CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) - Acity official who wanted to include an elderly woman in a photo op about a snow shoveling program persuaded a middleaged man to dress up in a wig, earrings, lipstick and a dress.

The man stood next to the mayor of Cranston at a news conference touting the program and wore a name tag that said 'Cranston Senior Home Resident."

WJAR-TV uncovered the ruse in reports this week.

It is unclear why officials decided to use a stand-in for a woman during the Jan. 5 news conference, which was held at the senior center where the man worked as a van driver.

Sue Stenhouse, the city's director of senior services, organized the news conference. She resigned last week, according to Rob Coupe, the city's director of administration. Stenhouse, a 2006 Republican nominee for secretary of state, did not return messages requesting comment.

Coupe refused to explain what happened, saying it was a personnel matter.

Mayor Allan Fung, the 2014 Republican nominee for governor, did not return a phone message seeking comment.

People who answered the phone at the senior center said they had no comment.

Two city councilmen told The Providence Journal they believe the stunt was meant to deceive the public. City Counwould ask the mayor for an explanation.

Meanwhile, a hair salon owner told WJAR-TV that she unwittingly supplied the wig for the caper to David Roberts, the van driver who transports seniors to the salon.

'Unfortunate Circumstances' Led to Chehalis Police Dog Biting Innocent Resident, Chief Says

BITE: Glenn Schaffer Says Dog Was Acting on Training; Victim Says Not Enough Investigation Has Been Done

By Natalie Johnson

A Chehalis Police Department officer says he thought he was about to be attacked Sunday.

A resident, unaware of a search for a suspect in the area, mistook the sound of the officer for a prowler and emerged from a garage yelling and wielding a

The result was "an unfortunate set of circumstances" that led to Joshua Putman being bitten in the stomach by police dog Reign, according to the Chehalis Police Department.

Putman and family members told The Chronicle Friday they don't believe enough has been done to address the issue.

"If my dog bit someone in their house, it wouldn't be ok," Putman said. "I'm just kind of still in shock."

Chehalis Police Department Chief Glenn Schaffer said the dog was acting in accordance with its training when it bit the Centralia man Sunday while tracking another person suspected in an interrupted vehicle prowl.

He said there has been a thorough review of the incident. While he regrets the injuries to Putman, he said the dog was acting on his training.

Reign was protecting (his handler) in that circumstance it wasn't that Reign randomly bit somebody walking down the street," Schaffer told The Chronicle Thursday. "It's a very unfortunate set of circumstances, none of it has been taken lightly, but I don't know if there's a place to place the blame."

AT 6:49 P.M. SUNDAY, police responded to a report of an interrupted vehicle prowl in the 900 block of North Washington Avenue in Centralia. The Chehalis Police Department responded to assist the Centralia officers.

According to the Chehalis Police Department, witnesses thought the suspect to be in the area of Third Street and North Washington Avenue — about a block away from Putman's house.

Putman and his sister, Kristian Pickard, and a few other people were in their detached garage in the 500 block of West Fourth Street when they heard someone outside.

"We're out in our garage and we hear a commotion outside, a noise," Putman said.

Pickard said at one point they heard a sound resembling a zipper being zipped. Not knowing police were searching the area for a suspect, they assumed a prowler was snooping around the property.

According to a Chehalis Police Department report filed by Chehalis K9 Reign notifies Chehalis Police Department Officer Warren Ayers that he found an object planted in the tall grass during a training session at the Southwest Washington Fairgrounds in 2013.

Joshua Putman was bitten Sunday in the doorway to his garage by Chehalis K9 Reign while the dog was tracking a vehicle prowl suspect in Centralia. Putman opened the door to confront what he thought was a prowler in the neighborhood to find Reign and his handler outside the door.

Reign was checking the area near Putman's garage and giving 'negative" signs, meaning the dog was not smelling the suspect.

Ayers wrote he was 4 to 6 feet from the dog, which was standing backward when Putman came out of the garage door.

"I had just passed the detached in the vehicle prowl. garage's door when the door burst open and I observed one male screaming and yelling," Ayers wrote, saying that he believed he was about to be assaulted.

Joshua Putman took a photo of the bruise this week resulting from a bit from Chehalis K9 Reign Sunday. The dog bit Putnam in the door of his garage while tracking a suspect in a vehicle prowl.

"He had a large bite wound on his stomach. I've never seen many dog (bite) wounds," she said. "You could see all the individual teeth marks."

Pickard said her brother didn't need any stitches, but said doctors cleaned the wound and gave him a tetanus shot.

Putman said he felt like officers were accusatory toward him after the incident, and said he disputes some of the facts asserted in the Ayers report. For example, he noted that the report said Ayers was 4 to 6 feet from the garage and backing up, but then said Putman was "within drove him to the hospital herself. arm's reach" when he opened the

A proposed bill to prohibit fireworks and recreational fires next summer did not get a warm reception from fireworks businesses in an Agriculture & Natural Resources Committee hearing Thursday in Olympia.

House Bill 2310, sponsored by Kevin Van De Wege, D-Sequim, calls for the sale, purchase and use of consumer fireworks to be prohibited from June 1 to Sept. 30 of this year.

It also would require people to get permits to burn outdoors July 1 through Sept. 30, but not allow agencies to permit outdoor burning "unless the burning is necessary to protect life or property, or necessary for the public health, safety or welfare.

Lewis County commissioners and some local fire chiefs urged residents to forgo personal fireworks on the Fourth of July this year. The county commissioners imposed a burn ban prior to July 4 this summer.

While public testimony focused on fireworks at Thursday's hearing, Van De Wege said Department of Natural Resources and counties putting burn bans in place at different times caused confusion for people, and the bill would help with that.

Representatives from DNR and the Washington State Department of Fish and Wildlife also spoke on the bill, and while they appreciated the bill's intent, they had specific points they wanted to see addressed.

Bob Johnson, wildfire division manager for DNR, said he is uncertain how exactly the bill would affect DNR.

The outdoor burning restriction as written could shut down fire training and prescribed burning for forest health, he said.

Ensuring compliance with the bill would require more DNR resources than the agency currently has available or in its budget proposal.

Madeline Goodwin, an environmental studies graduate student at The Evergreen State College in Olympia, spoke in support of the outdoor burning

She said while she enjoys campfires, accidents happen.

"I would rather roast my marshmallows over a camp stove or ... wait until the rains are here than have fun roasting a marshmallow and then, 'Oh, oops I just lit the forest on fire."

Lewis County commissioners are interested in hearing from East Lewis County residents about whether it's worth the district court resources and taxpayer's money to hold court in Morton once a month.

The district court judges proposed discontinuing the court to the commissioners in late 2015, and the elected officials have decided to hold two public meetings on the idea on Jan. 28.

The first meeting will be at 5:30 p.m. at the Randle fire station and the second will be at 7 p.m. at the Bob Lyle Community Center in Morton.

District court is held the first Wednesday of every month in the community center for traffic infractions only. About 15 to 20 people attend each month.

Costs to hold court include a $400 monthly lease fee to the community center, as well as the judge's, clerk's and probation officer's time and travel.

Judge Wade Samuelson questioned whether that is the best it's the future cost to modernize," Samuelson said. "Just the fact that it's old doesn't bother me, it's just that it doesn't work that well."

He said that the traffic infractions handled in Morton can be dealt with through the mail. People wishing to fight their tickets can fill out a form to either provide written testimony that they didn't commit the alleged infraction or admit to the infraction and ask to have the penalty reduced. The forms are available on the district court's website.

The judges have asked people at court hearings in Morton if they would be interested in filling out the forms instead of attending court, and Samuelson said many were interested in that alternative.

He said for some people, taking the time off of work to go to court in Morton to get their speeding ticket reduced is not cost-effective and that filling out the form at their kitchen table could be a better option for them.

Port of Chehalis to Ask County to Make Presentation on UGA

INTERLOCAL AGREEMENT:

Chairman Cites Lack of Communication From County; Port Wants More Information From County Commissioners

By Justyna Tomtas

jtomtas@chronline.com

With a vested interest in the permitting and development of the urban growth area in Chehalis, the Port of Chehalis will extend an invitation to Lewis County commissioners to discuss the interlocal agreement of the area between the county and the city.

According to Port Chief Executive Officer Randy Mueller, a new agreement between the county and the city has not yet been reached. The existing agreement is set to expire on Feb. 1 and would be referred back to the county, he said.

The UGA is almost equal in size to Chehalis and includes land from Interstate 5 to the northeast of Jackson Highway down to the Newaukum River, as well as land to the east of Kresky Avenue.

The agreement's intent is to make the permitting process simpler for people who want to build in the UGA, while keeping with the city's character of existing neighborhoods.

Disagreements over certain portions of the agreement escalated last year, causing the Lewis County Board of Commissioners to send a letter, dated July 31, 2015, to Chehalis stating it planned to terminate the agreement and draft a new one.

Port Commissioner Mark Giffey said there needs to be a "very open conversation" about what the port's expectations are in regard to the UGA.

Mueller said he planned to invite the county commissioners to the Feb. 11 meeting of the port.

