in a league game.

Tumwater Blanks Centralia

TUMWATER — Centralia's Jackson Hull turned in a complete game on the mound but the offense was the issue as Tumwater won 5-0 in an Evergreen 2A Conference baseball game here on Friday.

Tumwater scored a run in the second and added two runs in the third and sixth innings to complete the win.

The Tigers scattered five hits and didn't commit an error.

"He (Hull) did a good job keeping us in the ball game. His pitch count was down, (and) he gave us a chance to stay in it," Centralia coach Rex Ashmore said. "We didn't do anything at the plate. We struck out too many times once again, just not stringing anything together once again, not having good at bats."

Centralia (10-7, 6-6 league) hosts W.F. West on Monday in Round 2 of Swamp Cup baseball.

Bearcats Battle Past Warriors

W.F. West committed five errors but the Bearcats were able to overcome those mistakes in a 8-4 win over Rochester in an Evergreen 2A Conference baseball game at Bearcat Stadium in Chehalis on Friday.

Tanner Vaughn started for the Bearcats and threw four innings, allowing three hits, two earned runs and two walks while striking out six batters. Leandre Gaines pitched the final three innings, allowing five hits, two earned runs and one walk with two strikeouts. Jayden Lancaster started for Rochester and tossed four innings, allowing six hits, four earned runs and four walks while striking out two batters. Jared Winters pitched in relief and allowed four hits, three earned runs and one walk in two innings of work.

At the plate, Gaines was 2-for-3 with a double and three runs. Lane Douglass was 2-for-3 with a RBI and a walk and Max Taylor was 2-for-3 with two RBI.

The Bearcats plated a run in the second inning for a 1-0 lead and added three runs in the third for a 4-2 lead after three innings. W.F. West scored three more runs in the fifth before adding one more run in the sixth to complete the win.

"I thought we played pretty well offensively. I really liked how we responded every time Rochester put a couple runs on the board," W.F. West coach Bryan Bullock said. "We showed some fight tonight. They're a very good well coached team. It was a good league win."

Bullock highlighted the performance of Gaines, saying he made some great defensive plays as well as pitching three innings and overcoming some errors from his defense.

W.F. West (16-1, 12-0) travels back to Ed Wheeler Field on Monday for round two of Swamp Cup baseball. Rochester (7-7, 6-6) travels to Aberdeen on Monday.

Bats Carry Pirates Past River Ridge

ADNA — The offense was balanced and effective here Friday afternoon for the Pirates in a 13-8 non-league win over 2A River Ridge.

Adna scored seven runs in the fourth inning to take a 12-5 lead and held on the rest of the way for the win. Sawyer Burdick, Levi Gates, Abel Ingle and Elmer Loose all hit RBI doubles in the pivotal fourth frame.

"Really, we were just consistent," Adna coach Jon Rooklidge said, noting that the Pirates got a hit from every spot in the lineup save one — and that one managed to drive in runs. "So it was a good day, offensively."

Burdick finished 2 for 3 and drove in two runs, while Gates was 2 for 3 with a double and three RBIs. Ingle went 2 for 3 with an RBI, and Cole Fay was 2 for 4 with an RBI.

Gavin Guard, Bryce Lollar and Ingle all pitched for Adna.

"The pitchers threw okay. We had some defensive mistakes today, just some physical mistakes, and that probably changed things a bit," Rooklidge said. "But overall, the pitchers threw the ball fine. We've just got to do a better job defensively."

Adna (15-3, 11-2 league) enters the District 4 2B Baseball Tournament next Saturday.

Suhrbier Spins No-No Against Acorns

OAKVILLE — Nathan Suhrbier tossed an unconventional no-hitter here on Friday as Winlock defeated Oakville 17-2 in a non-league baseball tilt.

Suhrbier pitched five innings in the mercy-rule victory, collecting five strikeouts while walking seven Acorns. Oakville picked up a pair of runs thanks in part to a pair of errors by the Winlock defense.

"Nate Dawg finally found his attitude on the mound today and refused to buckle when things went a little haywire in the second and fourth innings," said Winlock coach Jordan Nailon. "He's a heckuva competitor when he remembers to be mad on the mound and the boys rallied behind him."

Suhrbier added a two RBI double at the plate to help his own cause. He also drew two walks, a bean ball, and scored a pair of runs.

Winlock totaled ten hits on the day to charge up the victory. Zach Prue was 3-for-5 with two runs scored and a RBI. Conor Gilreath was 3-for-4 with a double, three runs scored and a RBI. Kaden Harrington added a pair of hits, two runs and two RBI when he wasn't donning the tools of ignorance behind home plate and helping Suhrbier announce his presence with authority.

Gilreath also stepped up on defense for Winlock from his spot at third base. On the final play of the game Oakville dropped a bunt down the third baseline that looked like a sure hit until Gilreath charged in and threw on the run to beat the runner by half a step and preserve the no-no.

"I told the boys after the game that the last pitcher to spin a no-hitter for Winlock went to Toledo and then went on to UW," said Nailon in reference to former Toledo-Winlock Warhawk pitcher, Mack Gaul. "It was an honor to be able to share the field with these boys today. Nothing has come easy for us this year but no one will ever be able to take today's accomplishment away from this team. They've put their own unique mark on the program."

Winlock (2-11) will host Naselle on Tuesday.

