Chehalis Home for Sex Offenders Vacated

By The Chronicle

Despite requesting a hearing that was set for June 20 to discuss building and zoning violations attributed to a Chehalis home set aside for sex offenders, owners failed to file an application for a conditional use permit and the home has been vacated, Chehalis city staff told The Chronicle this week.

The home in the 600 block of Franklin Avenue in Chehalis came under scrutiny last month after it was revealed that owner

"It was neat," said Isaac Garza, of Rochester, who participated with his family. "I enjoyed it. It could have been a little cooler."

Despite the first outbreak of sweltering heat this summer, the weekend's second-annual Ride the Willapa and Tour De Farms was a well-attended success, organizers said Saturday.

While many riders commented on the heat, organizers said it didn't seriously impact the event. Volunteers patrolled the trail to Workers build a burlap, plywood and steel-pipe structure to contain the rootball so they can move the roughly 100-foot sequoia tree in Boise, Idaho, Thursday, June 22. The sequoia tree sent more than a century ago by naturalist John Muir to Idaho and planted in a Boise medical doctor's yard has become an obstacle to progress.

Giant Sequoia Move on Schedule in Idaho, Tree Doing Well

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A massive Idaho tree that grew over more than a century from a seedling sent by a noted naturalist has been uprooted and moved about two blocks Sunday to a new location.

David Cox of tree-moving company Environmental Design said Saturday the 10-story sequoia was doing well, and everything was in place for the 800,000-pound landmark to move on inflatable rollers shortly after midnight.

St. Luke's Health System in Boise is paying $300,000 to relocate the tree to make room for an expansion.

The tree reached it new home Sunday morning after starting to roll around 1 a.m.

The tree is believed to be Idaho's largest sequoia, a type of tree that isn't native to the state.

The sequoia was sent to Boise as a seedling by naturalist John Muir, who played a key role in establishing California's Sequoia National Park.

Town Limits Councilman's Broadcast of Taps Over Loudspeaker

GLEN ROCK, Pa. (AP) — A Pennsylvania town councilman who broadcasts taps at his home through loudspeakers every night must limit the activity.

The Glen Rock Borough Council voted Wednesday to restrict Councilman Joshua Corney's broadcast of the song to Sunday nights and to certain flag holidays like the Fourth of July, Memorial Day and Patriot's Day, The York Dispatch reported. Corney didn't attend the meeting because he was recovering from knee surgery.

Several people who live near Corney complained that the nightly broadcasts violate the borough's noise ordinance and create a disturbance, according to Councilwoman Victoria Ribeiro. One of Corney's neighbor's believes the nightly broadcasts are aggravating the symptoms of his Parkinson's disease and dementia, Ribeiro said.

The Navy lieutenant commander who served in Iraq and Afghanistan said he plays the recording of the bugle call for "lights out" to honor those in the armed forces. He said he's willing to work the situation out.

"I am willing to compromise, I am willing to work it out, but I can only do it within reason," Corney said. "And I'm not going to do it at the sacrifice of my constitutional rights."

The taps play automatically around 8 p.m., and Corney said he has a home security concern.

'You're kind of sending a signal out there — 'Hey, I'm not home because I'm not playing it," he said.

'Explicit' Show at South African Prison Ignites Scandal

JOHANNESBURG (AP) At least 13 South African officials face possible suspension after photos showing scantily clad female entertainers with inmates at a Johannesburg prison circulated on social media.

The correctional services department said Monday that there was a security breach and that the "explicit entertainment" should not have been allowed at a 'vouth month" event on June 21.

Photos show a total of three women in black leotards or undergarments and knee-high boots. In one photo, a woman is dancing with a smiling man in an orange prison uniform; in another, the women are surinclude prisoners and at least one official.

Radio Field Day Is Reunion of Friends, Rehearsal for Disasters

ANNUAL EVENT: Radio Operators Practice Skills at Fort Borst Park

By Natalie Johnson

njohnson@chronline.com

The weekend's Amateur Radio Field Day, hosted locally at Fort Borst Park, was for some a reunion of family members and friends and a way to connect with fellow ham radio operators.

But the Field Day also has a more important purpose, said Bob Willey, emergency coordinator for the Centralia Amateur Radio Emergency Services, or ARES.

The annual nationwide gettogether also helps amateur radio operators hold themselves to a high standard and prepare themselves for an emergency that knocks out other forms of communications.

"Our motto is, 'When all else fails, ham radio works," Willey

Amateur Radio Field Day is a 24-hour event that this year ran from 11 a.m. Saturday to 11 a.m. Sunday. Participants across the nation and Canada, all licensed by the Federal Communications Commission to operate their high-powered radios, work to contact as many other ham radio operators as possible.

"We get together to make sure our radios work in the field," Willey said.

Court Documents: Property Dispute Leads to Arson

Judge Orders $100,000 Bail After Man Admits Setting Fire to Two Buildings

By Natalie Johnson

njohnson@chronline.com

A long-running dispute between two families over a property boundary led to an alleged arson that damaged two buildings off U.S. Highway 12 south of Chehalis Saturday.

Joshua L. Nichols, 39, of Chehalis, was charged Monday in Lewis County Superior Court with first-degree arson, seconddegree arson and second-degree burglary.

Despite Nichols' minimal criminal history, Lewis County Prosecutor Jonathan Meyer asked for $100,000 bail, citing the serious nature of the charges. First-degree arson is a Class A felony, punishable by up to life in prison.

"The state is concerned about community safety in this matter," Meyer said.

He noted that one of the two buildings lit on fire was a shed that directly abutted a living space where a family was sleeping.

"It very easily could have turned into a homicide-type situation," Meyer said.

Blippi Visits the Chehalis-Centralia Steam Train

Award-winning children's character Blippi was in Chehalis on Saturday filming video footage at the Chehalis-Centralia Railroad & Museum on the 1916 Baldwin-built Chehalis steam train for an upcoming episode of his popular children's show. Blippi, played by actor Stevin John, of Ellensburg, Washington, is a fast-rising star in online children's entrainment, with his show recently reaching the coveted milestone of one billion views on YouTube. Created in early 2014, John's character, Blippi, explores real life machines and vehicles for children, among other educational categories of content geared toward children ages 2 to 6 years old. In a few weeks, the Chehalis steam train episode will be available on YouTube, Amazon Prime, and Roku. You can also find Blippi on other popular online media content platforms such as Google Play, Kidoodle.TV and SoundCloud. Visit Blippi.com for more information about Blippi, his production team and more.

Lewis County Sets Hearing for Second Budget Amendment of 2017

By The Chronicle

A hearing has been set for the county's second budget amendment of the year, which will result in the use of $34,993 in reserves.

Legislators are also engaged in closed-door negotiations over a proposed paid family leave program for private-sector workers and bills to address rural water use.

The budget and McCleary negotiations involve billions of taxpayer dollars, discussions about new revenue and reviews of existing government policy and programs.

As of Monday afternoon, no agreement had been publicly announced on either plan.

At this pace, Washington residents will have only a few days — maybe even less than 24 hours — to review the details before Friday's deadline, when the current budget expires.

In 2015, lawmakers and Inslee announced a budget agreement on June 27, but details weren't released for another day or two. However, the public knew where negotiations were heading because of the earlier releases of compromise proposals.

"You can't say that what they're doing is illegal, but it's still wrong," said Toby Nixon, president of the Washington Coalition for Open Government.

The 2015 fight over the $38.2 billion budget set a record for the most days lawmakers had ever spent in session.

To reach agreement this time, the handful of budget and education negotiators must corral rank-and-file lawmakers on both ends of the political spectrum toward any eventual compromise.

'We're trying to find a way to yes that meets the requirements of our individual caucuses," said Sen. John Braun, of Centralia, who is chief GOP budget writer.

The GOP plan, meanwhile, featured what's known as a property-tax "levy swap." It would establish a uniform statewide property tax rate to fund schools, raising property taxes in places like Seattle and Bellevue while lowing them in other areas.

Neither Braun nor Sullivan would discuss details of what may be in an eventual agreement.

But Braun on Friday did say, "Very few things go outside of that box" of ideas.

'There are no surprises here,"

The Olympia rumor mill in recent days has speculated that the education-funding proposal would include an expansion of online sales-tax collections and a smaller version of the GOP's property-tax plan.

Seattle Should Open Its Eyes to Minimum Wage Research

By The Seattle Times Editorial Board

Just last week, Seattle Mayor Ed Murray celebrated a University of California-Berkeley study that found the city's minimumwage experiment had been good for restaurant workers: higher pay with no negative impact on jobs.

Don't expect similar treatment for a different study, released Monday, from a research team at the University of Washington. It found disturbing effects from Seattle's minimumwage law beyond just the restaurant industry, which accounts for less than a third of all lowwage jobs in the city.

The UW researchers found a 9.4 percent drop in hours worked by low-wage workers both in and out of the restaurant industry — resulting in the equivalent of a whopping 6,317 full-time jobs eliminated. Even with a higher wage floor, the average low-wage worker's monthly pay dropped by $124 a 6.6 percent pay cut — because of lost hours.

The UW study is a seismic event in the hotly contested field of minimum wage research. It runs counter to previous studies, and the study uses an unusually large and deep data set to draw its conclusions. Researchers should have a field day debating its merits and implications.

But Murray's office is preemptively meddling in that debate. Months ago, it asked the lead Berkeley researcher — the one Murray's office just celebrated — to critique an early draft of the UW study.

Murray's office said it had concerns about the "methodology" of the UW study. But the strategy is clear and galling: celebrate the research that fits your political agenda, and tear down the research that doesn't.

Never mind that the UW research team is the same one that City Hall hired to evaluate the Seattle minimum-wage experiment. The team is taking an impressively broad and deep approach — surveying and interviewing hundreds of employers and employees, and cross-referencing employment data with food stamp and Medicaid rolls.

But Councilmember Kshama Sawant impugned the reputation of the lead UW researcher, Jacob Vigdor, when a previous report found some trade-offs for the march to $15.

Now, Murray is apparently joining in the partisan cherrypicking of the research.

For what it's worth, the UW study offers lots of caveats, including the fact that contract work wasn't included in the analysis because of limits on the data. Vigdor — the one targeted by Sawant — does not conclude that Seattle should stop the minimum-wage law, which is currently at $13 an hour for big employers.

He also notes that the UW study mirrors the conclusion in the Berkeley study: restaurant jobs haven't suffered in the march to $15. But the UW study, importantly, looked at the impacts on low-wage employment beyond the food-service industry.

The minimum-wage experiment sweeping the country needs good, thorough, independent research. Seattle led this movement, passing the highest local minimum wage in the country.

Does City Hall really want to know the consequences, or does it want to put blinders on and pat itself on the back?

"For some strange reason my folks made the mistake of encouraging me," said Stafford, 80.

After graduating in 1955 from Adna High School, where he played baseball (Lewis County champions that year) and football, Jim attended Centralia Junior College and played football under coach Darold Talley. He also studied art under Bob Bauer in the old Centralia High School, which was a step up for him. They became good friends, and he even pounded nails as Bauer created a nail sculpture on campus.

The following year, he attended Clark College in Vancouver, where he met his wife, Donna Hendrix, a home ec teacher. He had worked summers in Oregon at a mill her father operated.

Stafford's love for art drew him to the Burnley School of Professional Art, now known as The Art Institute in Seattle, which attracted talented teachers from throughout the Pacific Northwest, but his heart wasn't in commercial illustrating.

In the summer of 1959. borrowed $300 from his grandfather, Leonard Rayton, and drove west to Jackson Hole, Wyoming, where he studied through the Teton Artists Association with three well-known American painters: Grant Hagen, Conrad Schwiering and Paul Bransom. America's International Alliances Seem to Stand on Shaky Ground

According to an ancient adage, mankind may be condemned "to live in interesting times." Perhaps this could pertain to the present, which is interesting indeed. North Korea, which claims to be a "democratic people's republic" but is actually an absolute monarchy, continues to expand its offensive nuclear capability.