The city of Chehalis will hold a public hearing on the annexation of property in the city's urban growth area on Jan. 26 at 5:05 p.m. at City Hall, located at 350 N. Market Blvd.

Mueller said he would attend the meeting with the intent to testify in support of the city and the proposed annexation on behalf of the port.

Most at the rally appeared to be unarmed, but some carried firearms. Others held signs or wore clothing promoting gun rights.

Information handed out at the event identified seven bills in the Legislature this year that advocates at the rally might oppose, including a bill that seeks to create a statewide ammunition tax. Rep. Matt Shea, R-Spokane Valley; Rep. Elizabeth Scott, R-Monroe; and Rep. David Taylor, R-Moxee, were among those who spoke.

Pros and Cons to Ending District Court in East County

Costs are being cited as one of the driving reasons to eliminate Lewis County District Court in Morton.

Newly sworn-in Mayor Dan Mortensen correctly noted in a story in today's edition that those costs won't simply be eliminated if the East Lewis County court option fades away.

"It's a financial impact to the citizens because they will have to drive to Chehalis," Mortensen

Still, the debate over whether to end the offering is not simple.

District Court Judge Wade Samuelson seems to understand Our Views that, and it's nice to hear his genuine interest in hearing from residents and county officials on the matter.

Residents of remote, eastern areas of Lewis County are currently afforded the opportunity to attend court in Morton once a month for traffic infractions.

Between 15 and 20 people normally attend, according to the county.

Those individuals are saved from having to drive, in some cases, well over 100 miles on a round trip to take care of what might amount to a minor traffic Department, other protective issue.

If a person wants to argue their innocence before a judge, they're at a distinct disadvantage if it means losing a work day and paying for gas for the long drive.

Still, the district court judges make compelling points as well.

Security is certainly an important issue, even more so when it comes to protecting elected judges in charge of meting out justice that might elicit

While security can be provided by the Morton Police measures don't exist. There are no metal detectors, no panic buttons for judges holding court inside a community center.

"So if the court goes forward, it's the future cost to modernize," Samuelson noted.

The decision is with Lewis County commissioners Edna Fund, Bill Schulte and Gary Stamper. The latter represents most of East Lewis County within his district.

The commissioners have taken a wise approach by arranging for two public meetings on the matter before making a decision.

Those meetings are both set for Thursday, Jan. 28, with the first at 5:30 p.m. at the Randle fire hall and the second at 7 p.m. at the Bob Lyle Community Center in Morton.

It's now on residents interested in keeping the court in East Lewis County to voice their opinions and reasoning in relation to the cost and concerns of the county.

Fortunately, the meetings are coming to them.

If there is no sizeable opposition, it's likely residents of the area will be facing some long drives in the future.

Breaking Bad Cycles, Building Good Ones

Hope and opportunity are powerful ideas. Those of us fortunate enough to have experienced the exhilaration of those words in our lives should savor them — and we should ponder the reality that many people here and afar rarely feel them. Maybe they never do.

In Lewis County, one in five children lives in poverty.

Even in Chehalis, a more affluent area than many of its neighbors, fully half of the students in public school qualify for free or reduced-price lunch. Nearly 200 Chehalis students were homeless going into the 2015 school year.

Many families in our community are caught in a downward cycle of intergenerational poverty.

It's a problem with many causes, among them the lack of solid job opportunities, but the issue compounds when children are brought up in struggling households without access to the kinds of life instruction they'll need to succeed. Being a successful adult, let alone a halfway decent teenager, requires skills, experiences and character development that aren't always readily available. Some kids manage to overcome the odds and pull themselves up by their bootstraps, but that's hard when you don't have boots, or any way to show you the way up.

We'll need many different ongoing efforts to break the compounding misery of intergenerational poverty.

Some good news is coming as our community is about to see its first Boys & Girls Club. This national program helps create a safe place for kids with enlightening, relevant programs for them after school.

Brett Ellingson, principal at Olympic Elementary, is also a volunteer board member for Boys & Girls Club of Chehalis.

During a recent presentation to the Chehalis PTA, he told parents that construction of the first Boys & Girls Club in Lewis County will begin in April. It will be a 7,000-square-foot building next to the new Pacific Athletic Center on south Market Boulevard.

It's an exciting development for our community. Hundreds of kids will have a safe, life-affirming place staffed by good role models to learn and spend time when their parents or guardians aren't around.

CONNECT WITH THE BOYS & GIRLS CLUB OF CHEHALIS

To learn more or lend your support to this worthy cause, email chehalisbgc@gmail. com or search Facebook for "Boys and Girls Club of Chehalis." They're also on Twitter @ chehalisbgc.

"So many good things are happening in Chehalis, and that pendulum of good things continues," he said, listing the recent construction of the Vernetta Smith Library, the Gail & Carolyn Shaw Aquatic Center (the pool at Rec Park), and the upcoming groundbreaking on the two new primary schoolsl.

Architectural planning is underway for two new elementary schools in the 44-acre field south of Chehalis Middle School. The new kindergarten-second grade and third-fifth-grade schools will replace the aging Cascade, R.E. Bennett and Olympic Consolidating the younger kids in one campus on 20th Street, a short walk from W.F. West High School, means that essentially every student in the district will be within a mile of the new Boys & Girls Club building.

The center will open in January 2017 with staffing for 200 students, with plans to increase to 300 within a year.

They'll have tutors and classes, financial training and computer labs.

Eventually they hope to expand from Chehalis to other communities throughout Lewis County.

As they prepare to break ground this spring, the Boys & Girls Club of Chehalis just announced that they are going to hire an executive director. (Are you great working with kids and building a network of mentors? This might be the job for you.)

Before opening, the club needs to have three years worth of operating expenses in the bank. This is a high bar that helps ensure a successful opening. Our local club has already raised $800,000 of the $1.2 million they need to open.

It's all good news for the kids of today. Together we can help them grow into the leaders and solid citizens of tomorrow who can share these words from the vision statement of the Boys & Girls Club: hope and opportunity.

Brian Mittge and his family live south of Chehalis.

Who's at Fault for Early Release of Prisoners? How About the Governor?

Last Saturday's Chronicle carried the story under the headline "Governor Inslee Impatient to Hold State Employees Accountable for DOC's Early Release of Inmates."

But as the story points out, on the "advice of investigators he's waiting to take action. As was widely reported earlier, this was a problem that has gone on for years, people knew about it, went so far as to seek legal advice about it, and vet it simply wasn't fixed.

In the meantime the governor's

By John McCroskey Department of Corrections Secretary Dan Pacholke testified before a legislative hearing, apologized and said "It's probably the largest single error I've ever heard of agency history in the sense of its impacts to public safety."

I don't really think it takes much of an investigation to realize it's a failure of leadership.

But these days the buck no longer stops at the top. If the governor really found it as maddening as he suggests, and really didn't know about it, whoever did and didn't tell him should be gone as a start.

But some editorials across the state laid the blame squarely on the governor, and I do too.

I still find it interesting that this was so low on anyone's priority list.

Reducing populations in prison is something the governor wants, and this certainly did

In a related (because it's another state agency with less than stellar leadership) but not surprising story, after seven months the indicted Democratic auditor, Troy Kelley, came back to work. He is of course entitled to a trial and is innocent until he is proven guilty, but he was indicted on some pretty serious charges. Now, in order to try to prevent his impeachment for abandoning his job, he came back to work rather than resign.

We should all have confidence that the elected leader of the government agency, charged with keeping other government agencies honest, has been indicted for money laundering, possession of stolen money, tax and perjury, and is back on the

I know I feel better he's back on the job.

Our Legislature will have to waste valuable time to impeach him. And they should if this alleged scofflaw won't resign for the good of the office.

I remember years ago fighting with the Timberland Regional Library board over the access to porn on the public library computers. It was a contentious issue, with the library defending the practice and objecting to even some form of filters being put on the computers to prevent it.

There were stories of children accidently viewing the screen as someone was viewing this stuff and parents who objected and didn't get much help (or sympathy) from library staff. We even had registered sex offenders using these computers because law enforcement couldn't easily track the information.

At the time I was one of several sheriffs concerned about, and baffled by their objection to even basic filters. In the end I think they did make some changes and the problem either went away or people just got tired of fighting over it and gave

So it was tragic irony that the business manager from Timberland was recently caught up in a prostitution and sextrafficking sting operation in King County. There is as far as we know any connection to his alleged activity and the library computers. But it certainly was an unfortunate turn of events for the Timberland system.

Dan Mortensen, the longtime police chief of Morton, retired and was simultaneously sworn in as the town's new mayor. I have a hard time recalling a time when Dan wasn't the chief, and his lengthy tenure is a testament to his commitment to the town. Dan was always one of the good guys, and I certainly wish him and his wife well as they move into this next phase of life.

Lewis County Power Rankings: Dogs, Flags and Stolen High-Class Goods

RALPHY: I got a new dog on Monday, and we're getting used to each other. He gets up in the morning and watches me drink coffee and check my correspondences (Twitter, mostly), then has a drink of water and goes back to bed. At lunchtime he growls at me if I'm eating and he's not. He pretends not to know how his doggy-door works until I leave, at which point he clambers through it like the Kool-Aid man crashing a sorority party.