CENTRALIA NATIVE RETURNS TO LAUNCH THORBECKES NUTRITION PROGRAM

Will Rubin / wrubin@chronline.com

Thorbeckes Nutrition Director Katia Mora stands next to a cooler that will hold grab-and-go food items at the Chehalis gym. Mora, a Centralia native, joined the staff last fall.

By Will Rubin
 wrubin@chronline.com

Thorbeckes in Chehalis may soon be able to offer more than a protein bar or hydrating beverage to members looking for a boost before or after working out.

The athletic club recently submitted an application to the city of Chehalis for a food permit allowing it to sell refrigerated food items at the front counter. The application lists an anticipated start date of May 16 and includes a menu listing options ranging from hard boiled eggs and fruit cups to quesadillas and quiche.

Junk food is nowhere to be found on the sample menu. The closest anyone could get to a cheat meal is a breakfast veggie burrito or a turkey sandwich.

“We want to have health-based snacks at our front desk so people can fuel up before or after a workout,” said Efrain Sanchez, general manager of Thorbeckes. “We want it to be quick, easy, grab-and-go type stuff.”

Sanchez credited Nutrition Director Katia Mora for her efforts in pushing to add the fresh food option to the facility. Thorbeckes owner Matthew Noren asked her to take on the fresh food project.

A Centralia Native, Mora joined the Thorbeckes staff last fall following more than two years in a variety of roles with the Seattle Children’s Hospital, the last year of which was spent as a dietetic intern.

Mora studied dietetics along with food and nutritional science at Seattle Pacific University. She graduated in 2017 and relished the opportunity to return home to start the nutrition and dietetic program at Thorbeckes.

“My residency director in Seattle told me for my last rotation that there was an opening at Providence Centralia Hospital and wanted to send me there,” Mora said. “(Sanchez) was a former instructor of mine at Centralia College, and he reached out to say (Thorbeckes) was looking to add a dietitian. I said yes because I always wanted to do something sports related and there are so few nutritionists and dietitians in Lewis County.”

Once tasked with creating the grab-and-go food aspect of Thorbeckes, Mora went in search of options that were natural, met a high-nutrition standard and that the company could purchase at a wholesale price that allowed it to keep it affordable for members.

“It’s hard to do, to get food that is healthy, cheap and comes from a good company,” Mora said. “Eating healthy doesn’t have to be boring. I want people to see that nutrition is such an important part of life, and I want to develop that kind of program here.”

Sanchez said the grab-and-go concept will be treated as a trial run at the Chehalis Thorbeckes, with the goal of expanding it to more locations if it is successful.

Mora has been working since the start of the year to establish a foundation for her vision of a broad nutrition and dietetic offering in the Twin Cities and beyond. She hosts regular nutrition talks at Thorbeckes locations that are free to attend and that cover topics such as diets for specific medical conditions.

On her long-term agenda is a desire to reach out to area schools to set up nutritional talks and advocate for healthier meals in schools. She became passionate about the subject after encountering children in Seattle as young as 8 years old who suffered from high cholesterol and hypertension.

“I have so many topics in my head,” Mora said. “I can’t wait to talk about all of them.”

Girls Night Out Coming to Downtown Centralia

Downtown Centralia will be filled with shoppers Saturday for Girls Night Out. Some 30 businesses are slated to participate in the semiannual event, which is designed to draw both local and out-of-town shoppers to the shops, services and eateries along the Tower Avenue corridor. Businesses offer special merchandise, sales and prizes for the event.

According to Sandi Walczyk, owner of The Bath Depot and a member of the organizing team, Girls Night Out has become a much-anticipated event in the local community as well as the broader region. “Women contact us from Olympia to Vancouver to find out when the event is taking place so they can make plans to attend.”

In addition to drawing shoppers to downtown Centralia, the event supports the Human Response Network’s efforts to aid victims of domestic violence and sexual assault in Lewis County. A portion of the “passport” sales for the event goes to HRN.

HRN volunteers will staff the two starting points for Girls Night Out — HUBBUB (328 N. Tower Ave.) and The Station Coffee Bar & Bistro (120 S. Tower Ave.). Participants may purchase their “passport” for $5 at either starting point starting at 2 p.m. (no pre-sales are available).

The first 250 receive a goody bag of treats. Those who visit each participating business and have their passport stamped have a chance at winning a grand prize basket.

The event runs from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. Participating businesses are marked with bouquets of pink, black and silver balloons. Organizers have arranged for a limousine to help participants navigate the route, and the Centralia volunteer police patrol will be on hand as well.

DON CHEADLE'S LONG MARVEL JOURNEY LEADS HIM TO 'AVENGERS: ENDGAME'

By Peter Sblendorio
New York Daily News

Even War Machine can't believe the hype machine.

Don Cheadle has an Oscar nomination, a pair of Golden Globes and a string of acclaimed performances in critical darlings and big-screen hits, but he's never seen a buildup like the one for "Avengers: Endgame," which finally hits theaters Thursday.

"I've never been a part of something that has this much anticipation, where fans are this rabid for it," Cheadle, 54, told the Daily News. "They're so into these characters, and they're so knowledgeable about who they are and what the relationships are and where this thing goes."

It hasn't gone in a straight line for Cheadle's character of Lt. Col. James (Rhodey) Rhodes, aka War Machine. But now in his seventh movie in the Marvel Cinematic Universe, Cheadle says there's no question where his character's loyalty lies in the Avengers' fight with the all-powerful Thanos.