Dictator Kim Jong Un, who has succeeded his father and grandfather as the world's most dangerous punk, clearly seeks the means to devastate the continental United States. The nearest target, of course, would be Seattle.

Angered by Donald Trump's sudden withdrawal from the Trans-Pacific Partnership, and by Trump's coarse and insulting personal manner, Australia is cozying up to China, its largest trading partner by far. The Trans-Pacific alliance likely will proceed, but led and dominated by China, not by the United States.

Kenya recently completed a modern railway line from Nairobi to the Indian Ocean port city of Mombasa at a cost of some $3.8 billion. Chinese expertise and finance built this crucial transport link, for which Kenya will be heavily indebted for decades.

Kenya is a comparatively stable and prosperous African nation, and its domination by China would profoundly influence the entire African continent. Theresa May, who became the British prime minister in the wake of the Brexit vote last year, miscalculated terribly by calling an unscheduled general election for June 8.

May had hoped to greatly enlarge the small Conservative majority in the House of Commons, but the Tories actually lost their majority, largely to a resurgent Labour Party. Unfortunately, Labour no longer is led by moderates like Tony Blair, but by an ultra-leftist, Jeremy Corbyn.

It now bears a strong resemblance to the Silly Party of Monty Python notoriety, and will contribute little to the looming struggle over the woefully half-baked Brexit. Europe's other leading female head of government, Germany's Angela Merkel, faces a general election on Sept. 24. The Christian Democrat Merkel has served as federal chancellor since 2005, and is favored to remain in office.

But Germany's modest stance in world affairs may be shifting. Unlike every other American president since World War II, Donald Trump has blasted the NATO alliance as "obsolete," and suggested that the American commitment to our European allies is not absolute.

The result? Serious and unprecedented discussion in Germany on the development of "eine deutsche Atombombe."

In America, finally, the newborn Trump administration is stranging in the crib, its legislative proposals stillborn and its popularity on life support. Trump may be swamped by scandals entirely foreign to the American experience.

But while current challenges are cause for concern, they are not cause for despair. Civilization has survived far worse crises than at present.

On June 12, 1941, 10 days before the German assault on Russia and six months before Pearl Harbor, with a Nazi dagger at Britain's throat and Hitler rampant throughout Europe, Churchill declared to the world: "Lift up your hearts. All will come right. Out of the depths of sorrow and sacrifice will be born again the glory of mankind."

Roof Doctor Gives Great Service to Onalaskans

We were absolutely blown away by the great way The Roof Doctor treated us from start to finish. Their customer service, quality of work, professional conduct and competitive pricing are what sets them apart from the other roofing companies we chose not to hire.

From arrival to departure, the crew was finished with my 3,000-square-foot roof in less than eight hours and they cleaned up all the tear-off and nails, cleaned out the gutters, and even swept up the grit from the old shingles off our deck.

Ken treated me extremely well and exhibited an uncommon fairness and honesty that I don't see often among many contractors. I highly recommend The Roof Doctor to anyone who wants the best customer care and the best roof around. They will be the only ones I call for any other roofing needs I have in the future.

70 Years Ago, 'Flying Saucers' Entered Lexicon After Mount Rainier Report

1947: When Unassuming Salesman Spotted Nine 'Circular-Type' Objects, It Was the First Widely-Reporting Sighting in the Country

By Erik Lacitis

The Seattle Times

SEATTLE (AP) — Before June 24, 1947, terms such as UFOs and flying saucers had not entered popular vocabulary. Then, on that afternoon 70 years ago, it all changed because of Kenneth Arnold:

"Supersonic Flying Saucers Sighted by Idaho Pilot.

Arnold reported seeing near Mount Rainier nine "circulartype" objects flying in formation at more than twice the speed of sound.

His was the first widely reported UFO sighting in this country, and it set off a wave of other reported sightings.

In a now-declassified document, the Air Force Materiel Command wrote it off: "The report cannot bear even superficial examination, therefore, must be disregarded.'

Another Air Force document concluded, "It is the Air Force conclusion that the objects of this sighting were due to a mi-

For Arnold, it stung.

He didn't consider himself some kind of kook. He had over 4,000 hours of mountain highaltitude pilot time; he was in the Idaho search and rescue.

"I have been subjected to ridicule, much loss of time and money, newspaper notoriety, magazine stories, reflections on my honesty, my character, my business dealings," Arnold wrote in his 1952 book, "Coming of the Saucers."

A long time ago, in 1977, I interviewed Arnold after reaching him by phone.

In this 1947, file photo, Kenneth Arnold, holds a movie camera in front of his Call Air, after he reported seeing nine alleged UFOs near Mount Rainier. Arnold had no idea he would change the world when he told reporters in Pendleton he saw nine strange objects flying along the Cascades. But 70 years ago June 25, that's what he did.

He lived in Meridian, Idaho, and sold fire-extinguishing equipment. About as unusual as his life got was that he piloted a small airplane to get to his clients around the Northwest. A month after Arnold was in the news, a now-declassified report made in July 1947 by Army Air Force Counter-Intelligence Corps Officer Frank M. Brown said, "Mr. Arnold is a man of 32 years of age, being married and the father of two children. It is the personal opinion of the interviewer that Mr. Arnold actually saw what he saw. To go further, if Mr. Arnold can write a report of the character that he did while not having seen the objects that he claimed he saw, it is the opinion of the interviewer that Mr. Arnold was an unlikely can- Arnold is in the wrong business, that he should be writing Buck Rogers fiction.'

In another declassified intelligence report in July 1947, First Lt. Hal L. Eustace of the Army Air Corps put Arnold's report as part of "silly-season episodes."

The lieutenant wrote that Arnold "seems to be reasonably well balanced, although excitable, and has no apparent ulterior motive. Other than to prove he is not 'nuts.'?'

The lieutenant wrote that Arnold revealed "an antagonistic attitude toward the Army" by stating, "Well, if the Army doesn't know what they are, it sure ought to be trying to find out!"

Bright Flash Lit the Sky

Arnold's sighting of the craft was the 1947 version of a story going viral.

'It was a beautiful day. Just as clear as a bell," Arnold said. He was flying from Chehalis to Yakima and decided to spend an hour or so searching for a downed C-46 Marine transport that had crashed into the southwest side of Mount Rainier.

There was a $5,000 reward for finding it.

It was at 3 p.m., he remembered, "when a very bright flash lit up the plane and the sky around me.

At first, Arnold thought it was the sun reflecting off another plane.

But the flash happened again, and that's when I saw where it was coming from. It came spasmodically from a chain of nine circular-type aircraft way up from the vicinity of Mount Rainier," said Arnold.

"I could not find any tails on these things. They didn't leave a jet trail behind them. I judged their size to be at least 100 feet in widespan. I thought it was a new type of missile."

His plane had a big sweep hour clock on the instrument panel. Arnold measured that the craft covered the distance between Mount Rainier and Mount Adams in 1 minute 42 seconds.

"That figured out to something like 1,760 miles an hour, which I could hardly believe. I knew that figure couldn't be entirely accurate, but I'd say it was within a couple of hundred miles accurate," he said.

From Yakima, Arnold then flew to an air show in Pendleton, Oregon. The next day, on June 25, he stopped by the local newspaper, the East Oregonian. He wanted to know if the military had been testing secret warplanes in the area.

He ended up talking to reporter Bill Bequette, who, in subsequent years, remembered that Arnold "came off as honest, level headed and credible," said a story in the East Oregonian.

So Bequette wrote a brief story about what Arnold said he witnessed.

But the brief also went out to The Associated Press, got picked up by numerous newspapers, and the furor began. For the first time, a mass-media story and subsequent headlines used the term, "flying saucers."

There were no reported riches for Arnold because of his notoriety. Instead, he complained to Frank Brown, the Air Force investigator, "that his business had suffered greatly at every stop in his business routes, large groups of people were waiting to question him."

Brown concluded his report, "Mr. Arnold stated further that if he, at any time in the future, saw anything in the sky, to quote Mr. Arnold. If I ever saw a ten story building flying through the air I would never say a word about it, due to the fact that he has been ridiculed by the press to such an extent that he is practically a moron in the eye of the majority of the population of the United

There were "many long hours of fruitless flying with a camera, trying and failing to find anything like his saucers again," says Martin Shough, a well-regarded researcher of the UFO phenomena who has written a detailed analysis of Arnold's account. In an email, Shough, who lives in the Highlands of Scotland, says, "I am resigned to never knowing what Arnold saw."

He concludes, "Seventy years on, when so much of the flying saucer mythology that Kenneth Arnold triggered has been explained away, it is somewhat embarrassing that Arnold's own sighting remains obstinately re-

The total solar eclipse is the first coast-to-coast total solar eclipse to hit the continental U.S. in 99 years. A total eclipse occurs when the moon passes between the sun and the Earth, blocking the sun's light.

The path of totality — the area of complete darkness where the moon's shadow completely obscures the sun — begins in the U.S. on the Oregon coast before traveling east across the U.S.

The idea behind the flight began last year, when a group of avid eclipse chasers booked tickets on an Anchorage-to-Honolulu flight during an eclipse that could be seen over the Pacific Ocean. They successfully lobbied Alaska Airlines to adjust the flight path so they could see the event from the air, said Halley Knigge, an airline spokeswoman.

Chehalis Resident Appointed to Lewis County Planning Commission

By The Chronicle

The Board of Lewis County Commissioners appointed a Chehalis resident to the county's planning commission on Monday after the chairwoman stepped down.

Lorie Spogen will fill the unexpired term of Susan Rosbach, the former chair, whose term ends on Dec. 31.

In her letter of interest, Spogen said she is a lifetime resident of the Mint City who is familiar with the area, issues and opportunities of the county.

"As a local real estate owner that routinely works with land use, I feel that I can understand and contribute to the work of the commission," Spogen wrote in

Since she was appointed to fill the remainder of a term, Lee Napier, the county's community development director, said the commissioners would have to reappoint her in December.

She will serve in District 1 of to an amount not to exceed the planning commission.

Commissioners Approve Agreements With Flood Authority for 2017-19 Biennium

By The Chronicle

In a series of actions on Monday, the Board of Lewis County Commissioners approved sevsupplemental agreements between the county and consultants that provide facilitation and staffing to the Chehalis River Basin Flood Authority, extending support for two years into the 2017-19 biennium.

Lewis County is the fiscal agent for the Flood Authority, which helps with local flood relief projects throughout the Chehalis River Basin.

An amendment was passed by the commissioners to an interagency agreement between the Flood Authority and the state Recreation and Conservation Office to cover the cost associated with consultant work and staff support from the county. The amendment increased the total project cost by $380,000,

The costs for services are eligible for reimbursement from the RCO.

News in Brief

$380,000, Kramer Consulting will be paid $72,000 over the two-year period to serve as the lead point of contact for decisions made by the Flood Authority. SBGH Partners, who provides the day-to-day administrative services and support to the Flood Authority, will be paid $173,000, while French and Associates, which is the lead con- By The Chronicle sultant that provides professional services to jurisdictions in the basin, will be paid $100,000.

The county will be paid $35,000 for acting as the fiscal agent, and for staffing.

Ron Averill, the Centralia representative on the Flood Authority, said the consultants would remain active with the group through the 2017-19 biennium, even after the Office of the Chehalis Basin begins to operate. The office will be overseen by the state Department of Ecology and has the dual goal of reducing flooding and enhancing aquatic species habitat.

Chehalis Police Chief Glenn Schaffer, Chief Carl Nielsen, of the Centralia Police Department, Chief Ken Cardinale, of the Chehalis Fire Department, and Chief Mike Kytta, of the Riverside Fire Authority, worked together to bring the proposal to their respective boards after two years of frustration with the management and operations of Lewis County's 911 center.

"Those concerns still exist ... them," Schaffer said at Monday night's Chehalis City Council meeting.