He's surly when he's awake, snores when he's asleep and doesn't walk so much as trundle from one place to the next, a series of characteristics that makes him sound like a furrier version of a certain local visuals editor. Needless to say, he fits in quite well with my own sunny disposition.

BRENNAN BAILEY: Young Mr. Bailey penned a response, on behalf of the Chehalis School District's board of directors, to The Chronicle's editorial on Dec. 17 about a W.F. West High School student being asked not to wear his confederate flag hat.

"School students, during school hours and/or school activities, do not have full First Bailey — a student at W.F. West less than a decade ago has written a measured, reasonable response to the issue, which is admirable considering the subject matter. I'm not sure the school really needed to respond with anything beyond "Your teacher said not to wear the hat, so either leave it at home or don't come to class. You're free to wear it to a Civil War re-enactment or Confederate rally on your own time, but there's still a few basic expectations around here."

TASTEFUL CRIMINALS: The Lewis County Sheriff's Office posts a Crime of the Week, something to which I haven't paid enough attention. Last week's crime was the theft of a stationery desk, a vintage camera, a Tiffany-style lamp, vintage Japanese Pagoda lamps, and unspecified alcohol (I bet it's 40-year-old scotch or something. No one writes letters about their Leica camera at a stationery desk under the light from a Pagoda lamp while sipping expensive tequila) from what's obviously the classiest home in Chehalis.

I certainly hope the thief is caught, and have the utmost confidence in our local law enforcement agencies. This crime hits close to home as I, too, have many valuable antiques in my home that I would rather not see stolen. (That's a lie. The most valuable thing in my house is the laptop I'm writing this on, and technically The Chronicle owns it.)

Just for fun, let's take a whodunit look at this one. (Keep in mind I am not a legally-licensed private investigator, but for $100 a day plus expenses I'll take your would be quite confused with Option 1: A cat burglar, specializing in vintage liquor, furniture and cameras. Given that the typical hauls in Lewis County burglary cases are guns, ATVs, lawnmowers, drugs, beer and tools, it's likely our thief has exhausted the local supply of his niche items, and he won't be heard from again.

Option 2: Acquaintance of the victim(s). How else would they know a vintage camera was worth taking and not, you know, junk? (This is a problem that befalls my younger brother on a regular basis. "Oh, another typewriter! Just what I was looking for!" is the kind of thing that he, and no one else I've ever met, would say.) Should this be the case, he (OR SHE! Girls are 60 percent more likely to steal than boys, according to a statistical analysis I may have imagined) will return to the scene of the crime (stats again!) and ask too many questions about how the investigation is going, and eventually implicate themselves, perhaps after too many tumblers of 40-year-old scotch.

Option 3: Local ne'er-do-well. A typical break-in-and-stealstuff-when-no-one's-home thief his haul, and frustrated when trying to fence it.

"What is this? A FILM camera? Half a bottle of rum? What am I supposed to do with this?" "It's weird whiskey or something. C'mon, man, how much will you give me?"

"Where's the USB cord go? You know cameras are on phones now, right? And there's booze in every grocery store? And I could get a lamp at Goodwill for like $5?"

"So I'm stuck with all this stuff?"

"This is Lewis County. You can try to sell it on Facebook but they'll just ask if the fourwheel-drive works or if you've got ammo for it and then tell you you're asking too much for it. Yes, even if it's a desk."

Anyway, the items were valued at $1,100, and if you have any information, call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-748-6422. You never have to leave your name!

Long Term Care Not a Priority for Washingtonians

Our country's senior population is expected to double in the next 25 years. The so-called "Age Wave," the boom in the over-65 population, will lead to a dramatic increase in the number of adults needing long term care. Only onethird of seniors have planned for their long term care needs, yet this is a topic that does not rise to the top of the priority list for most of our state's residents. In a 2014 poll by The Feldman Group, long-term care ranked seventh on the list of priorities for the state Legislature and the governor to address.

This is unacceptable — though sadly, not shocking. In my line of work, I often hear stories of people spending their life savings to take care of their husband or wife's care. Or adult children taking on the emotionally, physically, and economically draining caregiving duties of their adult parents. These stories are hard to hear but all too

Before this issue becomes a crisis, we must educate our community about the realities of long-term care so they can begin planning as well as let legislators know that coming up with solutions for long term care financing options is a priority. All too frequently, families are surprised that there is so little coverage or support when a loved one needs long-term care. They assume Medicare will be there to cover dad's need for a little help at home — but Medicare won't provide that coverage. They think Mom can move into a care facility and health insurance will pay the cost, but very few have insurance that pays for this type of care.

A lifetime of savings goes quickly when paying for long term care. According to a recent survey by Genworth, a month in a nursing home can cost as much as $10,000 in our state. Assisted living private rates averaged $4,625 per month, and home care services rates were comparable. The average Washington citizen requires two years of support services, meaning families can face average costs of between $100,000 and $200,000 or more in long-term care costs for a parent or loved one, regardless of where that care is provided. Most families will attempt to provide the care and support themselves, but many family caregivers feel overwhelmed with this undertaking. Almost 60 percent of unpaid caregivers had cut their own discretionary spending to help loved ones cover the costs of long term care. According to the Beyond Dollars 2013 Report, 11 percent actually lose their jobs and another 10 percent report having to change careers — both due to the conflicting responsibilities with care. And — the number of available caregivers is dwindling. The AARP Public Policy Care Institute projects the ratio of potential caregivers to people aged 80 and older will decline between 2010 and 2030. And while family caregivers try their best, the number of caregivers available in the future simply won't be enough for the "Age Wave."

Long-term care insurance would be a solid option but it is inaccessible to most individuals over 65, and only 7 percent of Washingtonians have purchased the coverage. The high cost is exceptionally expensive, because most people do not think of buying the coverage until fairly late

So families must turn to Medicaid as a last resort after they try the options above. This federal-state partnership is the single largest payment source for long term care, whether provided in someone's own home or at a care facility. Unfortunately, many individuals end up spending their life savings in order to qualify.

Luckily, all is not lost. In 2015 our Legislature passed a bill commissioning a study to explore state supported options for long-term services and supports. The bill was endorsed by Washingtonians for a Responsible Future, a coalition of aging and disability advocates, long-term care providers, labor, and consumer rights organizations seeking to protect the financial health and well-being of individuals and families who need long-term care. The goal is to identify different options for helping families prepare for the high costs of long term care, whether it's encouraging people to buy insurance, looking at private-public partnerships and finally, examining a public funding option. The study will be complete by December 2016, providing insight and recommendations to the legislature for action.

I encourage you to let legislators know that long term care financing is a priority now and in to the future. Talk to your loved ones and make planning a goal in the New Year (not a resolution — most people don't keep resolutions!) It is critical that this issue is addressed now if we are to protect quality of life and care for our families in the future.

Dennis Mahar is the executive director of the Lewis Mason Thurston Area Agency on Aging. He is also a member of Washingtonians for a Responsible Future, a coalition of aging and disability advocates, long term care providers, labor, and consumer rights organizations seeking to protect the financial health of individuals and families needing long term care.

COMMENTARY: Back to Business

'Made in America' Is More Than a Slogan

As we enter 2016, we need to look at what it takes to keep manufacturing in America.

We have advantages, which include higher product quality, shorter delivery times, rising offshore wages, lower inventory and the ability to be more responsive to changing customer demands. But there are some glaring disadvantages, which include higher taxes, mounting costs of government regulations and increasing electricity prices.

Nowhere is that more evident than in Washington. Our state and local politicians got a sobering reality check 15 years ago. Because of high costs and work stoppages, some of Boeing's 787 final assembly work was sent to South Carolina, and key components were outsourced offshore.

Three years ago, the Legislature and Gov. Jay Inslee addressed manufacturing competitiveness when they pushed through $8.3 billion in tax incentives, provided some relief from overly stringent regulations and enhanced worker-training programs to land Boeing's new 777 carbon wing plant. As a result, there will be more than 20,000 jobs at Paine Field.

Today, we cannot forget that Boeing's customers are leveraging the company for a part of the production. Costs matter, and the higher they climb, the more difficult it is to keep those highpaying manufacturing jobs here.

Washington has made progress. In the last 20 years, the Legislature implemented some hard-fought reforms to workers' compensation and unemployment insurance, as well as a salestax exemption for manufacturing machinery and equipment, and spent millions for worker-training programs.

Those manufacturers worry that if Inslee's climate change rules are adopted, the accompanying costs of energy would likely force them to move elsewhere.

One of the key reasons the semiconductor companies came to Washington was low-cost electricity. The same is true for carbon-fiber manufacturers such as BMW in Moses Lake.