"I think more than anything, he's just sort of accepted his place, and not as sort of a reticent accepting it, but really sort of grown into being someone who feels like he belongs with the Avengers," Cheadle said of his character, which he began playing nearly a decade ago in "Iron Man 2."

"Earlier in Rhodes' start in this universe, he kind of had one foot in both camps," Cheadle explained. "His allegiance to the military, and having to be somebody who was a leveling force for Tony (Stark) and trying to bring him down to earth when he wanted to skirt the rules and laws. And even in 'Civil War,' he was always on the side of, we have to do this the 'right way.' I think now he has fully embraced his role with the Avengers and knows that it's going to be up to them."

The stakes have never been higher for Earth's Mightiest Heroes than they are in "Endgame." The film comes on the heels of last year's "Avengers: Infinity War," which ended with Thanos killing half the universe with the snap of his fingers after obtaining the six Infinity Stones. Spider-Man, Black Panther and Dr. Strange were seemingly among the casualties.

"Endgame," directed by Marvel veterans Joe and Anthony Russo, is a movie 11 years in the making, with the previous 21 flicks telling the interweaving stories of dozens of heroes and villains.

Fans scrambled to the internet when opening-day tickets went on sale. Some have since been listed for resale for thousands of dollars.

War Machine and other surviving Avengers including Iron Man, Captain America, Thor and Black Widow have been centerpieces in the film franchise for most of the past decade. But speculation about the future of these characters continues to run rampant.

Meanwhile, newer additions to the series including Captain Marvel, Black Panther and Ant-Man have earned large followings in recent years.

Although the fates of the heroes — both those living and those turned to dust after Thanos' snap — are uncertain heading into "Endgame," Cheadle says it feels like a changing of the guard is happening to an extent.

"Yeah, somewhat. There's a passing of the torch," he said. "There's an infusion of new blood and new players, and they are taking up the mantle. It just speaks to the longevity of this franchise and where else it can go. What happens if they have reached the end of their thing, and the new family that comes in and keeps it going, I think this is going to be here for a while. I think Marvel's here for a while."

War Machine is a soldier who has beat the odds and bounced back countless times. With his state-of-the-art suit of armor and explosive weapons, his formidable physical strength matches his mental fortitude.

The actor has taken his own stands, voicing his support for important causes on social media and wearing a shirt that read "Protect Trans Kids" during his hosting gig on "Saturday Night Live" in February.

"The people that are being champions for those who are fighting to have their voices heard were this way before the movies," Cheadle said. "The movies and the sort of attention gives you a bigger platform and allows you to turn conversations sometimes toward those issues that you want to speak about when people turn the lights on and put a camera in front of you and a microphone in front of you."

"I was speaking out about stuff when nobody was listening," he explained.

For all the action that occurs in the Marvel movies, Cheadle admits with a laugh that people might be surprised to learn how mundane the film sets can be.

"There's a lot of sitting around," he said. "If Boggle is exciting for people, to watch people play Boggle, then they would be excited to come to set, because it's a lot of what's happening between takes. ... It's not as glamorous as people would think."

But playing War Machine has been a wild ride for Cheadle, who relished doing his own stunts during his long stint in the role.

"Just playing a character for nine years, that in it of itself is something that's just unbelievable," Cheadle said. "That this has gone on this long. ... I've done two series during the time that I've been on this movie. A lot of things change, but ... the constant of coming back and seeing these same people ... we really have a good time together and respect one another and are very collaborative."

Deputy Sheriffs Again Find Liquor at Stensland Residence Near Redmond on April 27, 1926

On April 27, 1926, the King County Sheriff's Department issued a search warrant to look for liquor at the Ole Stensland residence located one or two miles east of Redmond. Deputies had raided and found moonshine in Ole Stensland's residence on March 26, 1926. This was but one of many raids carried out by the Sheriff's Department during Prohibition.

This time they find two gallon bottles, four quart bottles, and two pint bottles of moonshine.

Prohibition, outlawing the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages, took effect in Washington state in 1916. The year 1919 marked ratification of the "bone dry" Prohibition amendment to the U.S. Constitution, making the manufacture, transportation, and sale of alcoholic beverages illegal throughout the nation. The Prohibition amendment was repealed in 1933.

Group Health Cooperative Holds Its First Membership Meeting Outside Seattle, In Tacoma Dome, and Members Defeat an Attempt To Ban Abortions on April 27, 1985

On April 27, 1985, Group Health Cooperative holds its first membership meeting outside Seattle, in Tacoma Dome, and the members soundly defeat an attempt to ban abortions at Group Health facilities. The meeting has a record turnout of some 2,000 members who are met by busloads of picketers and counter-pickers who harangue members to support or oppose a resolution to repeal Group Health's performance of abortions.

Aubrey Davis, chair of the board, presided over the meeting.

Other significant actions taken included a proposed by-law amendment to provide for mail-in ballots on all future amendments and resolutions. Former trustee Eleanor Brand sharply opposed this, feeling that the amendment would nullify the annual meeting as a forum. Such a meeting, she declared, "is the only time the membership has the authority to control the Cooperative. Mail balloting destroys this authority" (Crowley, 192). University of Washington Professor Alex Gottfried also objected, arguing that attendance at annual meetings would dwindle and voting would become more "amenable to special interests" (Crowley, 192). Despite these objections, the members passed the amendment.