Schaffer noted the county's 911 center is on its third director in two years. The center has struggled through short-staffing and infrastructure issues. Dispatchers issued a no-confidence vote in former interim manager David Anderson, who was later spite that vote. Earlier this year, a dispatcher filed a lawsuit against the county claiming dispatch staff gave her schedule and personnel records to a man accused of abusing her.

Schaffer and the other chiefs and it's not my intent to rehash have told The Chronicle they're making some progress working with Director of Emergency Ser-

Budget Office: Senate Health Bill Adds 22 Million Uninsured

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Republican health care bill would leave 22 million more Americans uninsured in 2026 than under President Barack Obama's health care law, the Congressional Budget Office estimated Monday, complicating GOP leaders' hopes of pushing the plan through the chamber this week.

Minutes after the report's release, three GOP senators threatened to oppose a pivotal vote on the proposal this week, enough to sink it unless Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., can win over some of them or other GOP critics. The bill will fail if just three of the 52 Republican senators oppose it, an event that would deal a humiliating blow to President Donald Trump and Senate leaders.

The 22 million additional people without coverage is just a hair better than the 23 million who'd be left without insurance under the measure the House approved last month, the budget office has estimated. Trump has called the House version approved last month "mean" and told Senate Republicans to approve legisla-tion with more "heart."

CNN Accepts Resignations of 3 Involved in Retracted Story

NEW YORK (AP) - CNN accepted the resignations Monday of three journalists involved in a retracted story about a supposed investigation into a pre-inaugural meeting between an associate of President Donald Trump and the head of a Russian investment fund.

The story was posted on the network's website on Thursday and was removed, with all links disabled, Friday night. CNN immediately apologized to Anthony Scaramucci, the Trump transition team member who was reported to be involved in the meeting.

The story's author, Thomas Frank, was among those who resigned, according to a network executive who requested anonymity because the person was not authorized to discuss personnel issues. Also losing their jobs were Eric Lichtblau, an assistant managing editor in CNN's Washington bureau, and Lex Harris, head of the investigations unit.

CNN, in initially taking down the story, said it didn't meet its editorial standards. The episode is a damaging blow for a network that Trump has frequently derided as "fake news," and for a story that never even made it onto any of CNN's television networks.

The story had been quickly questioned both internally and externally, including by the conservative site Breitbart News. It was determined that the sto- married lesbian couples must get ry was posted without going through the expected checks and balances for a story of such sensitivity, the executive said.

Ruling in Travel Ban Leaves Myriad Questions Unanswered

The Associated Press

The Supreme Court's decision to partially reinstate President Donald Trump's temporary travel ban has left the effort to keep some foreigners out of the United States in a murky middle ground, with unanswered questions and possibly more litiga-

The justices ruled Monday in an unsigned opinion they would hold a full hearing on the case in October. In the meantime, the administration can bar travelers from six majority-Muslim countries from the U.S. if they don't have a "credible claim of a bona fide relationship" with someone or some entity in the country.

It's unclear what will ultimately constitute a "bona fide relationship," though the ruling suggested that an American job, school enrollment or a close relative could meet that threshold. Equally unclear is how many foreigners will be affected from the six countries: Syria, Sudan, Iran, Yemen, Libya and Somalia.

The ruling was seen as at least a partial victory for Trump in the biggest court case of his presidency. Trump claims the temporary ban is needed to prevent terrorist attacks. Opponents reject that and argue it's a backdoor way to bar Muslims from entering the United States, as Trump promised in his campaign.

The early indications are that the administration will use the decision to take a tough line on travelers from those countries. A senior U.S. official familiar with the situation said the Trump administration has plans in place to relaunch the stalled ban and tourists will be among those kept

Under these plans, largely orchestrated by White House adviser Stephen Miller, tourists from those countries and any academics, lecturers or others invited to speak or make presentations in the U.S. will be barred. vers and advocates said relatively few people would fall under the ban because these travelers tend to have sufficient relationships with people or institutions in the United States.

Jamal Abdi, policy director for the National Iranian American Council, said most Iranians who visit the United States have relatives here or are coming to work or study.

He said his group has no idea how the administration plans to judge family relationships and a hard line could mean a significant number of Iranians will be kept out the country for the time

Brazil's Crisis Deepens as President Accused of Corruption

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) Brazil's attorney general formally accused President Michel Temer of corruption on Monday, making him the first sitting president in Latin America's largest nation to face criminal charges. Attorney General Rodrigo Janot's accusation is the latest salvo in an intensifying showdown between Temer and justice officials who are building a corruption case that reaches to the highest levels. The case now goes to the lower

Chamber of Deputies in Congress, which must decide whether it has merit. If two-thirds of the legislature decides that it does, then the president will be suspended for up to 180 days while a trial is conducted. House Speaker Rodrigo Maia, an ally of Temer, would be president in the interim.

In his decision, Janot said that Temer at some point between March and April of this year took a bribe of around $150,000 offered by Joesly Batista, former chairman of meat-packing giant JBS.

Janot opened an investigation last month into Temer for corruption, obstruction of justice and being part of a criminal organization. A recording emerged that apparently captured Temer, in a late-night conversation with Batista earlier this year, endorsing hush money to former House Speaker Eduardo Cunha, a former Temer ally who is serving a 15-year sentence for corruption. Batista reached a plea agreement with federal prosecutors.

incorporated meat from Issa's pigs in their recipes.

Delectable as they may be, Issa was first drawn to mangalitsas for a different reason. The Kingston resident, whose background is in bio-medical research, is fascinated by animals that can both be harvested and used to help manage land.

While browsing through papers, Issa stumbled across an article on mangalitsas being deployed to eradicate invasive plants from wetlands in Europe.

"I read about them and I fell in love," she said.

Issa bought her first mangalitsas from a breeder in California last year and introduced them to her small farm overlooking Appletree Cove. The pigs promptly cleared her fields of Scotch broom, devouring the invasive plants whole.

Unlike commercial meat hogs, mangalitsas add weight gradually. Issa will let her pigs

She feeds the mangalitsas a mix of native grass, nuts and organic feed. The pigs are often let out to forage in the shady grove of maples outside their pens, grunting happily as they dig for

"You are what you eat, and that's all the more true with these guys," she said. "If we were feeding them slop, they wouldn't taste the way they taste.'

The pigs' endearing character makes harvest time bittersweet. Most of the hogs are outgoing and friendly. They trotted across their pens to greet visitors on a sunny afternoon last week. One lolled against Issa's legs as she scratched behind its floppy ears.

Wet Winter Ups the Ante for Hikers on Pacific Crest Trail

PERILS: Hikers Face New Dangers in Pursuit of Finishing Trail from Mexico to Canada

By Brian Melley

The Associated Press

Anya Sellsted had scaled scary snow-covered passes and forded frightening rivers during her solo hike from Mexico to Canada when the hazards of California's gargantuan winter finally caught up to her.

While crossing a partly submerged log in Yosemite National Park, Sellsted was sucked under the tree and down the rushing creek. She gasped for air as the weight of her 55-pound backpack pushed her under the frigid wa-

No one was within miles as she was battered and scraped on rocks before grasping branches and saving herself.

"I couldn't stop screaming and shaking and crying," said Sellsted, who swigged whiskey to calm her nerves.

Sellsted is one of several hikers who reported harrowing incidents tackling the 2,650-mile Pacific Crest Trail across this year's massive snowpack, which has fed swift streams and turned the dream trip of a lifetime into a near-death nightmare for some.

Hikers have survived an avalanche, falls on snow and close calls in raging rivers. Most have retreated to lower ground and detoured the hazardous Sierra Nevada — the highest, most rugged section of the scenic trail running the length of California and through Oregon and Wash-

Hiking the trail, which cuts through East Lewis County, is an arduous endurance test, but not particularly perilous. It has become more popular each year and draws more than 3,000 hikers from around the world trying to cover the entire length within six months, though fewer than a quarter finished last year.

Given the length and likelihood of snow in the Sierra and Cascades, most hikers start in the Southern California desert in early spring with the hope that snow will melt by the time they reach alpine elevations.

With hundreds of so-called thru-hikers entering the high Sierra early in the season, their experiences can serve as cautionary tales for others planning summer wilderness escapes. More than a dozen people have drowned in Sierra rivers at lower elevations including one in Yosemite and three in Sequoia National Park, and rangers are warning hikers to think twice about crossing swift water.

Marcus Mazzaferri, 25, of Seattle, narrowly survived an ordeal after falling in a swollen Yosemite creek and abandoning his pack so he could get to shore before being swept over a waterfall. He lost all his gear and had to do jumping jacks and run in circles all night.

He got lost hiking for help the next day and was beginning to despair when he heard a beeping sound and discovered a snowplowing crew, who took him to a ranger station.

McCroskey Commentary: Who Will Pay the Bill if Hank Bites Somebody?

USERNAME: Jann

Mr. John McCroskey, former Lewis County sheriff -- Hank the epitome of a dangerous dog? Seriously? I guess I'm going to have to set you straight. Have you not been paying attention at all lately? If Hank is the epitome of anything, it's what every household wants in a pet -- he's always friendly, always in a good mood (even after months in the shelter), and never barks. Did you not know that Ordinance 1275 was a direct result of the event Hank allegedly was accused of because crystal clear evidence demanded justice for Hank. Why do you worry so about what Hank might do in the future? You aren't responsible for him, so it's really none of your business. I can guarantee that not one cent will ever come out of your pocket for anything to do with Hank, so please just chill. First you say the dangerous dog law was to protect people/livestock against dogs like Hank, and then you say the law is irresponsible dog owners who don't control their pets. I hope you can go through the rest of your life with making a mistake -- it might come back and bite you.

USERNAME: John McCroskey

Thanks for writing. I understand there is emotion here but the law is clear and if the law is a problem change it. Irresponsible owners are the reason, dogs chased and killed livestock and on occasion bit people. You can't guarantee Hanks future behavior or guarantee he won't cost anything. He might. But Thanks for writing.

Letter: Why Is Donald Trump Oblivious to Interference by Putin?

USERNAME: bbetterm

Basically if he admits what all 16 intelligence agencies already know is true, that Russia hacked the election in his favor in order to get the oil sanctions lifted, he thinks it will make him look illegitimate. Why do you think congress passed a law after he became president that won't allow him to lift Russia sanctions? As commander in chief he should be leading the fight against this cold war style attack on our democracy, But he has attacked everyone But Putin.. Sadly most people do know what is going on or watch Fox news (which started out at GOP T.V, look it up) for those that do not think it is biased.

We actually had a three year plan for The Pearl. We're ending six months shy of that, because the opportunity for the coffeehouse presented itself more quickly than we had anticipated, not because of hard work or stress (which are inherent in any small business). Starbucks is the only sit down coffee shop in Chehalis, and we're hoping that Shakespeare & Co will provide a unique, cozy alternative to that. We also have Pearl-inspired grab-n-go items available for folks who are looking for a quick, healthy breakfast or lunch.

I-5 Toyota Drops Two Over Weekend in Reno Tournament

By The Chronicle

RENO — I-5 Toyota/Mountain Dew lost a pair of games over the weekend here to wrap up the Josh Anderson Memorial tournament.

On Saturday, I-5 Toyota lost a high scoring affair to Petaluma, 14-12.

I-5 Toyota had trouble on defense, accounting for three errors and allowing just three of the 14 runs to be earned.

"We were giving up too many free bases," I-5 Toyota coach Jake LeDuc said. "Both Brandon (White) and Dakota (Hawkins) pitched all right, we just played no defense behind them."

Tyson Guerrero recorded two hits, including a triple, and three RBI's, and Nole Wollan had two hits and three RBI's. Tysen Paul and Drew Forgione each added two hits for I-5 Toyota.

The tournament wrapped up on Sunday against Chico (Calif.), with I-5 Toyota falling 10-8.

Tyson Guerrero got the start on the mound and was relieved by Jacob Cleary in the sixth.