Even though carbon fiber is six times stronger than steel and 30 percent lighter than aluminum, it has been expensive to produce. A Rocky Mountain Institute study found that for carbon-fiber-based autos to compete with steel ones at the same production volume, carbon fiber costs need to decrease by 60

The bottom line for manufacturers is the availability of adequate and reliable electricity at a competitive price is a determining factor in locating factories

Many smaller Washington manufacturers have kept their production here because they have highly trained workers, better quality control, timing of component delivery, and can better protect their intellectual property or trade secrets. However, they struggle with higher costs as well. A group called the Reshoring Initiative produced a list of 300 companies who relocated manufacturing facilities back to the United States or have chosen to remain here. They also list foreign companies that have decided to build plants in America. Airbus, based in France, is putting the finishing touches on an A-320 production line in Mobile, Alabama When fully operational, it will house 1,000 workers who will assemble passenger jets that compete directly with Boe-ing's best-seller, the 737. Airbus cites one of its reasons for locating there was the cooperation by government at all levels. Whether manufacturers stay or move largely depends on costs and how local, state and federal government leaders respond to mounting competitive pressures. They can either re-establish a climate where the private sector is encouraged to invest, innovate, and create new and better products, or they can smother manufacturers with more regulations, higher fees and taxes, and added time delays in siting plants.

The one lesson we have learned over the years is companies will move to survive. They must, or they go out of business. Then we all lose. That's a topic every politician should address in 2016.

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. — Republican presidential candidates Donald Trump and Ted Cruz clashed Thursday night over the Texas senator's eligibility to serve as commander in chief and the businessman's "New York values," ending months of civility between fiery contenders seeking to tap into voter anger and frustration.

More than two hours of prime-time argument presented voters with a sharp contrast to the optimistic vision of America that President Barack Obama painted in his State of the Union address earlier this week. The candidates warned of dire risks to national security if a Democrat is elected to succeed Obama and challenged claims of recent economic gains.

Heated exchanges between Trump and Cruz dominated much of the debate, with the real estate mogul saying the senator has a "big question mark" hanging over his candidacy given his birth in Canada to an American

"You can't do that to the party," Trump declared.

CRUZ SUGGESTED TRUMP was only turning on him because he's challenging Trump's lead, particularly in Iowa, which kicks off voting on Feb. 1.

Cruz renewed his criticism of Trump's "New York values," a coded questioning of his rival's conservatism. But the barb appeared to backfire, eliciting an unexpectedly emotional response from Trump about his hometown's response to the Sept. confronted him on immigration. 11, 2001, attacks.

At times, the contest between some of the more mainstream candidates seeking to emerge as an alternative to Trump and Cruz was just as fiery, particularly between Florida Sen. Marco Rubio and New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie.

Rubio likened Christie's poli- ror." cies to President Obama's, particularly on guns, Planned Parenthood and education reform an attack Christie declared false. # Flooding: The Basin Has Suffered Five Worst Floods on Record in Last 30 Years

Chehalis River Basin discussed the ongoing issue of flooding in the watershed.

The newly formed bipartisan task force first met in October of last year. Rep. Richard DeBolt, R-Chehalis, is a co-chairman of

"I appreciate the hundreds of hours of work that's gone into this. It's nice to see it all in one place and rolling along," DeBolt DeBolt said he's thankful for the work that has gone into protecting communities and habitat in the Chehalis Basin. The Chehalis Basin is the second-largest watershed in the state, and it has suffered five of its largest floods in history in the past 30 years. Jim Kramer, facilitator with the Ruckelshaus Center for the Chehalis Basin Strategy, said flooding is expected to get worse in the basin in the coming years.

J. Vander Stoep, with the Governor's Chehalis Basin Work Group, said fixes for the flooding will address not only economic damage to communities but also fish habitat loss.

"It's a big problem. It's costing a lot of money," he said.

While solutions will be cost-management, and Heather Bartlett, the Department of Ecology's water quality program manager, speak during a presentation for the Washington Waters Task Force on Friday afternoon in Olympia.

ly, he said, they will have a net positive benefit to the state.

Vander Stoep said flooding in the basin accounts for 28 percent of all Federal Emergency Management Agency flood payouts in the state since 1980, which is about $560 million.

Fishery habitat in the basin is declining, and if the floods continue to worsen and summers continue to be dryer, Vander Stoep said, according to biologists, the chinook salmon will disappear.

The proposed solution developed by the work group includes 100 miles of habitat restoration, water retention and land use is-tion cost ranges from $500 million to $600 million with a potential benefit of $720 million.

partment of Ecology is evaluating the work group's proposed solution along with three others as part of a programmatic environmental impact statement that is scheduled to be completed in December.

Vickie Raines, Grays Har-County commissioner and chairwoman of the Chehalis River Basin Flood Authority, said the county has invested $125,000 in a master plan to protect the cities of Aberdeen and Hoquiam. But she said the entire basin needs to be considered.

"There are improvements that could be made in Lewis County on down through Thurston and Grays Harbor County," Raines said.

Scott McKinney, floodplain management state coordinator for Ecology, said about $2 billion has been damaged by flooding in the state since 1980. He said that according to FEMA every $1 spent on mitigation can save $3 or $4. So, he said, if the state had spent $500 million, much of those $2 billion in damage could have been prevented.

Since 2013 ecology has awarded funds to 21 out of 117 requested flood projects throughout the state.

Other groups and organizations spoke on flooding and stormwater issues elsewhere in the state at the Friday meeting.

The Department of Ecology is currently working on an environmental impact statement. Data collection and analysis is currently underway with the goal to determine the potential results of a number of projects aimed at reducing flooding and improving fish habitat.

The draft EIS is scheduled to be completed in the spring of 2016 with a public comment period on the document in the summer. The final EIS is planned to be released in the fall or winter of 2016.

Balmelli credited his employees and his wife, Cherene, for the hard work they put forth.

The award was presented by Amanda Singleton, incoming board president of the Chamber of Commerce, who said she believed RB Engineering was a deserving company genuinely committed to supporting and improving the local economy.

He received the title of business of the year at the same facility that he earlier designed, permitted and managed, crediting Ritchie Bros. as a lifesaver during a time of steep economic nesses and institutions in the Lewis County area. RB Engineering has donated its services to help build the Vernetta Smith Chehalis Timberland Library, Gail and Carolyn Shaw Aquatics Center, Pacific Athletic Center, Olympic School Sports Field and most recently the Boys and Girls Club of Chehalis.

Balmelli said he gets the valuable professional relationand sub-consultants.

Growing up working on his family's dairy farm in the Newaukum Valley, Balmelli learned the necessity of hard work, he said. With no days off on the farm, he put in long hours to meet required deadlines in order to get what he needed done in an efficient manner.

His upbringing taught him to be a hard worker and made him realize the value of the community, the first stepping stone to his business approach.

He graduated from Washington State University with a bachelor's degree in civil engineering in 1987.

He began a career at The Boeing Co. in the product development division. Balmelli then spent the next five years at the company working on the design and configuration of the Boeing 777 airplane.

In 1993, he decided to leave Boeing to chase a career that was more orientated to his civil projects completed in an efficient and timely manner.

Balmelli returned to his hometown in Chehalis, a decision that was fueled by his desire to get back to his roots where he could be closer to family and friends.

He met his wife Cherene, a Lewis County local. The duo married in 1995.

The union of the couple kicked off plans for their business, and their family.

Through their understanding of regulatory requirements, attention to detail and economical engineering designs, the company is able to provide complete permitting and design application packages which are reviewed and approved quickly by regulatory agencies.

RB Engineering utilizes the latest 3D CAD software and computer programs, continually expanding their design experience with new emerging technologies required to meet the ever expanding government regulations.

The company expanded into public works projects during the economic downturn in private development and now their work includes utility and road infrastructure designs for the Twin Cities, the Chehalis-Centralia Airport and both local port authorities.

"Everyone is considered our family at this college. They don't want someone else to come in with a wrecking ball and do any further upsetting," Halsan said. 'They wanted someone from the inside who is familiar with the college and the people in the college.'

Vice Chair Doris Wood-Brumsickle said after the meeting that if Walton accepts the offer, he would work for the college on a part-time basis, maybe two or three days a week.

Before the decision is finalized, Board of Trustees Chairwoman Joanne Schwartz said the college would have to negotiate a contract with Walton. As of now, the board of trustees is thinking about doing a search in-house instead of hiring a consulting firm.

The board is also looking at amending some of the executive limitations at the college.

"Obviously we're not doing this to put anyone in a straight jacket but some of the stuff that came up within the last 18 months blindsided us and we don't like being blindsided," Halsan said of the former ad-

The college will pay Frost $202,000 to fulfill requirements of the contract.

Now, with a new interim president in sight, the college hopes to continue moving in a positive direction.

"We've come through a period of time with a lot of internal friction and damages that have occurred," Steve Ward, vice president of finance and administration at the college, said.

Hodges Bailey is still on the mend from a deep bone bruise in his right foot and, as such, playing relatively limited minutes.

Which is too bad, as Bailey's shooting exhibition was the most exciting part of Friday night's boys basketball Swamp Cup matchup in the Hub City.

The junior guard scored 36 points in around 20 minutes of action to lead Centralia in a 71-43 Evergreen 2A Conference win over rival W.F. West.

"We're still watching the minutes as much as we can," Tiger coach Ron Brown said, as to playing Bailey in the fourth quarter. "If we had the lead I knew I wasn't going to play him.