The members also passed a resolution dealing with an enormous increase in Group Health's administrative costs since 1982. The members rejected a resolution mandating severe cutbacks, but directed the board to reassess the commitment to growth.

They passed another bylaw amendment replacing Group Health's district structure with Medical Center Councils, and replacing the District Council with a Medical Center Council Assembly mandated to meet four times a year.

The debate on Resolution 3, to ban abortions, was passionate but civil. It was moved and championed by Tom Wingard-Phillips. The only real fireworks came over a proposal to vote by secret ballot, which was defeated. Group health members defeated the resolution to ban abortions 1,146.5 to 293.

Shaping a Different Kind of Jewish Community on Long Island

By Bart Jones
Newsday

It was an audacious idea at the time: Bring together kids from the three denominations of Judaism — Reform, Conservative and Orthodox — into a single after-school program to teach them about their faith.

Many Jews in Merrick shook their heads. They thought the differences in the branches couldn't be bridged.

Today, 30 years later, the trailblazing program serves as a model to foster greater unity in the Jewish world, organizers said. "The idea was that we wanted to do something that would send a message ... that what unites us is much greater than what differentiates us," said Rabbi Charles Klein, leader of the Merrick Jewish Centre and one of the program's founders.

Created in 1989, the program was the first of its kind on Long Island and possibly in the nation, Klein and others said. In the past few years, a handful of similar programs have popped up, said Rabbi Joseph Potasnik of the New York Board of Rabbis.

"I think you are seeing it more now than you did in the past," Potasnik said. "I think there are many who recognize we need to be together, especially in smaller communities."

Getting the Merrick program off the ground wasn't easy because there were members in each movement who couldn't see how everyone could come together, organizers said. And there are real distinctions: Orthodox Jews, for instance, keep kosher and men and boys wear a kippa, or skullcap, while Reform Jews often do neither.

"It took a long time to convince everyone that we would respect all the different aspects," said Les Grussgott, a lay organizer. "There is a belief that it could only be one way. Either you are what you are or you are nothing." Those days are over.

Now, for a couple of hours every Tuesday evening, about 150 kids — they range from seventh-graders to seniors in high school — get together to talk, learn about Judaism and have a little fun like learning an Israeli dance or woodworking.

Where they meet alternates year to year. One year, it's at a Reform synagogue; the next year, a Conservative synagogue. No Orthodox synagogue in Merrick is big enough to accommodate the class, said Grussgott, who is Orthodox.

Four synagogues participate: two Conservative, Merrick Jewish Centre and Congregation Beth Ohr in neighboring Bellmore; one Reform, Temple Beth Am in Merrick; and one Orthodox, Congregation Ohav Shalom in Merrick.

The school teaches respect for the tenets and practices of each movement, Grussgott said. For instance, when classes are held at the Conservative synagogue, students must wear a kippa. At the Reform synagogue, kippas aren't required, though Reform students are encouraged to wear them out of respect for their Orthodox and Conservative peers.

"We had to balance, and thank God, it worked out," Grussgott said. "They truly understood."

One Tuesday night, a wood-working teacher showed students how to make a mezuzah, a small box containing a parchment with Hebrew verses from the Torah that Jews traditionally affix to doorways. Nearby, a group of girls practiced a traditional Israeli dance called the Horah.

In another classroom, students watched clips of "Schindler's List," the 1993 film about a German industrialist who saved more than a thousand Jews from the gas chambers during the Holocaust.

"I think it's really cool because all different types of Jews are learning in the same place, and learning the same thing," said Gabe Ades, 12, a seventh-grader.

Organizers have kept the program fresh by incorporating more technology and bringing in speakers such as Israeli soldiers and Holocaust survivors, said Rabbi Mickey Baum of Temple Beth Am.

The program also keeps Merrick's young Jewish population united, because they all come together at Merrick Avenue Middle School but then are split up among three public high schools that serve Merrick and Bellmore, said Charles Rosenblum, a leader of Temple Beth Am. Some Orthodox children in Merrick enroll in private Jewish academies or schools.

Church News

Westminster Presbyterian to Host Friendship Day

The annual Church Women United May Friendship Day celebration will be at noon Friday, May 3, at the Westminster Presbyterian Church in Chehalis.

Peter Abbarno will be receiving the CWU's Human Rights award for his volunteer work and for the support of the non-denominational Borst Pioneer Church in Centralia.

The Westminster Presbyterian church is located at 349 N. Market Blvd., Chehalis. Lunch will be served.

Church Women United is a national ecumenical Christian women's movement representing Protestant, Roman Catholic, Orthodox and other Christian women.

For more information, contact Ann Vander Stoep, 360-748-8136.

"This is an incredible place to be," said Samantha Koffler, 17, a senior. "I think it is needed. It's so good to have the opportunity to meet with other types of Jews and create a community."

Friends of Seminary Hill Plan Events

Like a flower bursting in bloom, the Friends of the Seminary Hill Natural Area are opening their year of events with a quick burst of springtime activities.

The first will be a dedication of new interpretive displays and a celebration of the group's longtime volunteers, to be held at 5 p.m. Tuesday, April 30, in the Barner Drive parking lot entrance to the natural area.