I-5 Toyota had the bats going on Sunday, tallying 15 hits. Guerrero and Paul each had two hits, and Wollan added three hits. Forgione and Hawkins each had three hits, including two doubles and an RBI for I-5 Toyota.

"Again, free bases got us in this one, we just gotta shore up the defense," LeDuc said. "Our offense was very good at the end of that tournament, I don't know anybody scored more runs than us. We just happened to give up more runs than we scored. If we can get the defense shored up, I really like our chances going forward."

I-5 Toyota is back on the field in a league game on Wednesday against the Thurston County Bandits at 6 p.m. at Wheeler

Stanley, Defense Lead West to Barden Classic Win

LAST TIME OUT: West Defense Nabs Six Interceptions to Seal Victory

By Scott Spruill

Yakima Herald

YAKIMA — Wyatt Stanley was feeling a little guilty, thinking he had "stole" his team's offensive MVP award from his good friend and roommate Connor Johnson.

Truth is, the real thievery on the part of Stanley's West team was done by the defense.

And it happened over and over again for everyone to see.

Shutting down half of the East's possessions with six interceptions, the West had more than enough opportunities with Stanley and Johnson at the helm to secure a 35-13 victory in Saturday's 23rd annual Earl Barden All-Star Classic at East Valley High School.

Stanley, a rugged 6-foot-3, 245-pound quarterback from Napavine, threw a touchdown pass and ran for a score in the third quarter to spark the West's second-half surge. He added another touchdown pass in the fourth quarter and finished 9 of 18 for 103 yards to earn the aforementioned award.

Johnson, from Archbishop Murphy, rotated each possession with Stanley and hit 8 of 11 passes for 117 yards. He had the longest connection of the day, a 45-yarder to Sedro-Woolley's Bryce Hornbeck in the final period. A roughing-the-passer penalty forced Johnson off the field on the next play, and Stanley promptly darted a short touchdown pass to Hornbeck to finish off the drive. "Yesterday we had a contest to see who would start and it was whoever could hit a helmet from 40 yards," said Stanley, who had two brothers play in the Barden Classic in 2010 and 2012. "Fortunately I was able to hit it and I got the start. We rotated all through the game and I feel like I stole one of his touchdowns after the late hit. We roomed together here and we've become pretty good friends."

though, wouldn't be where it is today without all the teams that came in the program's early days, including the first Beaver team to make the College World Series back in 1952.

Alex Goedhard, a 90-yearold Centralia resident, was on that groundbreaking Beaver team.

Goedhard grew up in Pasadena and played for Pasadena Junior College in 1949 and 1950, helping the baseball team earn the California Community College Athletic Association championship in 1950. Goedhard was a team captain and pitcher.

The experience in Pasadena allowed Goedhard to walk on at Oregon State in 1951 as a junior, where he played two seasons for the Beavers.

Russell Westbrook Wins NBA MVP; Rockets, Bucks Take 2 Awards

NEW YORK (AP) Russell Westbrook was voted NBA MVP on Monday night after setting a record with 42 triple-doubles last season.

Westbrook's ended the first NBA Awards show, which included two wins apiece for the Houston Rockets and Milwaukee Westbrook joined Oscar Robertson as the only players to average a triple-double for the season, and he broke Robertson's single-season record set when he had 41 triple-doubles in 1961-62.

The point guard beat out Houston's James Harden and San Antonio's Kawhi Leonard to succeed Stephen Curry, who had won the past two MVP awards.

Earlier,

Malcolm Brogdon became the first player not picked in the first round to win NBA Rookie of the Year in the common draft era. Brogdon was the No. 36 overall selection out of Virginia. The common draft era began in 1966. "I think it's an example for guys that are told they are too short, they are not athletic enough, they are not real point guards, they are not real shooting guards," Brogdon said. "I just think it's an important message for people to see, and it can be done. It just takes a lot." Teammate Giannis Antetokounmpo won the Most Improved Player award. Houston coach Mike

D'Antoni won his second Coach of the Year award, and the Rockets' Eric Gordon was Sixth Man of the Year after setting a record for most 3-pointers off the bench in his first season as a

The NBA formerly gave out its individual awards at various points throughout the postseason before switching to the awards show this season and presenting them all at once in front of the league's top players and stars from the entertainment world.

Bill Russell was presented the first Lifetime Achievement award, welcomed on stage by fellow Hall of Fame centers Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, David Robinson, Shaquille O'Neal, Alonzo Mourning and Dikembe Mutombo.

Cavs Still in Pursuit of Paul George; Denver Was Third Team in Draft Night Deal

By Marla Ridenour

Akron Beacon Journal

While the Cavaliers couldn't pull off a trade for the Indiana Pacers' Paul George on draft night, they are still in pursuit of the four-time All-Star, ESPN's Chris Haynes and Marc Stein reported Sunday night.

According to the ESPN report, discussions leading up to Thursday's draft had Kevin Love going to the Denver Nuggets, the Cavs landing George and the Pacers receiving a package of young players and draft picks. The Pacers are intent on trading George after his agent informed them next season will be George's last in Indianapolis.

A tweet from Haynes on Sunday evening said one of the scenarios also had the Nuggets' Kenneth Faried coming to Cleveland. Faried, 27, a 6-foot-8 power forward, has averaged 11.9 points and 8.5 rebounds over six

Bucks' Giannis Antetokounmpo, Malcolm Brogdon Receive NBA Honors

By Matt Velazquez

Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

The NBA announced its All-Rookie and All-Defensive teams in advance of its prime-time awards show Monday night and each featured a representative from the Milwaukee Bucks.

Giannis Antetokounmpo, a second team All-NBA selection and one of three finalists for the Most Improved Player award, earned a spot on the NBA's All-Defensive second team. He received seven first-team votes and 21 second-team votes from a panel of 100 sportswriters and broadcasters, which gave him 35 points — enough for the final forward spot on the second team.

guard Bucks Malcolm Brogdon, one of the three finalists for the Rookie of the Year Contract to Clear a award, was a unanimous selection to the league's All-Rookie team. He was joined on that team by the other Rookie of the Year finalists, Dario Saric and Joel Embiid of the Philadelphia mous pick. Sacramento Kings guard Buddy Hield and New York Knicks center Willie Hernangomez filled out the rest of the first team.

This season, Antetokounmpo led the Bucks in points, assists, rebounds, blocked shots and steals and ranked in the top 20 in the NBA in each of those categories — something that had never been done in league history. Overall, the 6-foot-11 pointforward ranked fifth in the NBA in blocks (151), ninth in steals (131), ninth in defensive win shares (4.5) and 13th in defensive rebounds (558).

By Neil Best

Ice Cube insisted there was a supply of relatively spry former NBA players looking for some action, and a demand to see them from their old fans.

On Sunday, the rapper/actor's well-honed business sense proved sharp again. His "BIG3" halfcourt, three-on-three league debuted at Barclays Center before an enthusiastic crowd of about 15,177.

That is not far behind the Nets' average of 15,429 last season, and the vibe was far livelier than that at your average Nets game, sustained for most of a show that lasted nearly six hours and featured four games.

If there was a downer, it was that fans did not see enough of the main attraction, 3's Company player/coach Allen Iverson.

The Hall of Famer had will ostensibly make the fran- warned on Friday not to expect too much of him at age 42, seven years removed from his last NBA

> Iverson shot 1-for-6 for two points and added two assists in only nine minutes of action, but he now is 1-0 as a coach, because 3's Company beat the Ball Hogs,

"The playing part is not going to be what you expect," he said afterward. "I'm 42 years old. I've been retired for six, seven years. The only reason I get out there for the couple of minutes that I do get out there is for the fans ... You're not going to see the Allen throughout the first afternoon.

started himself. When they later started chanting, "We want A.I.," he put himself back in, but only briefly. "Man, it was just fun being out there in the atmosphere," he said. You get flashbacks of when you were that guy and everybody was coming to see you perform, not just show up." Mostly Iverson and everyone else involved seemed pleased to be a part of something that got off to a bigger start than almost anyone anticipated.

"This is going to be something special," said Clyde Drexler, coach of a team called Power. "Outside the NBA, this is the most competitive basketball league in the world."

Perhaps in halfcourt basketball it is. But part of the point is to allow men in their late 30s and early 40s to do their thing without having to run up and down a full court.

The league will feature eight teams playing quadrupleheaders every Sunday this summer. Next are stops in Charlotte, Tulsa and Philadelphia.

The games are untimed, with the winner being the first Among the rules are three "fourpoint shot" circles beyond the arc. Former Knick Mike Bibby of Ghost Ballers made two of them.

> Deshawn Stevenson's threepointer won the second game for Power, 62-60, over coach Julius Erving's Tri-State.

> The most anticipated game, between 3's Company and the Ball Hogs, was unsightly. Fans started to boo loudly after a long, uninterrupted stretch of bricked shots.

> In the final game, coach Charles Oakley's Killer 3s got killed by Trilogy, 60-45.

Most players seemed to be in decent physical shape, but Jason (White Chocolate) Williams, Corey Maggette, Kenyon Martin and Rashad McCants left their games with injuries.

Assorted celebrities were in the house, including LL Cool J and Whoopi Goldberg. But the audience that Ice Cube was most focused on is current and recently retired NBA stars.

Among those at Barclays were young pros such as James Harden and new Net D'Angelo Russell and recently retired Paul Pierce.

To sustain and grow interto 60 and ahead by at least two. est, BIG3 will need infusions of big-name talent in coming years. Pierce is high on Ice Cube's pri-

Tod Leiweke, NFL Working to Make Sure NFL Doesn't Continue to See Dip in Popularity

By Geoff Baker The Seattle Times

Tod Leiweke has worn a few hats since leaving his job as Seahawks president back in 2010, but his current role as the NFL's No. 2 guy presents some immense challenges.

One of the biggest, as the NFL's chief operating officer and next guy down from Commissioner Roger Goodell, is figuring out what to do about the league's declining television ratings. As was chronicled often last season, the NFL saw an 8 percent ratings decline over the previous campaign, with blame cast on everything from the quality of play, to the U.S. presidential election, to millennials, to pirated online streaming, to Colin Kaepernick's national-anthem protest.

Now, the league and its executives are trying to figure it out before a one-year dip becomes a crisis. Speaking at the second annual Geek Wire Sports Tech Conference at CenturyLink Field last week, Leiweke discussed some of the conventional and unconventional approaches takteresting ways." One of those involves actually entering the homes of fans and 'replicating the game experience" for them and using eye-tracking technology to monitor what they follow and what their behavior is during commercial breaks. The league suspects more people than ever are following its games, it's just not showing up in the Neilsen ratings.

The league has seen a jump in streaming-device use and knows that younger generations often prefer watching games that way rather than via traditional broadcast outlets. like in 10 years." Still, those streaming dollar deals signed with TV networks such as FOX, CBS and ESPN. Meaning the league must find ways to keep traditional outlets happy while maximizing revenue from other viewers that might not use them.

Which organization Leiweke will ply his trade for in coming years has been the subject of some speculation lately. His brother, Tim Leiweke, is CEO of the Oak View Group, which is seeking to renovate KeyArena for $564 million into a modern NBA and NHL facility.

There is some speculation in 2025."

"They want a pace of play that Tod Leiweke would leave the NFL when his contract is up in a couple of years and come to Seattle to run an NHL and NBA operation here. He served as CEO and minority owner of the Tampa Bay Lightning after leaving the Seahawks in 2010 and was a close associate of Jac Sperling, who was spearheading a group interested in building a Bellevue arena in 2015.