I wanted him back. By that point the game was well in hand for Centralia, which outscored W.F. West 43-

"You never know what to expect. It's a rivalry game, and they're a good team. They have a lot of shooters that can spread the floor," Centralia forward Christian Peters said. "We just needed to play a little harder. We found the extra gear and got going."

Steelers WR Antonio Brown Ruled out Against Broncos

By Ray Fittipaldo

Pittsburgh Post-Gazette (MCT)

Steelers All-Pro receiver Antonio Brown will miss the AFC divisional round game against the Denver Broncos Sunday afternoon because of a concussion. the Steelers announced on their Twitter account this morning.

Brown, who was concussed late in the fourth quarter of the Steelers' 18-16 victory against Cincinnati Saturday night, did not practice Wednesday or Thursday.

The Steelers were holding out hope that he would be able to practice Friday and play, but Brown did not pass through the NFL concussion protocol in order to be cleared to play.

Brown had 16 catches for 189 yards against the Broncos when the teams met last month at Heinz Field.

Brown was injured on an illegal shoulder to helmet hit from Bengals linebacker Vontaze Burfict. Burfict was penalized 15 yards for the hit, which helped set up the Steelers' winning field goal. He also was suspended for the first three games of next season by the NFL for that hit and others that took place during the Running back DeAngelo Williams, who missed the Bengals game with a right foot injury, has not yet practiced and is not expected to play in Denver.

Without Brown, the Steelers will turn to second-year receiver Martavis Bryant and third-year receiver Markus Wheaton for more production.

Breakthrough Season Quiets Panthers QB Newton's Detractors

By Matt Pentz

The Seattle Times (MCT)

Growing up in Los Angeles in the dead period between Rams eras, Seahawks cornerback Richard Sherman developed an unorthodox rooting interest: Warren Moon's Houston Oilers.

"(He was) a black quarterback," Sherman explained this week. There weren't a lot of them back then. So I said, 'Yeah, black quarterback. I hope he wins." This weekend in Charlotte, N.C., two African-American quarterbacks who consider Moon both a role model and an influence will face off with a trip to the NFC Championship Game on the line.

And the fact that the showdown between Russell Wilson and Cam Newton is being billed less as a novelty and more for what it is — the meeting of two breakout stars standing near the top of their sport — is being pointed to as a sign of progress since Moon's heyday.

"That's a testament to our culture," Wilson said this week. 'That's a testament to the changing opportunities that are being given to everyone. Guys like Warren Moon set a great precedent for the type of play and the type of preparation that it takes to play at a high level. It doesn't matter what skin color you are.

"Ultimately, it's about the person and the heart that you play with."

Wilson, especially, has mostly been able to transcend the issue and deflect attention onto his on-field accomplishments. Newton's experience has been more complicated. Carolina's wide-smiling, touchdown-celebrating MVP candidate has been a polarizing figure since his college days at Florida and Auburn, from the arrest for purchasing a stolen laptop through his controversial recruitment to join the Tigers.

Even as his list of professional feats continues to grow, Newton as metaphorical shushing moremains a cipher of public per- tion toward detractors, Newton's

"I think there are still people that don't like some of the pers will remain until he lifts what he does."

a Hall of Famer who now is the Seahawks' radio analyst. "They think he's a little too into himself, a little too flamboyant.

"He's got a lot of things going for him. But what a lot of people see is what he does after a touchdown, and they don't like that. They think that captures his whole personality, and it's unfair."

Newton put up plenty of eye-popping numbers during his first few years in Carolina. He threw for more than 4,000 yards en route to Rookie of the Year honors in 2011 and nearly matched that total in Year 2.

Team success had been spotty until this season, however, when the Panthers finished the regular season 15-1 behind Newton's 45 total touchdowns. Seahawks coach Pete Carroll referred to Carolina as the most difficult offense to face in the NFL thanks to the Newton's dual-threat abil-

Carolina coach Ron Rivera credits Newton's "next step" with a shift midway through last year toward a higher-paced, no-huddle offense.

"I think that's really helped in terms of him seeing the game better," Rivera said. "Get to the line of scrimmage, make your calls, make your checks, make your adjustments and play football."

With those 15 wins serving game is being judged on its own merit — and even though whis-things that he does," said Moon, a Super Bowl trophy, the protagonist himself has long since drowned them out.

"I don't have to say anything," Newton said this week. "My actions speak louder than words."

Moon has gotten a close look at Newton's personal development off the field, as well, as a mentor. His mentorship isn't as hands-on as it was during those first few seasons, but the two still exchange phone calls every once in a while.

Newton recently had his first child, Chosen, with his longtime girlfriend. He's still a lightning rod — he might always be a lightning rod — but the barbs have felt less vitriolic once the wins began piling up.

During Newton's second season, Moon called out similar criticism as racially motivated. Now his stance has softened.

If Moon has one criticism of Newton, it's of the elaborate touchdown dances, the twosteps in front of vanquished opponents. It invites unnecessary attention, goes against the quarterback ideal of a stoic leader.

Moon catches himself slightly, sitting up straight. Moments earlier, he'd been talking about his own experience. The burden hasn't lifted entirely, but at long last, the game is beginning to change. "I'd hope he'd cut down on his celebrations, but that's him," Moon said. "It's hard to change somebody else's personality. I'm going off what I used to do when I did a touchdown compared to the bleeding and seal the win.

The Bearcats led 46-31 with just over six minutes left to play, but an 8-0 Tiger run over the next three minutes — free throws from Ellie Corwin and buckets by Maddie Fast, Alyx Fast and Madi Crews trimmed the lead to 7.

Johnson cashed in a 3-pointer to end a four-minute stretch without a Bearcat field goal, but a bucket by Corwin, a 3 from Alyx Fast and a driving layup by Maddie Fast with 1:11 left cut the hosts' advantage down to 3.

The Tigers saw a 3-point attempt rim out, and the Bearcats responded with their own missed 3 but upped the ante with a missed putback. On the other end the Tigers' final gametying attempt went in and out, and the rebound eventually bounced out of bounds in W.F.

West's favor. The Bearcats inbounded the ball to Johnson, who was quickly fouled and sent to the foul line with 13 seconds to play.

The sophomore guard's foul shooting has been improving, according to coach Tom Kelly, and she came up big with the game on the line.

"We've been working on it, getting in a routine in practice and stuff, you know, but when she banked it in I felt good," he said. "Then she swished the next one, so that was huge."

Alyx Fast banked in a runner with less than a second left to play for the final margin, which leaves the Tigers at 0-2 in Evergreen 2A Conference play (8-6 overall) while the No. 8-ranked Bearcats improved to 2-0 in league play (10-3 overall). W.F. West jumped out to an 8-0 lead in the first 1 minute, 43 seconds, behind a pair of 3s from Lofgren, and led 30-20 by the intermission.

Tigers Slip Past Black Hills in EvCo Debut

Centralia squeaked out a tough 39-38 win over Black Hills Thursday in the Hub City in both teams' Evergreen 2A Conference wrestling debut.

The Tigers got six wins by pin, and the Wolves lost a team point early on due to a wrestler removing his uniform before he'd left the mat.

Kadin Orr headlined the Tiger victors, beating Alex Rebara, 6-5, in the 145-pound match.

"Kadin made a couple of mistakes early but did a great job battling back and taking the lead late in the match, and holding onto the lead with short time on the clock," Centralia coach Scott Phillips said. "We have been focusing on match strategy a little bit more in practice and it appears to be paying off."

Tristan Hicks-Avron (106), Mykka McAllister (120), Tristan Dickey (152), Aaron Adamo (170), Fernando Arevalo (182) and Joe Finch (195) all won via pin for the Tigers.

"I am happy that our young team is getting better every time they step on the mat," Phillips said, adding that the Tiger girls wrestlers competed well against Black Hills' JV in the match.

Centralia's boys will wrestle at the Kelso Invite today, while the Tiger girls will wrestle at the Fife Invite.

Seattle Signs Furbush, Scribner and Avoids Arbitration

SEATTLE (AP) — The Mariners have reached agreement on one-year contracts with pitchers Charlie Furbush and Evan Scribner, averting salary arbitration with both players.

Seattle announced the agreements on Friday. The Mariners have no more arbitration eligible players. Terms of the deals for the 2016 season were not announced.

Furbush will be entering his fifth full season with the Mariners after being acquired in a trade during the 2011 season. The left-hander was slowed last season by biceps tendinitis and did not pitch for Seattle after early July. But when healthy, Furbush has been a dependable lefty option out of the Mariners bullpen.

New WIAA Enrollment Figures Means New League Alignments for Local Teams

MOVES: Rochester Joins Twin Cities Schools in EvCo; C2BL Grows to 12 Teams

By Aaron VanTuyl

avantuyl@chronline.com

The Washington Interscholastic Activities Association has released its 2016-2020 enrollment figures. While no local teams are shifting classifications, the new alignments will mean a big difference in the league lineups across the Lewis County prep sports landscape.