Representatives of the Centralia Armory and state Military Department will be on hand to dedicate a series of colorful informational and historical signs that they helped put into place over the winter.

Free refreshments will be available for that event.

At 6 p.m. that same evening, Lisa Carlson, botany professor at Centralia College, will lead the annual Wildflower Walk.

Carlson will teach attendees to identify native wildflowers and enjoy the beauty of spring in this century-old native forest just blocks from downtown Centralia.

Later that week, on Saturday, May 4, the FSHNA will host their annual work party. The event is being moved back slightly from years past (it is normally held on Earth Day), and is being called the Spring Clean-Up on Seminary Hill.

Attendees are asked to wear sturdy shoes suitable for trail work. Tools and work gloves will be available, but attendees are asked to bring their own if possible.

Follow all the activities at the Seminary Hill Natural Area at facebook.com/SeminaryHill, twitter.com/GoSeminaryHill, or instagram.com/GoSeminaryHill.

ADVICE: Dear Abby

Former Stepdad Seeks More Contact Than Woman Wants

DEAR ABBY: I am in my mid-20s, and a few years ago my mother divorced my stepfather. They were married for 17 years, and I grew up with him in the house for most of my life. After my sister was born, his behavior toward me changed to the point that in high school I spent most of my free time elsewhere to avoid his passive-aggressive behavior toward me.

Now that he and Mom are no longer together, he has been contacting me wanting to spend time with me. I feel awkward spending time with him because he acts like we were best friends when I was growing up. If I try to politely get out of it, he makes dramatic comments about no one caring if he lives or dies.

I would like to cut him out of my life and avoid the stress he causes me, but I'm afraid it will cause a rift between me and my sister, who had a great relationship with him and is always trying to get me to talk to him. I also know if I try to cut him out, he will start harassing my sister, and she doesn't need that while she's going to college. Should I stick it out for her? — WANTING TO END TUG-OF-WAR

DEAR WANTING: Have a conversation with your half-sister and explain that when you were growing up you didn't have the same kind of relationship with her father that she did. Tell her you hope this won't cause any problems between the two of you because you know she loves him, but that for the sake of your own mental health, you intend to avoid him and the unpleasant memories he evokes as much as possible. If you are thrown together for some occasions, at least there will be others around to buffer the contact.

DEAR ABBY: I recently found out my husband has been sending money to family and friends behind my back. He constantly sends money to his adult daughter who plays him like a fiddle.

It isn't large amounts, but I have two issues with it. When it's time to pay bills, I end up paying more than my share because he doesn't have the money (we split our budget a while ago). Also, when I have asked if he has been doing this, he lies to my face.

This isn't the first time he has lied to me, and I don't know how to move past it. Last time, it was about drugs. I was ready to walk away because therapy helped me see that the problem wasn't me, but then we worked on it. Now it's about money.

I love him and would like to spend the rest of my life with him, but if there's anything I can't stand it's a liar. What should I do? — LIED TO IN NEW ENGLAND

DEAR LIED TO: You should not be paying more than your share of the bills. It isn't fair to you. By paying other people's bills, your husband is enabling them to remain dependent upon him — and you. Call the therapist who helped you the last time. It appears you have more work to do.

DEAR ABBY: I'm having a picnic at my house. I invited the old man next door, and now he has taken it upon himself to invite other neighbors. What am I supposed to do? — DISCONCERTED IN THE EAST

DEAR DISCONCERTED: The old man next door has a lot of nerve. You have several choices. Tell him to uninvite the people he invited to your picnic, do it yourself or roll over and let him take advantage of your hospitality.

HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, APRIL 29, 2019

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Don't make a change based on hearsay. If someone makes you an offer, get it in writing. If you rethink the way you handle money, you'll discover a way to lower your overhead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Keep your distance from anyone looking for an argument. Keep an eye out for opportunities that will allow you to use your talents and skills. Romance will improve a relationship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Don't take anything or anyone for granted. If you want something done, do it yourself without overspending. Aim for stability and greater security, not for uncertainty and confusion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Change doesn't always bring the happiness you are looking for. Before you alter your life personally or professionally, consider the consequences of your actions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You'll be torn between what you want to do and what you should do. Stick to facts and avoid temptation. Do what you know is right.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
The best way to overcome personal problems or handle interactions with a difficult person in your life is to offer incentives. Once you take care of your responsibilities, do something you enjoy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
You'll have plenty of options, ideas and support, so don't hesitate to follow your heart, chase your dreams and fulfill your destiny. An offer shouldn't cost you emotionally or financially.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Problems will develop if you let someone meddle in your personal affairs. Don't mix business with pleasure or allow friends or relatives to interfere in your love life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Don't share your thoughts, feelings or plans with anyone. Make adjustments at home that will contribute to your comfort and entertainment. Be honest when dealing with tax, legal and health issues.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Let your experience guide you to make the right choice. Getting together with an old friend or attending a reunion will lead to mixed emotions. Personal improvements and health should be your priority.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
A change of attitude will alter your lifestyle. Not everyone will be happy with the choices you make, but you have to do what's best for you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Look inward and make personal growth a priority. A change of scenery, company or activity will do you good. Walk away from temptation, indulgent behavior and unsafe situations.