> It was just days after that Bellevue effort collapsed in July 2015 that Leiweke left the Lightning and took the NFL job. Leiweke wouldn't comment on anything NHL-related or on what his brother — who spoke later in the day at the Geek Wire conference — is trying to do. That's hardly going to quell speculation about his next challenge. But for now, he insists it's all about football and getting as many eyeballs on it as possible. "Anyone who thinks they know exactly what's going to happen is not telling you the truth," Leiweke said of changing technology and viewing habits. "Because it's very, very hard to tell, in this rapidly changing world, what this is all going to look like

Draymond Green Wins Defensive Player of the Year

By Anthony Slater

The Mercury News

Draymond Green has finally captured the elusive individual defensive award he has long cov-

After two straight seasons as a runner-up to Kawhi Leonard, Green was named the NBA Defensive Player of the Year for the 2016-17 season, announced during the inaugural NBA Awards show in New York City on Monday night.

Green accepted the award in person, strolling up to the stage in a teal tuxedo suit jacket, a bow tie, shorts and some skull-head slippers without socks, an aggressive outfit that created quite the social media buzz. Kevin Garnett, who won the award in 2008, presented the trophy to Green.

"First off, thank you, means a lot to get the award from you," Green told Garnett.

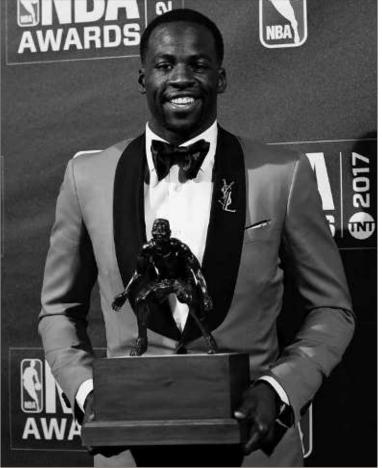

He then thanked his teammates in a surprisingly modest speech.
"This isn't an individual award. There are five guys out there at a time," Green said. "I appreciate them. Even with KD and Klay not making the All-Defensive team, I appreciate everything they do."

Green was a runaway winner, receiving 73 of the 100 first place votes. Towering Jazz center Rudy Gobert got 16, Kawhi Leonard got 11.

In winning, Green, who was selected 35th overall by the Warriors back in 2012, became only the sixth non-first round pick in NBA history to win Defensive Player of the Year, joining Marc Gasol, Ben Wallace, Dennis Rodman, Mark Eaton and Michael

Kentucky's John Calipari a Huge Success in Draft, But Not Everyone Likes His Style

By Mike Reader

The Charlotte Observer

At Kentucky, where the Wildcats under John Calipari readily embrace the one-and-done culture, players and the coach have likened NBA draft night to their "graduation."

In a season when freshmen dominated the NBA draft as never before, it's easy to draw that comparison.

But Calipari's high-profile appearances at the NBA draft helps his own future as well. Given the high visibility that Calipari and his young draft picks get during the night, it's easy to see that Kentucky has figured out how to use the NBA draft as a recruiting tool.

This season, three Wildcats freshman were drafted in the first 14 picks and Calipari was in New York to see his players' big moments in person. With those three, Calipari now has had 21 freshmen declare for the draft in his eight seasons at Kentucky; that's almost three each year. All of them were taken in the first

But with so many top players departing after only a season, Calipari also needs to find a steady supply of college-ready basketball players to fill the roles of the departing stars. Draft night no doubt plays a big role. But not only potential recruits notice.

This week, North Carolina coach Roy Williams, who also has attended NBA drafts, and ESPN analyst Jay Bilas called out Calipari's approach to draft

"When I was at Kansas, I never went to the draft because I always felt like it was a special time for the families," Williams said on The David Glenn Show on Thursday.

"I kid John Calipari because he's always jumping up there. ... I said, 'I don't want to be jumping up and have a kid grab me or anything like that," Williams said. "John's so good about it. He says, 'No, I want them to grab their mom first and then grab me so they see me on TV with them.' I said, 'I'm not doing that,

On draft night, Bilas made it clear he thinks that Calipari recruits, rather than produces, lottery picks. Still, Bilas has called Calipari "one of the truly great coaches in our game."

Despite the criticism of his approach, Calipari's track record in getting players drafted _ no program has sent more players to the NBA since he become Kentucky's coach in 2009 resonates with many potential recruits.

Malik Monk, the Charlotte Hornets' top pick Thursday, said he came to Kentucky with NBA draft night in mind.

'Of course," Monk told reporters the night before the draft. "That was the reason I went to Kentucky. To be in this situation I am today.'

Thursday night, three Wildcats _ Monk, De'Aaron Fox and Bam Adebayo _ all lottery picks, padded Calipari's NBA draft porters that Kentucky's penchant for producing pros drew them to Lexington. And the three firstrounders said they would have gone wherever Calipari coached.

At Kentucky, Calipari has produced three No. 1 selections, 24 first-round picks, 31 players drafted overall and a dozen top 10 selections in the past eight years. Each number leads all schools in that period. No other school has had more than one No. 1 pick. Duke is second in the other categories with 14 first-rounders, 17 players drafted overall and seven top-10 selec-

So, it's not a stretch when the Lexington Herald-Leader's Jerry Tipton likens Calipari to the Pied Piper of college basketball. Thursday, the piper went to work. Calipari flew from Colorado, where he's in training camp with USA Basketball's under-19 team _ another potential recruiting tool _ to Brooklyn.

In New York, Calipari took advantage of plentiful camera and interview time and kept his Twitter feed buzzing. But Calipari made it clear that he was working behind the scenes as well. 'I've probably been on the phone probably 20 times today," Calipari told SECCountry.com's Joe Musatto.

Calipari says he gets more anxious on draft nights than he does coaching in a national championship game. It's a matter of control.

"National championship game, it's like, 'OK, we're here, now let's go have some fun,' Calipari said. But during the NBA draft, "you're just sitting there hoping they get drafted when you hope they should."

Nervous or not, Calipari said the excitement of spending draft night with his players and their families still energizes him.

"It's really exciting," Calipari said. "Somebody said, 'You got lipstick! Somebody kissed you.' I said, 'Yeah, it was one of the Fox and Adebayo also told re- mothers. And don't wipe it off. Leave it on there.' These families, to live it with them, it's just amazing."

Calipari acknowledged the recruiting edge that national draft night exposure brings during this interview on ESPN, where not surprisingly, he also spoke in defense of keeping the current one-and-done system.

"They're talking about oneand-done," Calipari said in this clip. "It's not broken! ... My kids finished the term, they're on lifetime scholarships."

"Can I recruit a little bit?" he asked, before offering his opinion that Monk reaped the ben efits of a "gap year" playing at Kentucky between high school basketball and the NBA.

In a longer clip, Calipari further touted the benefits of a oneand-done system, for the right 'These kids have a genius, just like a pianist, just like someone with a cello. ... These kids are prodigies," Calipari said.

"If there's ever anything I'm selfish about, it's that award," Green said.

Over the next few months, Green would dot his resume with a number of Heisman moments. He stripped Anthony Davis on a post-up to seal a win in New Orleans, stole an inbound pass to Giannis Antetokounmpo to put away the Bucks and then swatted two Atlanta shots out of bounds to punctuate a win over the Hawks _ the equivalent of three game-winning shots, except on the defensive end.

From there, the award was all but his as long as the Warrior defense remained sturdy the rest of the year, which it did. Golden State finished with a 101.9 defensive rating, the second best mark in the league and, despite losing Andre Bogut and facing a bunch of 'Do they have enough rim protection?' preseason questions, the Warriors led the league in blocked shots.

Green, as with everything for Then in his postgame in- the Warrior defense, was a big part of it. On Monday, he was

Jordan Spieth's Shot Explodes From Bunker to Win Travelers in Playoff

By Tom Yantz

The Hartford Courant

CROMWELL, Conn. — Jordan Spieth's explosive shot from the front right bunker hit the 18th green and kept on tracking to the center of the cup. When the ball hit the pin and dropped in for a birdie, he threw his sand wedge with his left hand and jumped in a joyous side-chest bump celebration with caddie Michael Greller.

Playoff competitor Daniel Berger walked across the green and exchanged low-fives with his good friend Spieth, as cheers reverberated in the natural amphitheater.

"I mean the ground was shaking," Spieth said.

When Berger missed his birdie putt from the left front portion of the green, Spieth took off his hat, shook Greller's hand and then the hand of Berger, whose nickname is Boge.

Spieth was the winner of the Travelers Championship.

"I jumped up and saw it (ball) coming right down on the pin," he said of his final shot. "And I went nuts. That was fun.

Spieth complimented Berger for the low-five as a "class act."

Spieth's sand save brought to mind him holing out on the last hole of regulation to force a playoff in the 2013 John Deere Classic. He won that playoff for his first tour victory.

No. 10 came Sunday. Spieth earned the $1.22 million firstplace prize and was the third player to lead wire-to-wire and win the championship. The others were Gene Litter in 1959 and Tim Norris in 1982. The victory for Spieth, 23, was the 10th of his career. The only other player to have done that by age 24 was Tiger Woods.

"I mean it's just Jordan doing Jordan things," Berger, who absorbed another frustrating loss, said of Spieth's sand shot. This followed him holding a threeshot lead after three rounds last year, shooting a 74 in the last round and finishing fifth.

man (66) and Danny Lee (67) tied for third at 270.

The playoff ensued after Berger saved his par 4 on the 72nd hole by getting up and down from the back right bunker. Spieth had a similar sand save from the same bunker, where he'd make tournament history min-

In the playoff, Spieth's drive caught the top of an oak and bounced right into the middle of the fairway. But his 5-iron from 230 yards found the bunker.

Berger's 155-yard approach from the left rough stopped just on the front of the green.

estimated to be around 290,000, 2. which was a 30 percent increase from last year, according to Tournament Director Nathan Grube.

What a tremendous last four holes, finishing holes, where you can get the crowd super involved with an amphitheater setting," Spieth said. "I mean, if I were a fan, I would pick this tournament. This one and Phoenix (Waste Management Open) is kind of two that stick out to come to on the PGA Tour season, just given the excitement of the closing holes."

The fans all were congregated for the sensational finish. Earlier they had filled many corners of the course to watch the field compete in the $6.8 million tour-

The last round for Spieth

But then he sputtered with bogeys at 4 and 12. His threeshot lead after 11 holes over Boo Weekley, his playing partner, and Danny Lee was shrinking.

Spieth was the first to say he was lucky this day, especially when his tee balls on 13 and 15 did not go in the water. A fade at 13 stayed just above the water on a steep grassy slope. He scrambled to make a par 5. On the par-4 15 he pulled a hybrid left toward a pond and just stayed dry.

Spieth said he "definitely got the right breaks. ... I feel very fortunate for that."

He wedged from lush rough at 15 to within 16 feet 2 inches of the cup. When he first hit the putt, he thought he had missed it, as he walked ahead with the ball about halfway to its destination. a moment like this again," Spieth at 12-under 268. in amazement. The ball had gone into the hole.

"I thought it was going to miss to the right," he said. "I didn't think it was breaking back at the end. I could have stayed in it, but I've been kind of walking out of putts the whole day. I started walking, and it caught the lip. It was one of those happy surpris-

Berger rebounded from a bogey at the first to birdie No. 2, 13, 15 and 17. The latter putt was from feet, 7 inches. From the tee, Spieth saw Berger pump his right fist again and knew his friend was a fortified challenger.

The duel among friends, though, soon ended in the play-

Ducks Greats Teemu Selanne, Paul Kariya Selected for Hockey Hall of Fame

By Eric Stephens

The Orange County Register

Teemu Selanne blew away the NHL with his breakaway speed from the moment he jumped into the league, captivating it with his goal-scoring touch and magnetic personality. Those aspects of the multifaceted lover of fast cars and uptempo hockey instantly made him a fan favorite.