Rochester, which was reclassified as a 2A school in 2014, remains a 2A school for the new four-year cycle, but will move from the hybrid Evergreen 2A/1A League to the Evergreen 2A Conference, meaning the assorted Warrior sports teams will no longer be subject to a technically independent schedule and will have a more reasonable shot at the playoffs across the board.

The 2A EvCo — currently consisting of W.F. West, Centralia, Tumwater and Black Hills will add Rochester and Aberdeen, which played the same 2A/1A schedule as Rochester the past two years. "It'll be a lot easier on us,"

Rochester athletic director Jerry Striegel said. "I think what it's going to allow us to do is to use our nonleague games the way they're meant to be used. There was a different level of importance on those, and that was difficult on our coaches."

As independent teams, Rochester and Aberdeen had to win 75 percent of their regular-season games and play the majority of their nonleague games against 2A opponents in order to set up a pigtail game against the lastplace team in the Evergreen 2A Conference for a shot at a District 4 playoff berth.

"The coaches went at it with a great attitude, and didn't complain, but it was also very difficult in knowing that sometimes within the first week or two whether they had any playoff ability or not," Striegel said.

Rochester and Aberdeen will be leaving the Evergreen 2A/1A League, meaning the league will return to its 1A-only status. Eatonville moved up to the 2A ranks and will join the South Puget Sound 2A League in District 3, leaving Montesano, Elma, Tenino, Hoquiam and Forks in the now-1A Evergreen League.

The Central 2B League which includes eight local high schools - will expand to 12 teams. New-to-the-2Bs Kalama and Rainier, which spent the last two seasons in the Pacific 2B League, accepted invitations to join the C2BL on Friday morn-

With a full dozen teams, the C2BL will be splitting into two divisions to dictate league schedules, though who will play in what division remains to be seen and will be discussed and voted on by league members. A North (Onalaska, Rainier, Morton-White Pass, Pe Ell/PWV, Adna, Mossyrock) and South (Toutle Lake, Wahkiakum, Winlock, Napavine, Toledo, Kalama) split is one possibility, as the divisions will likely be based upon geogra-

WIAA Releases 2016-2020 Enrollment Figures Ahead of 4-Year Cycle

By TJ Cotterill

The News Tribune

The numbers are in. And there's much that will change once the 2016-17 school vear starts.

The Washington Interscholastic Activities Association on Thursday morning released the official enrollment figures for 2016-2020 ahead of the newly implemented four-year classification cycle.

Schools have until Jan. 19 to file an appeal to the WIAA, which would be heard during the WIAA's Jan. 24-25 board meeting. The classifications will not be finalized until then. After that, schools may appeal in 2018.

The figures listed are the average enrollment of grades 9-11 as reported to the Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction for the months of January, February, March, April, May, October, and November, which was counted Member schools knew of the enrollment figures in November and had until Wednesday's deadline to decide if they wanted to opt up to a different classification. Schools may opt up one or multiple classifications (Bellarmine Prep opted up from 2A to 4A), but they may not opt down.

Of the 384 total schools that are members of the WIAA, 4A, 3A, 2A and 1A will each have 65 schools, and 2B and 1B will have 62 schools.

By The Chronicle

ROCHESTER — Rochester made short work of the Spartans with a 58-23 win over Forks here in Evergreen 2A/1A League girls hoops action on Friday.

Joni Lancaster stole the show again, coming a steal away from a triple-double with 20 points, 10 rebounds and nine steals.

Rochester dominated early, outscoring Forks 22-8 in the first quarter behind four 3-pointers from Lancaster before continuing to outscore the Spartans in each consecutive quarter. "We got on them real early and get some steals through the press," Rochester coach A.J. Easley said. "We took it to the basket and got some buckets there and Joni hit some big shots."

Skylar DeMatties and Vee Goodlance led Forks in scoring with 8 points apiece.

Easley praised the play of se- in girls hoops play on Friday. nior Ariel Saxon and freshman 6-footer Emily Elkins. Saxon scored 10 points while Elkins added 9 points and seven re-

"Ariel played really well," Easley said. "Emily has had a little bit of (varsity) time here and there but this was her first extended play and she did a real nice job." Rochester (4-4 league, 4-10 overall) will travel to Montesano Tuesday.

Bulldogs Thrash Beavers, 66-22

TENINO — Tenino ran into a buzzsaw in the form of Montesano and was handed a 66-22 Evergreen 2A/1A League loss here

The Bulldogs jumped right on top, outscoring Tenino 19-2 in the first quarter.

Jordan Spradlin led Montesano, pouring in 29 points with the help of a 20-point performance from Josie Talley. Abbi Dirks led the Beavers with 9 points.

Tenino (1-7 league, 1-10 overall) will host Hoquiam on Tuesday.

Toledo Takes Down Mossyrock

MOSSYROCK — Toledo was able to crash the boards and down a Jaron Kirkley-less Mossyrock, 60-46, in Central 2B League play here on Friday. Joe Wallace led the Indians with 15 points and Toledo began the game on an 11-1 run to knock the Vikings off balance.

"They had lots of offensive rebounds in the game," Mossyrock coach Kelly Ross said. "(Toledo coach) Grady (Fallon) has coached his guys well and a lot of their guys are hitting the glass." Mossyrock's offense, predicated on fast breaks and transition scoring, had trouble finding those points when they were battling for a rebound or inbounding the ball after a made bucket. The Vikings, though, trailed just 25-20 at halftime. "That slow start took a little wind out of sails, but it was good to see guys battle back," Ross Danny Nelson led the Vikings with 16 points and nine rebounds while Taylen Clevenger added 11 points. 'Our guys really had to accept the fact we had shots missing out of our lineup with Jaron out and Taylen accepted that role," Ross said. "Tonight he was ready for that role." Toledo got 10 points each from Reece Wallace and Fano Arcea-Hansen. The Indians (9-4, 8-2 league) will hosts Napavine on Wednesday. Mossyrock (8-4, 6-4 league) will play at Toutle Lake the same

Tigers Sink Ducks

 ${\tt TOUTLE-Napavine\ picked}$ up its fourth straight victory with a 59-57 over Toutle Lake here on Friday to keep pace with Toledo for second in the Central 2B League standings. The Tigers had to overcome a 9-0 start by the Ducks, and put the clamps down in the final three quarters.

We got off to a rough start and didn't play very well," Napavine coach Rex Stanley said. "But for the final three quarters we got better defensively and tightened things up."

The Tigers scored 41 points in the middle quarters and were led by Jordan Purvis' 16 points and 11 rebounds. Wyatt Stanley notched 14 points while Peyton Stanley added 10.

"This was a balanced effort for CATHLAMET — Four Pi- us, and we got a lot of contributions from everyone," Stanley Toutle Lake hit a 3-pointer at the buzzer to make the final Napavine (9-2, 8-2 league) plays at Toledo on Wednesday.

Cards Hold Off Trojans, 53-50 PE ELL — The Trojans nearly rallied out of a deficit, but couldn't complete a comeback here in a 53-50 loss to Winlock in C2BL boys hoops action Fri-The Cardinals outscored Pe Ell by slim margins in each quarter, but the numbers added up to a difference that a 12-7 fourth quarter rally couldn't overcome. 'We had to rally in the fourth, for sure," Pe Ell coach Justin Phelps said. "The bottom line is Winlock came into our house ready to play and played better basketball than us." As Pe Ell fought, Winlock received contributions from all across the board. Wyatt Dean, Nicholas Patching and Chase

Miller each scored 12 to lead the Cardinals. Jose Gonzalez had a big hand in keeping the Trojans at bay, going 3 of 5 from the perimeter, scoring all 11 of his points in the third quarter to keep Winlock afloat. As Pe Ell inched ever closer in the final frame, Patching hit a clutch 3-pointer and Jose Keim knocked down a pair of free throws in the waning moments to seal the victory.

"It's not that we played a bad game," Phelps said. "Winlock just came ready to go. It almost seemed like they wanted it more."

Pe Ell (4-7 league, 5-7 overall) will host Wahkiakum and Winlock (2-8 league, 4-8 overall) will host Morton-White Pass on Wednesday.

Timberwolves Roll Through

ONALASKA — Morton-White Pass had no problem dispensing of Onalaska on Friday, winning by a score of 57-31 here in Central 2B League boys hoops

The Timberwolves began the game on a 27-0 run that spilled over into the second quarter. Onalaska turned the ball over eight times in the first frame as Kaleb Poquette racked up the first 12 points of the contest.

"They play the game the right way," Onalaska coach Dennis Bower said of the T-Wolves. "It was the Kaleb Poquette show. I don't know if I've ever appreciated an athlete at the high school level as much as him."

Poquette went on to drop a game-high 24 points. Cameron Hart added 11 points while Matt Poquette chipped in 10 points and eight rebounds for MWP.

Stone Whitney led the Loggers with 12 points and seven boards.

'We knew we had to take care of the ball going in and we made poor decisions," Bower said. "We competed all the way to the end but I just thought we would have came out a little stronger."

Bower praised the efforts of Jack Beck and David Graham off the bench.

Onalaska (2-8 league, 3-9 overall) will travel to Adna on Wednesday while Morton-White Pass (10-0 league, 11-1 overall) will head to Winlock on the same day.