TUESDAY, APRIL 30, 2019

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
A chance to alter the way you deal with domestic, financial, legal or health issues should be looked at carefully. Someone will tempt you with false information.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Confusion will set in due to mixed messages someone sends you. When uncertain, ask direct questions, and be prepared to walk away if you aren't satisfied with the answer.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Make your point, but if your audience isn't receptive, don't waste your time. Draw on your skills and experience to get things done.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Participate in events and activities that are geared toward learning, meeting like-minded people and supporting a cause you believe in. Personal improvement and romance are favored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Live and learn. Attend functions that interest you and draw on expert advice before you jump into something you know little about. Don't take risks, overspend or indulge.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Engage in something that interests you. If you expand your skills, knowledge and insight, you will find a way to turn a negative into a positive. Romance is encouraged.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Focus on creativity, new beginnings and valuable partnerships. A project you've long thought about can be started. Don't feel that you must stick to traditional methods.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
If you control your emotions, personal matters will be easier to deal with. Refuse to let anyone interfere with the way you run your household or conduct a relationship with a loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Keep the past where it belongs. If you give someone a second chance to disrupt your life, the blame will be yours and yours alone. Walk away from unpredictable people and situations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
If you get involved in events that feel passionate about, you'll meet people who will become lifelong allies. An encounter with someone from your past will pique your interest.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Don't let confusion set in due to someone else's words or actions. Stick to the facts and don't repeat information that may not be true. Emotional manipulation is apparent.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Get along with your peers, and protect your reputation. A jealous or competitive individual will not play fair. Keep an open mind, but use your intelligence to outsmart opposition.

WILMOVSKY, HUSBAND AND WIFE, as Grantor(s), to PRLAP, INC., as Trustee, to secure an obligation in favor of BANK OF AMERICA, N.A., as Beneficiary, the beneficial interest in which was assigned to U.S. BANK NATIONAL ASSOCIATION, NOT IN ITS INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY BUT SOLELY AS TRUSTEE FOR THE RMAC TRUST, SERIES 2016-CTT, under an Assignment recorded under Auditor's File No 3471636. II. No action commenced by the Beneficiary of the Deed of Trust or the Beneficiary's successor is now pending to seek satisfaction of the obligation in any Court by reason of the Borrower's or Grantor's default on the obligation secured by the Deed of Trust/Mortgage. III. The default(s) for which this foreclosure is made is/are as follows: Failure to pay when due the following amounts which are now in arrears: $63,970.99 IV. The sum owing on the obligation secured by the Deed of Trust is: The principal sum of $182,854.72, together with interest as provided in the Note from 3/25/2016, and such other costs and fees as are provided by statute. V. The above described real property will be sold to satisfy the expense of sale and the obligation secured by the Deed of Trust as provided by statute. Said sale will be made without warranty, expressed or implied, regarding title, possession or encumbrances on 5/10/2019. The defaults referred to in Paragraph III must be cured by 4/29/2019, (11 days before the sale date) to cause a discontinuance of the sale. The sale will be discontinued and terminated if at any time before 4/29/2019 (11 days before the sale) the default as set forth in Paragraph III is cured and the Trustee's fees and costs are paid. Payment must be in cash or with cashiers or certified checks from a State or federally chartered bank. The sale may be terminated any time after the 4/29/2019 (11 days before the sale date) and before the sale, by the Borrower or Grantor or the or the Grantor's successor interest or the holder of any recorded junior lien or encumbrance by paying the principal and interest secured by the Deed of Trust, plus costs, fees and advances, if any, made pursuant to the terms of the obligation and/or Deed of Trust and curing all other defaults. VI. A written Notice of Default was transmitted by the Beneficiary or Trustee to the Borrower and Grantor at the following address(es): SEE ATTACHED EXHIBIT "1" by both first class and certified mail on 8/14/2018, proof of which is in the possession of the Trustee; and the Borrower and Grantor were personally served, if applicable, with said written Notice of Default or the written Notice of Default was posted in a conspicuous place on the real property described in Paragraph I above, and the Trustee has possession of proof of such service or posting. VII. The Trustee whose name and address are set forth below will provide in writing to anyone requesting it, a statement of all costs and fees due at any time prior to the sale. VIII. The effect of the sale will be to deprive the Grantor and all those who hold by, through or under the Grantor of all their interest in the above-described property. IX. Anyone having any objections to this sale on any grounds whatsoever will be afforded an opportunity to be heard as to those objections if they bring a lawsuit to restrain the sale pursuant to RCW 61.24.130. Failure to bring such a lawsuit may result in a waiver of any proper grounds for invalidating the Trustee's sale. X. NOTICE TO OCCUPANTS OR TENANTS - The purchaser at the trustee's sale is entitled to possession of the property on the 20th day following the sale, as against the grantor under the Deed of Trust (the owner) and anyone having an interest junior to the Deed of Trust, including occupants who are not tenants. After the 20th day following the sale the purchaser has the right to evict occupants who are not tenants by summary proceedings under chapter 59.12 RCW. For tenant-occupied property, the purchaser shall provide a tenant with written notice in accordance with RCW 61.24.060. If you are a servicemember or a dependent of a servicemember, you may be entitled to certain protections under the federal Servicemembers Civil Relief Act and any comparable state laws regarding the risk of foreclosure. If you believe you may be entitled to these protections, please contact our office immediately. THIS NOTICE IS THE FINAL STEP BEFORE THE FORECLOSURE SALE OF YOUR HOME. You have only 20 DAYS from the recording date on this notice to pursue mediation. DO NOT DELAY. 109546 Notice of Application and Mitigated Determination of NonSignificance