Paul Kariya made a name for himself as college hockey's top player as a freshman before becoming the first superstar for the still-fledgling Mighty Ducks of Anaheim, as well as their longtime captain and leader. His reserved demeanor juxtaposed his highlight-reel brilliance on the

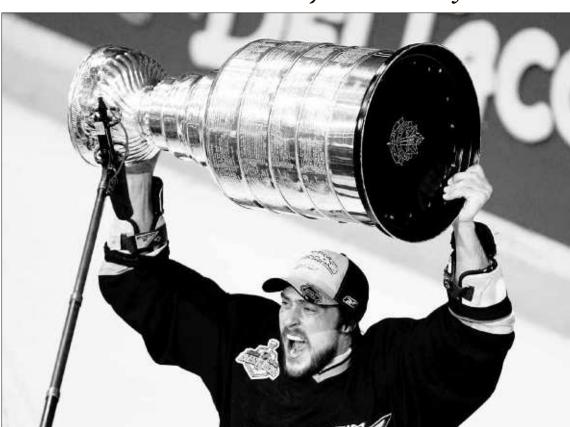

The two offensive savants made the Ducks watchable and competitive over parts of six seasons together during the franchise's formative years. Fittingly, they will now be linked together in the Hockey Hall of Fame.

Selanne and Kariya were nominated Monday by the Hall of Fame selection committee, joined by Dave Andreychuk, Mark Recchi and Canadian women's national team standout Danielle Goyette in the player category. Boston Bruins owner Jeremy Jacobs and longtime Canadian college hockey coach Clare Drake will enter in the builder category.

All will be enshrined in a ceremony Nov. 13 in Toronto.

As expected, Selanne was a no-doubt selection in his first year on the ballot. Kariya, a 50goal scorer in 1995-96 who surpassed 100 points twice, had to wait but finally got the call after being on the ballot since 2013.

"What a tremendous day for our franchise to have two players named 2017 Hockey Hall of Fame inductees," Ducks owners Henry and Susan Samueli said in a statement. "Both Teemu and Paul now rightfully take their place among legendary players in the history of the sport.

In this June 6, 2007, file photo, Anaheim Ducks right wing Teemu Selanne, of Finland, raises the Stanley Cup after winning Game 5 of the NHL Stanley Cup final hockey game over the Ottawa Senators, in Anaheim, Calif. Selanne is expected to headline the Hockey Hall of Fame's induction class of 2017, when it is announced Monday.

"The relationship Teemu has with our fans is unparalleled in professional sports. Paul was the first true face of our franchise and helped put the organization on the map. Congratulations to Selanne didn't get the nickname "the Finnish Flash" for nothing. A sensational rookie with the original Winnipeg Jets, Selanne settled in as the gregarious face of the Ducks through his first lengthy turn when they were a not-so-mighty team and a second run when they because the mightiest of them all.

Fourteen memorable years over those stints made Selanne a franchise icon. Numerous records broken and multiple awards bestowed made him a legend, but it was his many Olympic medals earned and a cherished

Stanley Cup won that made him a champion.

Kariya was the Ducks first draft pick, the fourth overall choice in 1993 after winning the Hobey Baker Award as college hockey's top player in leading Maine to the NCAA title in his only season. He would become one of the NHL's best left wings during his nine seasons with

One of the top players of the late 1990s, Kariya scored 300 goals and 669 points with the Ducks _ both team records that were eclipsed by Selanne _ before leaving for Colorado as a free agent. Kariya would also play for Nashville and St. Louis, but the effects of multiple concussions cut into his productivity toward the end of his 15-year career. Other than the Ducks' Cup triumph on home ice in 2007, Kariya provided what many call the greatest moment in franchise history when he came back from the trainer's table after being laid out by a hit from New Jersey's Scott Stevens and scoring on a slap shot in Game 6 of the 20003 Cup Final.

There was little, if any doubt, that the player whose No. 8 jersey is the first and only one retired by the Ducks would forever take his place among the all-time greats. Selanne's long list of individual accomplishments was worthy on its own.

otherworldly 76-goal His rookie season with the Jets may remain the NHL standard by a first-year player. The obvious Calder Trophy winner that season, Selanne either tied or led the league in goals three times and, in 1999, became the first Maurice Richard Trophy winner to honor Selanne's 684 goals are 11th on the all-time list. Only Dave Andreychuk and Brett Hull have scored more times on the power play than the winger's 255. More importantly, Selanne had 110 game-winning scores that tie him with Hull for third-most in league history.

Four times selected as a firstor second-team NHL all-star right wing, Selanne also made 10 All-Star game appearances and holds every major Ducks career scoring record compiled in a franchise-most 966 games. Team success would come later during his second act. A year after his comeback 2005-06 season that earned him a Masterton Trophy for his perseverance following a major knee injury, Selanne captured his only Stanley Cup with the Ducks. Tears flowed from the emotional winger on the ice in the moments after winning.

Selanne also starred in international competition for Finland. He is the leading scorer in Olympic men's hockey competition, having done so over six Olympiads with the national team. A silver medal was won in 2006 along with bronze medals captured in 1998, 2010 and 2014.

Few players have also had the enduring popularity that came with great success on the ice. Always warm and approachable, Selanne was diligent in signing autographs and posing for pictures with fans in various hockey locales throughout North America and overseas.

Long after he had been traded by the Jets to the Ducks in 1996, Selanne was treated to long standing ovations during and after his return to Winnipeg for his first NHL game in the city in 15 years. The winger met with hundreds of fans in the early morning hours when the Ducks arrived into town.

Disputed Call at Home Looms Large as Mariners Drop Series to Astros

By Jayson Jenks

The Seattle Times

The Mariners lost 8-2 to the Astros on Sunday to slip back to .500, so maybe one play in the second inning wouldn't have mattered.

But then again, who knows?

In the second inning of a scoreless game, Mariners second baseman Robinson Cano doubled with two outs and the bases loaded. Two runners scored easily. The third, Mitch Haniger, slid home in bang-bang unison with the ball.

He was called out.

The Mariners (39-39) challenged the call, and slow-motion replays appeared to show Haniger's hand touching the plate before he was tagged.

Or at least that's what Haniger and Mariners manager Scott Servais thought.

"I thought I got in," Haniger said, "but they thought other-

Instead, there was confusion after the play and after the game. Crew chief Angel Hernandez signaled Haniger safe before admitting he'd made the wrong signal (the call on the field stood).

Confusion lingered after the derstand why replay officials in New York didn't change the call.

Dyson and Felix Hernandez said after Friday's 13-3 win. But the Mariners scored just four combined runs in the last two games both losses — against the firstplace Astros.

"Disappointing ballgame,' Servais said. "I think coming in, we were playing really well coming into this series. The last couple days they just shut us down offensively."

Mariners' starter Ariel Miranda allowed only five hits in 7 1/3 innings. But his problem was that four of those five hits came in the fourth inning.

Miranda allowed a solo home run to George Springer, a single to Jose Altuve, who advanced to second because of a Miranda throwing error, an RBI double to Carlos Correa and, finally, a twoout, two-run home run to Yuli Gurriel.

"The one inning got him," Servais.

The Mariners didn't have another base runner until the seventh inning. And just like the first inning, in which they left the bases loaded with one out, they did the same to end the game in the ninth inning.

James Pazos hadn't allowed a run in his last seven appearances and had allowed just two runs in all of June. But he couldn't find the strike zone in the ninth inning and allowed four runs to put the game out of reach.

Houston Shows Mariners How High the Bar is in AL West

By Todd Milles

The News Tribune

SEATTLE — Certainly after a hot-hitting June, and buoyed by the knowledge that they are finally getting fully healthy, the Mariners have plenty to look forward to as the season shifts to the summer months.

But they have to find a way to close the performance gap between themselves and the A.L. West-leading Houston Astros.

The Astros beat Seattle, 8-2, on Sunday at Safeco Field. They have now won eight of the 11 games played this season.

Want a positive Mariners' statistic from this three-game series? Seattle outscored its visitors, 17-16.

But he continues to deliver time and time again.

It was one shaky fourth inning that did in Miranda against the Astros. He left two pitches up to George Springer and Yuli Gurriel that were both sent into orbit for home runs. And he gave up Correa's run-scoring double that also nearly left the ballpark.

Clint Dempsey's Goal in Stoppage Time Allows Sounders to Salvage Point in Portland

By Geoff Baker

The Seattle Times

PORTLAND, Ore. — In a hot, muggy visitors' locker room at halftime Sunday night, the Sounders worked hard to shake off what hit them right at the end of the opening 45 minutes-plus.

They'd outplayed the Portland Timbers in front of their hometown fans at Providence Park, only to collapse in the final 3 1/2 minutes by allowing two goals and losing defender Brad Evans to a red card. But in that locker room, the Sounders regrouped, pressed the play throughout the second half and scored a Clint Dempsey equalizer deep into injury time to salvage a 2-2 draw and a critical road point that appeared lost.

"We wanted to show character," Dempsey said after his ninth career goal of this Cascadia rivalry. "Go back out there and show fight. Get something from the game even though we had a man down. Credit to the guys. They fought hard and we were able to do it."

The Sounders and Dempsey have been down this road before in this stadium. They trailed 4-0 at halftime in a game against the Timbers last August before rallying for a pair of second-half goals in a loss that often is credited for starting the team on its MLS Cup run.

And Dempsey, according to his coach, simply loves scoring against Portland. Dempsey couldn't resist a postgame smile when asked about the 94th-minute snap-header from the box he it early. Joevin Jones opened the put on a Roman Torres cross that beat keeper Jake Gleeson to his 'It definitely feels good," he

The West's defensive MVP was North Kitsap's Zach Clark, who had two of the six interceptions, three of which came on the East's first four possessions. Franklin Pierce's Willie Patterson, whose father Pat was an NAIA All-American at Central Washington, also had two interceptions, caught two passes, threw one and ran the ball twice.

For the East, Tumwater wide receiver Andrew May was the offensive MVP and Aberdeen linebacker Braden Castleberry-Taylor was the defensive MVP. May led the game with six receptions and 87 yards and scored one of the East's two touchdowns.

La Salle's Jordan Martin was having a dynamic game for the East before a shoulder tweak ended his afternoon. He caught five passes for 49 yards — all in the first half as the East trailed only 14-6 at the break — and returned three kicks for 41 yards.

Coming out of golf season, which he called his "offseason," Martin was clearly one of the East's top playmakers. But he credited his form on conditioning workouts from Montana's Carroll College, where he and La Salle teammate Ryan James will play next.

"It's fun knowing everyone you're playing with and against is one of the best players on their teams," Martin said of his Barden experience. "There's really no room for mistakes, but that makes it fun. I was optimistic going in because of our practices. I just went out ready to have fun and make plays for us."

Martin's favorite extracurricular activity of the week were the viciously competitive pingpong tournaments, of which Othello's Reese Jones was apparently the undisputed champion.

"He was amazing - right handed or left," he said. "It was a lot of fun this week and a great experience."

'Our team was made up of raw talent. We weren't technically knowledgeable as the teams today. If you see them train today, you'll see the difference," Goedhard said. "We were big kids. The Fresno coach, when we played for regionals, said that's the biggest bunch of athletes they've ever seen."

Oregon State was 27-12 in 1952, and earned a berth into the sixth College World Series in Omaha after winning the Pac-8 Championship. Goedhard remembers getting off the train and noticing how hot it was compared to playing baseball in the Northwest.

"The team was confident. We were sure we could win. We went there optimistic that we were going to be winners," Goedhard said. "The difference occurred when we hit Omaha and got off the train — it was 104 degrees."

On June 12, 1952, the Beavers played Duke in the opening round of the CWS. Goedhard came in after starting pitcher Don White lasted 1/3 of an inning while giving up four runs. Goedhard remembers his first pitch of the game well.

"I threw one pitch, it was a knuckleball and they grounded it and it was a double play," Goedhard said. "It started great. That was good, then it all went to hell. The other team did well, but we did bad."

He also had a hit, and scored the team's first run of the game. Goedhard pitched 5 1/3 innings. It was the last game he ever pitched.

"We just withered. I lost eight pounds in the 5 1/3 innings I pitched against Duke, the catcher lost 14 pounds,3 Goedhard said. "We wore wool uniforms, we had no Gatorade, no mist, you had to go into the dugout and out back and maybe there was a jug of water. We just weren't ready for any kind of weather like that."