NAPAVINE — The Tigers' hot start may not land them in the history books, but it should have some impact on the state rankings.

No. 5 Napavine outscored No. 2 Toutle Lake, 25-5, in the first quarter and held on in the second half for a 64-48 win here Thursday night in Central 2B League girls basketball action.

Melissa Lee led a balanced Napavine attack with 20 points, while Rylee White scored 9 — all from long range — in the first quarter and finished with 18.

in the first quarter, and Rylee had a really good first quarter," Napavine coach Jeremy Landram said. "We were just able to get into a rhythm and play for a while."

Toutle Lake beat the Tigers, 47-40, to open the season.

"We didn't prepare any differently. We're just 10 or 12 games into the season, instead of the first game of the year," Landram said. "We're starting to figure stuff out and figure out our roles.'

Defending league MVP Sam Woodley led the Ducks with 23 points, and the game featured 51 free throws — 26 by Toutle Lake in the second half.

"There was no real rhythm in the third or fourth quarter," Landram said. "It was just a tale of two halves. The first half had a lot of rhythm, and the second half was broken up by a variety of things.'

The Tigers also missed 10 foul shots in the fourth quarter, which helped the Ducks close the gap.

Mollie Olson scored 11 and Grace Hamre added 9 for Napavine, while Karlee Bornstein played well defensively on Toutle Lake center Makala Gardner, Landram added.

"It was just a really good team effort," he said.

Napavine (10-2, 9-1 league) will host Toledo on Tuesday.

Kleemeyer Scores 38 in Pirates' Win Over Wahkiakum

ADNA — Devanie Kleemeyer broke a 12-year-old team rekiakum, 79-63, here Thursday in Central 2B League girls hoops

Kleemeyer, a junior, scored 38 points — 26 in the first half – to lead the way, breaking the Pirate single-game girls scoring record of 32 set in 2003 by Lauren Blaser. Kleemeyer went 13 of 32 from the field (10 of 19 in the first half) and 9 of 9 at the foul

The Pirates lost 44-38 in Cathlamet to the Mules, the State 2B runner-up last year, in both teams' season opener.

Adna led 19-9 after a quarter, but fouls — the teams combined to shoot 64 free throws — helped the Mules keep pace. Kenya Lorton added 14 points for Adna, while Lili Glover came off the bench to score 8 points with back-to-back 3-pointers in the second half. Sam Rolfe added

7 points and seven rebounds. "Every time we took a lead by 15 or 20 they found a way to cut it to 8," Adna coach Chris Bannish said. "So all in all it was a big win for us, and team-wise, it was a team win. Our 6, 7 and 8 (Glover, Isabella Elwood and Darian Humphrey) played really well."

Josey Sandrini and Humphrey, Bannish added, played well defensively on Mule guard Peyton Souvenir, who scored 23 points on 8 of 26 shooting. Adna (8-4, 7-3 league) will play at Onalaska on Tuesday and at Pe Ell on Thursday.

Cardinals Shut Down Trojans

WINLOCK - The Cardinals held the Trojans to just 3 first-half points and picked up the 35-17 Central 2B League victory here on Thursday night. Sophia Velasco led Winlock with points and the team's defense held Pe Ell scoreless in the second quarter.

"Our defense set the tone at the beginning," Winlock coach Scott Ashmore said. "Our press helped slow them down and get turnovers."

Hailey Compton led the Trojans with 10 points but the team as a whole shot 16 percent from the field.

Shots were not falling for cord and Adna upset No. 7 Wah- them," Ashmore said. "Hailey played hard and they're a young team but she carried the load."

Makayla Albritton, Maggie Howsden and Mika Hammond each added 6 points to the Cardinals' efforts.

Timberwolves' Defense Cages in Loggers

RANDLE — The Timberwolves' defense did their job in a 48-36 Central 2B victory over Onalaska here on Thursday night. Sharon Hazen put up big numbers for Morton-White Pass with 20 points and six rebounds, but is was Tatym Smathers' defense that slowed down the Log-

"She played great defense and takes the toughest player on the floor every night," Morton-White Pass coach Tom Griffith said. "We wanted to pay particular attention to their guards and slow them down."

Morton-White Pass was able to go into halftime with a 26-21 halftime lead, then switched defenses at the break to further stymie Onalaska.

Nicolle Duryea, Colee Masciola and Kasey Hoyt each had 7 points for the Loggers, but the team finished the night shooting 20 percent from the field.

Along with defense, Morton-White Pass got a strong showing on the glass as Christine Robbins notched 15 points and 15 rebounds while Colby Armstrong grabbed 10 boards. Haley Kolb added 12 points to the Timberwolves' efforts.

Morton-White Pass (8-4, 6-4 league) will host Winlock in Morton on Tuesday while Onalaska (6-6, 5-5 league) will host Adna.

Bailey scored the Tigers' first 11 points in the second quarter, including back-to-back-to-back 3-pointers. A jumper from Peters capped an 11-0 run and gave Centralia a 28-21 advantage, and the Tigers headed to the break with an 11-point lead.

Bailey tallied 19 in the first half and added 17 in the third quarter, with 14 points of a 16-0 Tiger run. He hit his eighth 3 of the night with 3:33 left in the third, and was fouled on his next attempt, after which he cashed in three free throws and, shortly thereafter, was sent to the bench for the night with a little over 2 minutes left in the third quarter.

"We felt like we wanted to match up with them and try to contest shooters, but wow," W.F. West coach Chris White said. "My hat's off to Hodges. What a great night he had shooting."

Bailey finished 11 of 13 from the field and 8 of 10 from long

"You know, as a shooter, me and Christian kind of have that same mentality that we're always on," Bailey said. "They were giving us shots and they were falling tonight, so we just kept putting them up there. The only difference is we were making them tonight."

Peters pointed out that having Bailey — who played just once before New Year's - has been a boost.

"He hasn't gone off like that yet, but I know he's been capable of it, and that helped a lot," Peters said of Bailey. "Me and him shoot a lot of times at practice, and I've seen him do it all the time. So (it's) a little bit (surprising) to our crowd, but not to our players.'

The only major surprise for Brown, however, was Bailey's less-than-perfect performance at the foul line, where he went 6

"He was our money-in-thebank free throw shooter, and this year he misses, every game, one or two," Brown joked. "It's kind of funny that he hasn't hit as well."

W.F. West got 20 points from Schwarz and 13 from Hawkins.

"Those two were very aggressive," White said. "We did a nice job of looking in to Adam, and Dakota did a nice job of finding some aggressive buckets against what they were doing early."

The Bearcats, though, shot just 16 of 47 (34 percent) from the field — and 4 of 23 from long range.

'We couldn't get in a groove offensively," White said. "If you don't make shots once in a while it kind of takes the wind out of your sails, too."

Centralia, meanwhile, shot 24 of 45 (53 percent) from the field and 9 of 18 from behind the arc. Layne Pertzborn came off the bench to score 12 points, and Peters finished with 11 and six rebounds.

NOTES: Centralia (7-7, 2-0 league) will play at Tumwater (9-3, 2-0 league) on Tuesday. W.F. West (4-10, 0-2 league) will host Black Hills (5-8, 0-2 league) the same night. ... Bailey was two 3-pointers off of the Tigers' single-game record (10), set by Maxx Waring in a 104 51 win over R.A. Long on Nov. 28, 2012. He was 6 points off of the school's single-game scoring record (42), set by Lewis Lofton in 1991 during a win over W.F. West. ... W.F. West's JV won, 67-50. Centralia's C-squad won, 55-26, and W.F. West's freshman team won, 51-24.

The return of Julian Edelman could be key for New England against Kansas City.

A GREAT FINAL EIGHT

Wild Card games tough to top, but plenty of star-power remains

he Divisional Round of the NFL Playoffs has a tough act to Wild Card Weekend was indeed wild, with two of the most memorable endings ever. The results give us a loaded final eight that most everyone would agree is made up of the eight best teams. So let's get right into previewing the weekend from a big-picture standpoint, then check out some X-Factors for each game on the right.

Kansas City (12-5) at New England (12-4)

Saturday, 4:35 p.m. ET, CBS

This is the only game this weekend that features teams that did not meet in the regular season, but their last meeting was memorable. In September 2014 in Kansas City, the Chiefs battered Tom Brady on a Monday night and rushed for more than 200 yards in a 41-14 win. Of course, the Pats won 13 of their next 15, including the Super Bowl.

Still, putting heat on Brady and running the ball to keep it away from him is still the plan for the Chiefs. They were in the top five in the NFL taking care of the ball and forcing turnovers. They don't make many mistakes, and they take advantage when the opponent does. At least, they did until last weekend. Despite the ugly 30-0 final score, Kansas City let Houston hang around and led just 13-0 at the half despite returning the opening kickoff for a touchdown and forcing four turnovers. As good as the Chiefs have been while winning 11 in a row, they are not facing Brian Hoyer this week. Prediction: Patriots, 26–17.