STATE ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY ACT

Notice of Application and Mitigated Determination of NonSignificance

April 27, 2019

Lead agency: City of Centralia

Agency Contact: Jennifer Kreifels, jkreifels@cityofcentralia.com, (360) 330-7662

Agency File Number: 2019 0196

Description of proposal - The 88 room, 4 story hotel and 48,200 sf gross building area. Proposed parking lot, utilities, drainage, roadway improvements and landscaping. Total property area of 3.6 acres and disturbance area of 2.9 ac. A Boundary Line Adjustment is proposed; La Quinta will be on Lot 2. This lot was previously a restaurant with paved parking. The restaurant has been abandoned and will be demolished.

Location of proposal - 1225 Mellen St., Centralia. NE corner of Mellen St. and Ellsbury St. SW1/4 of Section 8, T14N, R2W, W.M., City of Centralia, Lewis County

Applicant/Owner - DAN TAYLOR/La Quinta Centralia LLC, (206) 465-2491, danielb719@comcast.net

City of Centralia has determined that this proposal will not have a probable significant adverse impact on the environment. Pursuant to WAC 197-11-350(3), the proposal has been clarified, changed, and conditioned to include necessary mitigation measures to avoid, minimize or compensate for probable significant impacts. An environmental impact statement (EIS) is not required under RCW 43.21C.030(2)(c). The necessary mitigation measures are listed below, the Environmental Checklist is attached and available at: <http://www.cityofcentralia.com/Page.asp?NavID=402>

This determination is based on the following findings and conclusions: The mitigation proposed for the portion of the property along China Creek includes the area between the high water line and the proposed paved area and any areas disturbed by construction.

1. The existing creek banks of China Creek along the proposed development consists primarily of blackberry brambles any other invasive plant species along with trash and garbage. This mitigation area will consist of a rain garden, flat areas, sloped banks, utilities, and drainage outlets. It will be cleared of non-native and invasive materials and debris. It will have new topsoil added to assist with plant growth and absorption of runoff. The rain garden will filter contaminants, provide additional type of ecosystem, and let the water go back into the ground. There are actually 2 additional rain gardens on site. Each rain garden is also meant to be visually appealing.
2. The area at China Creek along the paved areas of the site, will be replanted with native plant material. The native plants will help with erosion. A wide variety of plants of different sizes were selected to ensure creation of an interesting visual aesthetic while also encouraging wildlife diversity.

This MDNS is issued under WAC 197-11-340(2) and the comment period will end on May 12, 2019. This may be your only chance to comment. Send comments to Jennifer Kreifels, 118 W Maple St., jkreifels@cityofcentralia.com, (360) 330-7662

109479 Public Notice

PUBLIC NOTICE Centralia Coal Mine Minor Permit Revision Environmental Assessment Unsigned Finding of No Significant Impact

The U.S. Department of the Interior, Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement (OSMRE), Western Region Office, has prepared an Environmental Assessment (EA) and unsigned Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI) for TransAlta Centralia Mining LLC's Centralia Mine minor permit revision for Permit No. WA-0001E.

TransAlta Centralia Mining LLC (TCM) owns and operates the Centralia Mine. TCM ceased active coal mining operations at Centralia Mine in 2006 and has since been conducting reclamation-only activities. The mine is located in Lewis County approximately six miles northeast of Centralia, Washington.

The OSMRE is responsible for reviewing plans to conduct coal mining and reclamation operations on lands containing leased Federal coal. OSMRE is announcing that the EA and an unsigned FONSI are available online and is requesting public comments on the documents.

TCM is proposing the following minor revision of the existing surface coal mining permit and Permit Application Package (PAP): The proposed minor permit revision would change the land-use designation of approximately 81 acres within the Centralia Mine permit area. The purpose of the land use change is to allow for a 150-foot-wide powerline corridor through the Centralia Mine permit area for the Skookumchuck Wind Energy Project.

If no action is taken, TCM would continue reclamation activities in accordance with their current permit. Interested persons may view the EA and the unsigned FONSI on the OSMRE website at: https://www.wrcc.osmre.gov/initiatives/centraliamine.shtm.

This notice initiates the public comment process on the EA and unsigned FONSI. To ensure consideration of your comments, we must receive your electronic or written comments by May 28, 2019. Comments may be submitted in writing or by e-mail. At the top of your letter or in the subject line of your e-mail message, please indicate that the comments are "Centralia Coal Mine EA Comments."

E-mail comments should be sent to: gpinkham@osmre.gov. Comments delivered by U.S. Postal Service Express Mail or by courier service must be delivered by May 28, 2019 and should be sent to: OSMRE-Western Region ATTN: Gretchen Pinkham, Centralia Mine 1999 Broadway, Suite 3320 Denver, CO 80202-3050

Comments received, including names and addresses of those who comment, will be considered part of the public record for this project and will be available for public inspection. By including your address, phone number, email address, or other personally identifying information in your comment, you should be aware that your entire comment, including your personally identifying information, may be made publicly available at any time. While you can ask us in your comment to withhold your personal identifying information from public review, we cannot guarantee that we will be able to do so.