Duke won 18-7, and the Beavers were eliminated the next day after a 10-1 loss to Texas. After college, Goedhard traveled around Europe for 18 months before getting into forestry. He started working for Weyerhaeuser in 1956, and moved to Chehalis for work in 1972 after jobs in Longview, Tacoma and Snoqualmie.

His kids played baseball in the Twin Cities, and Goedhard helped coach his three sons. Goedhard has enjoyed the baseball community in Lewis County.

"Our kids played at Wheeler (Field). It's very competitive and Centralia has always been a powerhouse. My son was a pitcher at W.F. West and it was very competitive, they seemed to always beat us," Goedhard said. "It's good baseball country here and it's going to get better. As the facilities get better and money is put into it, it will be better yet." Goedhard has had the chance to see the game develop from its early stages, and is impressed at the level of play in today's game.

"It's fantastically good. The training and the technology and the strategy is so much more complex, it's extremely competitive," Goedhard said. "I can't think of a more competitive sport than baseball right now."

During Oregon State's 2017 season, at the end of March, the 1952 team was honored during the Beavers' three game homestand against Arizona. Goedhard toured the team's new facilities and was in awe of how far the program has come since the

"If we had 1,000 people there, that was great. At OSU, they get at least 3,000 a game, they don't miss a game," Goedhard said. "It's amazing the number of OSU fans around here. My neighbor across the street is a Beaver. It's fantastic the people that are following this. It's beyond anyand he was honored with a bat and a jersey during the ceremonies and threw out the first pitch.

It's not the only big moment he's had on the field since his OSU days; Goedhard played in a Pasadena alumni game, and a semipro game, with fellow Pasadena alum Jackie Robinson.

"He was a great man, we purposely went down to Brookside Park by the Rose Bowl to watch Jackie play ball because he stole everything," Goedhard said. "If he got on first, you could bet he was going to steal. Everybody knew he was going, and we loved that. It was great respect to watch him."

His favorite baseball memories? The hit against Duke, the March ceremony at OSU and the junior college championship. "My best memory is I think getting up and first time at bat and getting that base hit because I knew I could hit, and I had a chance," Goedhard said. "My next memory would be going back to OSU to be recognized in comparison to how well this team does today." Overall, Goedhard said his iggest impact on the game of baseball was the way the 1952 OSU team put the Northwest on the baseball map, a feat that has stood the test of time to this day. "We were really the first team to say 'You can play in the Northwest, play good ball." he said. "That's the significance of our '52 win."

Lower Columbia Edges RBI

KELSO — Lower Columbia AAA had five errors against RBI here on Monday, but was able to escape with a 6-5 win in legion baseball action.

RBI's Tanner Catlin got the start on the mound, allowing just one earned run in four innings of work. Dylan Stakelin came on in relief and struck out two batters in two innings of work.

Stakelin contributed at the plate as well, going 2 for 3 with a double and a walk. Zach Wein- nings to take a 5-4 lead.

ert was 1 for 3 with a walk and Brady Steveson reached base in all five at bats, including a hit, two walks, two stolen bases and an RBI for the Dirtbags.

"We played great, I'm especially happy with the error column, we played a relatively clean game," RBI coach Jordan Nailon said. "We had a lot of good at bats, we weren't giving outs away. The guys probably deserved to win this game in a different fashion. I'm disappointed to have it taken away from them, we're not supposed to be able to compete with those dudes but it was a winnable game and we forced them to go to their ace."

NBA Champ Kevin Durant Pops Up at Hoopfest

By Whitney Ogden

The Spokesman-Review

Halfway through the 6-footand-under men's semifinal at Nike Center Court on Saturday, a few turned their backs towards the court. They gazed down Stevens Street and pointed at something that had caught their eyes.

A few others looked up to see why some had began ignoring the game. They took out their cell phones and started leaning over the back of the bleachers to grab a better photo.

Then the crowd erupted.

Golden State Warriors star Kevin Durant surprised thousands of Hoopfest players and fans on Sunday as he made his way between the bleachers along Stevens and to the center of the court.

Young fans rushed from the bleachers, grabbing their basketballs, gym bags, hats, whatever they could find, for the 2017 NBA Finals MVP to sign.

But Durant stayed on the side of the court behind a circle of body guards and police and watched the final minutes of the 3-on-3 semifinal the thousands of fans had forgotten about. He looked around at all of his young fans who had spent the entire weekend on the streets playing the game that has defined Durant's fame.

"It makes me smile, man. Basketball is just so precious to me and the game is just so much fun and I want everybody to experience the amount of fun I have when I play," Durant said. '(Hoopfest) is sparking a lot of young kids. Hopefully we'll see a lot of NBA players come through

Although it may come as a surprise to many Morton residents, Clark actually made a surprise visit to her hometown recently.

"When we played Seattle and Portland a few weeks ago, we actually drove through Morton. It was early in the morning and we got out and walked around. We went to the Jubilee grounds, which is actually where they played football when I was going to school, and it just brought back a lot great memories for me," said Clark, who is excited to reconnect with her roots at the Loggers Jubilee. "I just hope that I get to see a lot of people that I haven't seen in a long time."

In a statement on the Loggers Jubilee website, organizers echoed Clark's excitement. The post noted:

"This year we are proud to announce that we will be having our first music venue on Saturday night. We are even more excited to say that one of Morton's own, Brandy Clark, will be performing! She will be doing a special concert in the arena on Saturday night. Her album entitled, 'Big Day In a Small Town' has taken on new meaning for all of us. We are so proud and grateful for her appearing at Jubilee."

In addition to her Aug. 12 performance in Morton at the Jubilee, Clark will also be making an appearance in Chehalis on July 21 for a performance at the Chehalis Theatre. Clark promises that the two shows, at the vastly different venues, will be unique enough that people shouldn't be skeptical about attending both.

"People can expect two very different shows," insisted Clark.

She said the Jubilee will be a more lively set for the benefit Saturday night revelers in Morton while the Chehalis Theatre show will be stripped down to just a guitar and bass with Clark on vocals.

'This tour I did in the spring was mostly theaters and small clubs. I like both settings. I like the energy of the standing room and I like the intimacy of a seated room where people are really able to hear the words,"

Anything Can Be Coleslaw if You Know What You're Doing

By James P. DeWan

Chicago Tribune

Now that our old pal global warming has kicked summer back into spring, no doubt you've been firing up the grill for several weeks now, charring yourself some luscious hunks of bloody, bloody meat.

In all seriousness, though, beloved peeps, unless you're suffering from a bit of the lycanthropy, you're going to need something more than flesh to satisfy your pangs.

And that's where the mighty slaw comes in.

Oh, slaw, with your tangy crunch and bumptiously highfibered nutritional content, why have we not feted you previously?

Why You Need to Learn This

We've discussed previously and at length the need to adhere like Scotch tape to the rigid principles of jingoistic Amerkinism. Sure, slaw's origins are not in this country (not unlike most of ours), but you'd still be hardpressed to find a family barbecue in the U.S of A. without at least one bowl brimming with the stuff. Without slaw, it's just not a barbecue; it's just a bunch of woebegone werewolves wishing for more napkins.

The Steps You Take

Now, of course the most common kind of slaw is of the cole-ish kind. In fact, the word "coleslaw" is simply a transliteration from the Dutch "koolsla," which, according to the Oxford English Dictionary, the foremost authority on the origin of English language words, is a form of "kool-salade" or cabbage salad.

Interestingly, by the way, that "kohl" sound is found in many members of the family Brassica, which the kids these days like to refer to as the "cabbage family." Broccoli, cauliflower, kohlrabi, collards, Border collies _ it's all right there.

That's right: Come for the slaw. Stay for the lexicological bloviations.

Now, when most of us think of coleslaw, we're thinking of shredded (or chiffonade of) cabbage dressed with a creamy mayonnaise dressing. (Unless you're from North Carolina, in which case, your cabbage might be diced and tossed with a vinegar-based dressing.)

Cabbage aside, though, if we recall that the "slaw" means "salad," our eyes are now open to a whole world of possibilities. Anything you can make into a salad, you can make into a slaw. In fact, what even is the differ-

L. Guy Mecklem Makes Seattle's First Airship Ascent at Luna Park on June 27, 1908

L. Guy Mecklem (1882-1973) makes Seattle's first airship ascent at Luna Park on Elliott Bay. A week later he will successfully race automobiles 10 miles to The Meadows racetrack near Georgetown.

Llewellyn Guy Mecklem grew up in Seattle and worked as an itinerant daredevil aeronaut making ascents in tethered hot-air balloons while hanging from a trapeze and then floating to earth under a parachute. He appeared at amusement parks and on behalf of real estate developers. In California he learned to pilot hydrogenfilled airships powered by the aeronaut operating air oars. As a race car driver in Seattle in 1906, he earned the sobriquet, 'Wild Scotsman.'

In the autumn of 1907, Mecklem approached Charles A. Looff, who operated the Luna Park amusement center at Duwamish Head, to stage aerial exhibitions. Looff agreed and Mecklem set out to design a powered airship. From a paper scale model he assembled a silk envelope (with the assistance of two local seamstresses and their sewing machines) in a rented hall in South Seattle.

When completed, the envelope measured 58 feet long and 18 feet in diameter at its widest point. A net framework suspended bags of sand and a 38-pound wood frame. A 10-horsepower gasoline engine from the Glenn Curtiss Manufacturing Co. of Hammondsport, New York, spun either a two- or four-blade propeller. An automobile clutch allowed the pilot to disengage the propeller from the engine. When packaged for shipment, the whole vehicle weighed less than 500 pounds.

Mecklem moved his airship to a specially constructed hanger at Luna Park at the beginning of the 1908 season. Two 400-gallon wine casks converted sulfuric acid and iron filings to hydrogen gas to inflate the

On June 27, the airship was ready for its first test flight and a large crowd gathered to witness the event. Mecklem told the men tethering the airship, "Let her go!" and the silk cylinder rose skyward. The aeronaut shifted his weight and used a rudder for control. To go up, he released bags of ballast. To drop, he released gas from the envelope.

But June 27 was a sunny day and as the sun heated the envelope, the hydrogen expanded. Before Mecklem could valve gas, the bag ruptured along a bottom seam and the flammable hydrogen spilled upon the hot engine and fiery exhaust. The intrepid aeronaut acted quickly and snatched both sides of the tear while kicking the ignition switch off (The Seattle Sunday Times printed that Mecklem used his teeth). He then retrieved his jackknife and stabbed holes in the bag to release more gas. The crippled airship splashed into Elliott Bay near Queen Anne Hill. Residual gas kept the craft afloat until Mecklem was rescued by the tug Leroy.

The seamstresses stitched the envelope back together in time for a Fourth of July, 10mile race against automobiles between Luna Park and The Meadows racetrack. Mecklem beat the cars, but almost hit the Duwamish River. He instead landed in a garden next to the track. The cars arrived two minutes later.

Mecklem barged his craft back to Luna Park and made one more flight on July 8. He charged 10 cents each for visitors to examine the airship in its hanger at the park before he took it on the road to fairs in the West. In Compton, California, later that summer, he impaled the airship on a flagpole.

Mecklem tried biplanes, then flew two other airships, and airplanes for two years before leaving aviation and taking up carnival gymnastics, deepsea diving, and finally berry farming. The former aeronaut died in Bellingham in January

Historian Donald Eklund asked Mecklem what he called his airship. The old man replied, "I didn't call it anything. Should have named it Mecklem's Follies, I guess. Anyway, it was sure fun chasing those cows."

Explosions at the J. A. Denn Powder Co., in Hawk's Prairie Near Lacey, Kill 10 and Injure Seven on June 27, 1934

10 people are killed and seven are injured when two explosions demolish the J. A. Denn Powder Co. plant on Hawk's Prairie, 8 miles east of Olympia. An 11th victim, the company chemist, will die from his injuries the following day. Thurston County authorities investigate the accident, but so little of the plant remains that the official cause will remain a mystery.

Manufacturing Dynamite

The J. A. Denn Powder Co. was located approximately 2 miles east of the town of Lacey and eight miles east of Olympia, the state capital. Built in 1933, the plant sat on 10 acres of grassland, surrounded by a buffer zone of second-growth Doug-fir trees, in a sparsely populated area known as Hawk's Prairie. The plant consisted of eight main structures: a powder mixing building and a powder magazine, both constructed of concrete, a cartridge packing building, a boiler room, two store rooms, and an office. For safety, the entire compound was surrounded by a barbed-wire fence to keep out trespassers. Several cottages had been built near the compound, providing housing for the plant managers and some of the workers; however most employees commuted from nearby communities. The plant ran two shifts, morning and evening, each with about 15 to 20 employees, depending on the workload.

A Terrific Blast

The first blast was thought to have occurred in the powder mixing building. It leveled the concrete building, spread wreckage over a wide area and started several grass fires. A second blast sent debris and a huge cloud of gray smoke several hundred feet into the sky. Pieces of wood and scraps of metal were flung into trees hundreds of yards away. Windows were shattered and furniture was toppled in the nearby company houses. Inside the compound, flaming wreckage was scattered amid sticks of dynamite that lay everywhere among the bodies of the victims. Raging grass fires hindered early rescue efforts, but they were brought under control by volunteer firefighters and the Civilian Conservation Corps who used picks, shovels and plows to make firebreaks. Seven of the victims were killed instantly by the terrific blast and three died in ambulances on the way to St. Peter Hospital in Olympia.

Lusty Lady marquee, Seattle, April 29,

Lusty Lady, Irreverent Seattle Landmark, Closes on June 27, 2010

The Lusty Lady, a downtown Seattle "panoram," or peepshow, closes after 25 years. Famed for the irreverent puns and doubleentendres on its iconic pink and black marquee, "the Lusty" is an echo of Seattle's bawdy past, when First Avenue was lined with pawn shops, tattoo parlors, and topless clubs instead of luxury condos and trendy restaurants. It has survived several efforts by civic authorities to shut it down, only to fall victim to changing economic times. The owners say their profits have been stripped away by the recession and the proliferation of free titillation on the internet. They donate the much-photographed marquee to the Museum of History & Industry (MOHAI), which in 2012 put it on display, complete with cheeky one-liners, alongside signs from other bygone Seattle institutions.

There Goes the Neighborhood

Downtown property owners, developers, and city officials were appalled by the opening of a "live girlie stage" in an area that they were trying to "revitalize." Until the late 1970s, First Avenue was the heart of Seattle's vice district. Locals called it "Flesh Avenue" because of its concentration of adult bookstores, topless clubs, seedy taverns and porno theaters. Drug dealing and prostitution were commonplace. The tone of the neighborhood began to change in the early 1980s, after a renovation of the Pike Place Market and the construction of several upscale hotel, condo and office buildings.

Coleslaw

Well, I'm no Rex Tillerson*, but, I'd say that while all slaws are salads, not all salads are slaws. For one thing, salad ingredients can come in all shapes and sizes, but slaw ingredients generally are shredded or minced. Also, show of hands: How many of you have ordered a salad and asked for the dressing on the side? slaws are generally dressed.

If you want to make a slaw then, all you have to do is get some very fresh vegetables (It's farmers market season, kids!!!), render them into small bits, coat them lightly with a delicious dressing and, as my fine young son used to bellow on the tennis court: "Blammo!"

We have achieved slaw.

One word about that "rendering into small bits" part: If you're going to cut the ingredients by hand, julienne or small dice are nice sizes. Alternately, you can run everything over a box grater or through the shredding attachment on your food processor. "Large holes or small," I can hear your fretting from here. Remember, this is why your ancestors came here from those other oppressive, proper-grater-holesize-demanding countries.

Like Canada.

If you're using vegetables like broccoli or cauliflower, break them into the smallest florets you can manage.

Generally speaking, slaws are defined by their main ingredient or ingredients. I tend not to use more than three, only because it takes up too much space on the menu. Think broccoli, raisin and carrot, or carrot, snow pea and radish, or radish, jicama and apple, or apple, fennel and cabbage, or cabbage, carrot and scallion, or scallion, edamame and bacon. OK, this is getting nutsy, fast. But, see what I'm doing? I'm just riffing on ingredients that taste good raw (except the bacon), then putting them together all crazylike. Or, you can fancy up your basic

An Indian-style slaw features finely julienned carrots, pea pods, cabbage and jicama, garnished with shredded coconut, peanuts and cilantro.

coleslaw by combining your cabbage with just about anything

Now, let's get some ideas for dressings. All of the following are acid-based (vinegar, citrus), but they also can be stirred into mayonnaise for a creamier slaw. Also, remember that everything needs salt to taste:

Asian-style 1: Equal parts soy sauce, rice wine vinegar, sesame oil, optional brown sugar; garlic, ginger, sesame seeds and/or wasabi paste to taste.

Asian-style 2: Two parts lime juice to one part each fish sauce, brown sugar, optional peanuts or peanut butter; garlic, cilantro, mint and salt to taste.

South American (think "chimichurri"): Equal parts cilantro and parsley finely chopped with garlic to taste; stir into 2-to-1 blend of extra-virgin olive oil and sherry or red wine vinegar; oregano and red pepper flakes

Indian-style: Equal parts lime juice, oil, shredded coconut, peanuts and cilantro; garam masala and a pinch of turmeric

North Carolina (Piedmont): Equal parts ketchup, cider vinegar and sugar; black pepper and optional hot sauce or cayenne pepper to taste.

Now, go make some slaw. *If anyone can explain this joke to me, I'm listening.

Caesar Slaw

Makes: 12 servings My friend and colleague, chef Wook Kang, featured this recently on the dinner menu at the Dining Room at Kendall

Ingredients:

- 12 ounces Romaine lettuce, chiffonade
- 12 ounces radicchio, chiffonade
- 12 ounces frisee, chiffonade 12 ounces Caesar slaw dressing,
- see recipe 6 ounces Parmesan, grated
- 12 ounces bacon lardons, crisped
- 2 ounces Italian parsley, finely minced 1 Toss three lettuces with
- dressing.
- 2 Serve, topped with grated Parmesan, bacon and parsley.

Caesar Slaw Dressing

Makes: about 13/4 cups 4 ounces Parmesan, grated 1 shallot, minced 2 cloves garlic, minced 3 ounces cider vinegar

1 ounce lemon juice 1 cup mayonnaise 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

1 tablespoon Worcestershire 1 tablespoon hot sauce, optional 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive

1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar

1 ounce anchovy paste Salt and pepper to taste 2 teaspoons finely minced parsley

Directions:

In a large bowl, whisk all ingredients until combined. Chill 30 minutes before using.

ADVICE: Dear Abby

Widower Finds Companionship, But Isn't Ready for Romance

DEAR ABBY: My wife died of cancer four years ago. She was my best friend, and the pain of losing her was more than I could cope with. I was in a fog for about two years, just going through the motions. Eventually the fear of spending the next 20 to 30 years alone drove me to try internet dating. I met some nice women and some very strange ones, but nothing came of it.

Then a year ago, an old friend introduced me to Elaine." We hit it off immediately. We share the same interests and offbeat sense of humor, and I have grown fond of her. She's intelligent, kind and easy on the eyes. Our grown kids get along very well.

Our mutual friend told me that Elaine said she loves me and would be thrilled if I proposed — I guess to encourage me to the next level. My problem is, I'm still in love with my late wife.

If Elaine one day tells me she loves me, how do I respond without hurting her feelings or making her withdraw? I can see myself loving her in the future, but I am still silently mourning my wife. I don't want to chase Elaine away, so please tell me what to do. — NEW YORK WIDOWER

DEAR WIDOWER: You and Elaine appear to have a communication problem. You are both adults. If she has fallen in love with you, you shouldn't have to hear it from a mutual friend. You owe it to her to have a frank talk with her because she needs to know that you don't intend to remarry until you are over the loss of your late wife. She may decide to stick it out and wait or, as you say, decide to move on. But at least she'll know what she's dealing with.

It might also be a good idea for you to consult a grief therapist. Because if you do, it may make it easier for you to move forward with your life.

DEAR ABBY: Our friend's adult children invited us to a birthday party they were throwing for their parent at a restaurant. As we were ordering, the server asked if the checks would be separate or couples. (This was our first clue that we were expected to pay for our dinner.) For us, it was no problem, but an elderly couple had a long discussion about how they would pay.

When inviting guests to a party, is it proper to expect them to pay for their dinner? And if so, how should it be phrased in the invitation? If no mention is made, how would one inquire as to how the bill is handled?

This has never come up before. Hosts (including us) have always picked up the tab. — CAUGHT OFF GUARD IN OHIO DEAR CAUGHT OFF GUARD: How embarrassing for that older couple, not to mention your friend. Unless it is discussed or agreed upon beforehand, a host is expected to pick up the check. (That's what "host" means.) If guests will be expected to pay for their own drinks (or meals), then the occasion is a "no host" gathering. That the guests were expected to pay for their own meal should not have been announced at the last minute; it should have been mentioned when the invitation was issued.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Know your limitations and refrain from taking on too much or overspending on things you don't need. Stick to tried-and-true means and methods, and avoid confusion.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Look over your financial and personal papers carefully. Don't give anyone access to your passwords or information that might be used against you. Don't rely on outside help. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Your instincts will not be wrong when dealing with partnerships, people from vour past or someone vou love. Express your thoughts and don't overdo it, overspend or put up with excessive

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

Make your residence homey. Welcome changes that will make your life easier, but make sure you can afford the updates before you begin. Lowering your personal expenses will ease stress SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

Being honest about your feelings will lead to answers to problems that have been causing you uncertainty and setbacks. Taking a short trip or doing fact-finding is in your best interest.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)

Emotions will surface. Don't dodge issues or offer false information just to spare someone's feelings. Honesty is a priority and should not be ignored if you want to avoid repercussions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Sign up for an activity that will broaden your mind or offer innovative life philosophies that will help you keep a positive attitude and set appropriate AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

Joint ventures will not turn out as anticipated. Make sure you read the fine print of any deal. Don't trust what someone tells you regarding money, health or legal matters. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Get involved in events that address issues that concern you. Children will have an impact on your life, offering a different perspective on a situation you face. Live and learn. ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Just because you are a pioneer doesn't mean that you must indulge in every new thing or change that presents itself. Careful consideration will spare you angst and unnecessary costs.

Help the ones you love. What you do will be well received and will put you in high regard. A business expense should be monitored closely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep your emotions under control and vour mind focused on the changes you can bring about. Don't count on someone to give you sound advice or offer accurate instructions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

THURDAY, JUNE 29, 2017 CANCER (June 21-July 22)

increases from TV networks owned by A&E Networks, AMC Networks, CBS Corporation, Discovery Communications, Disney/ESPN, FOX Networks, NBCUniversal. Scripps Networks Interactive, Turner Networks, Viacom, regional sports programmers, and independent channel providers, Wave's Cable TV rates will be adjusted in August.

At Wave, we offer our Expanded Content TV programming tier to customers at a subscription price equal to the cost we pay for the content included. When network owners increase their monthly fees to us, we pass through the new rate to those customers that subscribe to that tier of service. To make it easy to understand the passed-through programming costs paid to cable networks, this information is detailed on each customer's bill.

At Wave, our number one goal is creating happy, long-term customers. We work diligently on our customers' behalf to man-TV programming costs, while seeking more choices. Unfortunately, cable television networks continue to increase their fees and require us to bundle their channels together which limits your choice in selecting the programming you want to watch. For more information on the costs associated with TV programming, please visit www.wave home.com/content.