For further information about the Project, NEPA Process, or to have your name added to the mailing list, contact: Gretchen Pinkham, OSMRE Project Manager, at 303-293-5088 or gpinkham@osmre.gov.

The default(s) referred to in paragraph III must be cured by the 13th day of May, 2019, to cause a discontinuance of the sale. The sale will be discontinued and terminated if at any time on or before the 13th day of May, 2019 the default(s) as set forth in paragraph III is/are cured and the Trustee's fees and costs are paid. The sale may be terminated any time after the 13th day of May, 2019, and before the sale by the Borrower, Grantor, any Guarantor, or the holder of any recorded junior lien or encumbrance paying the entire principal and interest secured by the Deed of Trust, plus costs, fees, and advances, if any, made pursuant to the terms of the obligation and/or Deed of Trust, and curing all other defaults.

VI.

A written notice of default was transmitted by the Beneficiary or Trustee to the Borrower and Grantor on November 7, 2018 at the following addresses by U.S. Mail, proof of which is in the possession of the Trustee; and the Borrower and Grantor was served on the 27th day of November, 2018, with said written notice of default by posting said notice of default to the front door on the real property described in paragraph I above, and the Trustee has possession of proof of such service or posting. ZACHARY M. WILSON 167 Damron Road Mossyrock, WA 98564

VII.

The Trustee whose name and address are set forth below will provide in writing to anyone requesting it, a statement of all costs and fees due at any time prior to the sale.

VIII.

The effect of the sale will be to deprive the Grantor and all those who hold by, through or under the Grantor of all their interest in the above-described property.

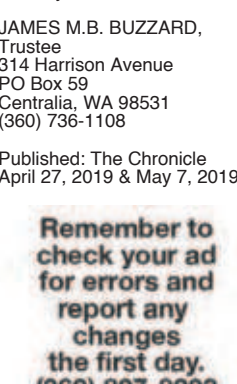

IX.

Anyone having any objection to the sale on any grounds whatsoever will be afforded an opportunity to be heard as to those objections if they bring a lawsuit to restrain the sale pursuant to RCW 61.24.130. Failure to bring such a lawsuit may result in a waiver of any proper grounds for invalidating the Trustee's sale.

DATED this 21st day of January, 2019.

JAMES M.B. BUZZARD, Trustee 314 Harrison Avenue PO Box 59 Centralia, WA 98531 (360) 736-1108

Let's Play Ping-Pong!

History of Ping-Pong

In the 1800s in England, the winter weather made it hard to play sports like tennis outside. People invented an indoor game for wintertime fun. The game was such a hit, that soon people were playing it year-round.

What is Ping-Pong?

Ping-Pong is a tennis game played on a table with a small ball and small paddles. Use the code to find out another name for this game.

▲	■	◆	●	◀	▶	◊	◐	◑

 ◆ = B    ◊ = N
 ● = E    ◐ = S
 ◑ = I    ▶ = T

The First Ping-Pong Balls

The first Ping-Pong balls were made of different materials. Sometimes they were made of rubber, string and even old champagne corks. In 1901, the Englishman called James Gibb discovered that balls made of celluloid worked better. Today, most balls are made of a plastic that is very much like celluloid.

How many Ping-Pong balls and Ping-Pong paddles can you find on this page?

Amazing Ping-Pong Records & Firsts

Do the math under each of these statements to see if they are true or false. If the answer is an even number, that statement is true. Odd numbers are false.

The first world championship table tennis games were held in London in 1926.

$15 + 9 =$

In 1988, table tennis was first played in the Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

$18 + 4 =$

The official record for the fastest Ping-Pong ball hit is 72.08 miles per hour (116 kph), set by Lukasz Budner in Poland in 2016.

$25 + 7 =$

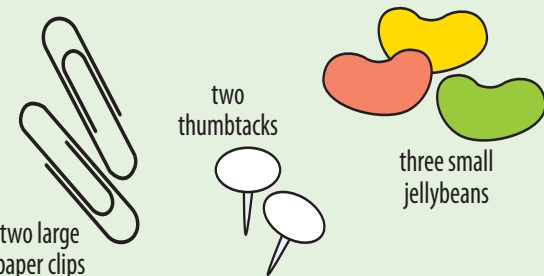

The World Record for the longest Ping-Pong rally is 8 hours, 40 minutes and 5 seconds set in 2014 in London.

Light and Bouncy

The official rules of Ping-Pong state that the ball shall be: spherical, with a diameter of 1.6 inches (40 mm) and weigh 0.1 ounces (2.7 grams) and be made of celluloid or similar plastic material.

Which of these items weigh about the same as a Ping-Pong ball?

ANSWER: All of them.

Why is it called Ping-Pong?

Ping-Pong is an onomatopoeia, or a word that sounds like the sound it describes. Ping and pong are the sounds the ball makes when it is hit by a paddle and bounces on the table.

Remember how to spell onomatopoeia by finding each of the letters in the word in the newspaper. Cut out the letters and glue them below to spell onomatopoeia.

Extra! Extra! That Sounds Good

Who Won the Ping-Pong Games?

In Ping-Pong, the first player to reach 11 points wins that game as long as they are two points ahead of the opponent when they get 11 points. If not, the game keeps going until a player has 11 points or more and is ahead by two points.

Circle the scores that are winning scores in Ping-Pong.

Player One	Player Two