Green Bay (11-6) at Arizona (13-3)

Saturday, 8:15 p.m. ET, NBC

Do we have any idea which Green Bay Packers team will show up? Cheeseheads are just hoping it's not the one that got smoked 38-8 three weeks ago when these teams last met. Aaron Rodgers was sacked nine times in that game, so protecting him would be a good start.

The Cardinals had won nine in a row before dropping the season finale to Seattle in a game where nothing was at stake for them and several top starters were pulled early. In other words, Arizona should be well-rested and confident. But Carson Palmer — 29–9 as the Cards' starter — has never won a playoff game, and Rodgers would love to keep it that way.

Prediction: Cardinals, 30–26.

Seattle (11–6) at Carolina (15–1) Sunday, 1:05 p.m. ET, FOX

The Seahawks escaped frigid Minnesota with a 10-9 win when Vikings kicker Blair Walsh missed from 27 yards out in the final seconds. Seattle won't have to deal with that kind of weather in Carolina, but it is another cross-country trip and a morning Pacific Time start.

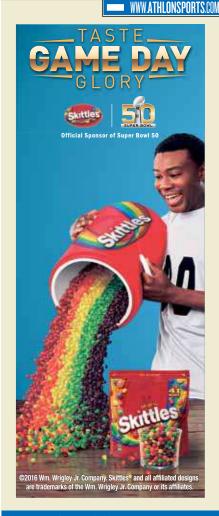

The Panthers rallied from down 13 in the second half to win in Seattle in October, but beating the Seahawks in the playoffs is a different animal. Six-seed or not, they are still the NFC champs until someone knocks them off. Can Cam Newton do it again?

Prediction: Panthers, 23–21. Pittsburgh (11–6) at Denver (12–4) Sunday, 4:40 p.m. ET, CBS

Who would have thought that Peyton Manning might be the healthier of the starting quarterbacks? Everyone is expecting Ben Roethlisberger to play after he came back from injury to help rally the Steelers over the Bengals. But how effective can he be with a damaged throwing shoulder? And will his top target, Antonio Brown, be cleared to play after getting knocked out on the play that turned the game in Cincinnati?

Both of these teams are in the top five stopping the run, so quarterback play will be key. Pittsburgh beat Denver at home four weeks ago, but the Broncos ran the ball much better (104 yards to 23). Manning is back for this one, Denver is at home, and Big Ben is not 100 percent.

Prediction: Broncos, 27–21.

THE X-FACTORS

Let's take a look at one big thing to watch for in each NFL Divisional Round playoff game that could determine who goes home — and who stays on the road to Super Bowl 50:

Chiefs at Patriots: How healthy is New England?

No team needed the week off more than the Patriots, and they earned it. Receivers Julian Edelman and Danny Amendola, tackle Sebastian Vollmer, defensive end Chandler Jones and linebacker Dont'a Hightower all returned to practice this week. The question remains, can they hit the ground running and be effective? Edelman is especially key: Tom Brady averaged 338 yards passing in the nine games with Edelman, In the seven without him, Brady averaged 248 yards. Rob Gronkowski had five 100-yard games before Edelman went down ... and none after.

Packers at Cardinals:

Can Green Bay protect Aaron Rodgers?

Only four teams allowed more sacks than the Packers [47] during the regular season, and the Cards had nine of them when these teams met last month. Veteran Dwight Freeney had 3.0 sacks, and Calais Campbell added 2.5. Packers left tackle David Bakhtiari missed that game and still hasn't returned. If he can't play against Arizona, it could be another long day. The pressure on Rodgers is leading to turnovers for a team that usually takes care of the ball. The Packers had nine turnovers in their first 13 games but have nine more in the last four.

Seahawks at Panthers:

Who can run the ball? Both teams are top-five running the ball and stopping the run. But while there may not be many big holes, don't expect either team to give up on the ground game. Carolina rushed 33 times for 135 yards and three scores despite falling behind 20-7 in the second half when these teams met in October. While Cam Newton and Russell Wilson are both capable of making big plays, both are at their best when there is the threat of the run and defenses can't tee off rushing the passer.

Steelers at Broncos: Who can withstand the air attack?

Unlike Seattle and Carolina, these teams are happy to throw it: They combined for 99 pass attempts when they met last month. And it's not just the top targets doing damage. Denver's Emmanuel Sanders caught 10 passes for 161 yards in that game, while Pittsburgh's Markus Wheaton and Martavis Bryant combined for 16 catches and 149 yards. The Broncos had the NFL's top pass defense and gave up 300 yards passing just once ... against the Steelers and Ben Roethlisberger.

Four quarterbacks who were No. 1-overall picks remain in the playoffs: Cam Newton, Alex Smith, Carson Palmer and Peyton Manning. Combined, they are 1–2 in Super Bowls (all Manning). The other passers left - Russell Wilson, Aaron Rodgers, Ben Roesthlisberger and Tom Brady

OUTSIDE THE HUDDLE

- are 8-4 in Super Bowls. ..

The Miami Dolphins became the first team to hire a new head coach, tabbing former Chicago Bears and Denver Broncos offensive coordinator Adam Gase to take over. After drawing rave reviews from Peyton Manning in Denver, Gase helped Jay Cutler of the Bears to one of his best seasons. One year after leading the NFL with 18 interceptions, Cutler threw just 11, a career-low for seasons in which he played more than 10 games. At 37, Gase becomes the NFL's youngest head coach. ..

After the Houston Texans were eliminated from the playoffs in a 30-0 loss to Kansas City, it was revealed that star defensive end J.J. Watt would have surgery to repair a "significant groin injury." Watt also played the last few weeks of the season with a broken hand, but he still led the NFL with 17.5 sacks. It was his second career sack title. .

The Ryan twins are together again. Bills head coach Rex Ryan hired his twin brother, Rob, to serve as assistant head coach/defense next season. Rex Ryan wants to fully implement his defense after trying to compromise and run a hybrid scheme that incorporated elements of the base 4-3 defense the Bills ran with great success in 2014. Dennis Thurman is expected to remain defensive coordinator, and Rex Rvan will still make the in-game defensive calls. Defensive backs coach Donnie Henderson will not return.

Burfict suspended

Cincinnati linebacker Vontaze Burfict helped cost his team a playoff win with a late hit to the head of Steelers receiver Antonio Brown on Saturday. The hit will cost Burfict the first three games of next season as the NFL has suspended him for the hit and "repeated violations of safety-related playing rules." Burfict hit Brown after an incomplete pass in the final minute, drawing a 15-yard penalty. Teammate Adam Jones then drew another for bumping an official while going after Steelers assistant coach Joey Porter, who was on the field illegally. Pittsburgh kicked the winning field goal on the next play.

Seattle Not Shaken by Falling Behind in the Postseason

By Tim Booth

The Associated Press

RENTON — If the Seattle Seahawks fall behind by two scores Sunday in Carolina, they're the last team that's going to panic about the situation.

Seven times since Pete Carroll's arrival in 2010, the Seahawks have faced a deficit of nine or more points in playoff games. And in five of those games, the Seahawks have rallied to win, including last week when Seattle trailed 9-0 at Minnesota before pulling out a 10-9 victory.

That might not seem like that grand an accomplishment until it's compared to the rest of the NFL, which according to STATS is 7-42 facing the same situations.

"I couldn't be more proud of that. That's what we're talking about. That's how we hope to be," Carroll said. "We've pulled off some pretty exciting finishes, and we've been part of the other end of it too, but for the most part we've done it really well. It's a really good thing to know about yourself when you're going into these games."

The two losses for Seattle came early in Carroll's tenure. Seattle lost 35-24 in 2010 divi-Two years later, Seattle trailed 20-0 at halftime and 27-7 after three quarters in Atlanta, only to rally and lead 28-27 in the final the NFC title game.

SINCE 1983: Satellite Campus Offers Up to 40 Classes, Provides Opportunity for Residents in East Lewis County

By Justyna Tomtas

itomtas@chronline.com

For about 33 years, the Centralia College East campus has been offering classes and services to residents in East Lewis County who may otherwise not be able to access them.

A long drive from the main campus of the college in Centralia, the East campus came to fruition after Bev Butters and April Doolittle established a need for a satellite of the college.

In 1983, the first class met in the East County Center, originally utilizing one classroom at Morton High School.

The temporary agreement allowed the satellite to offer classes to residents of the area, offering an alternative for those unwilling to drive to Centralia for classes.

The campus has since grown and in 1997 the East County Center moved into a new 5,000-square-foot building adjacent to the high school.

Kelli Bloomstrom, dean of transitional education and dean of Centralia College East, said the campus is important for a number of reasons.

"The college's mission is to improve people's lives through lifelong learning," she said. "Sometimes because we live in Eastern Lewis County traveling to main campus is often difficult. This provides an opportunity for access and it's a good entry point (for students)."

As a good beginning place for students, the campus offers classes on a smaller scale. Bloomstrom said the offerings are limited because of limited faculty numbers and classroom sizes, but said that classes are taught similarly to those offered at the main campus.

The campus utilizes face-to-face class-room time as well as interactive television courses where instructors from main campus lecture via the television. The interactive television courses provide a two way interaction: Students can listen to the lecture and also talk to the instructor.

Although the college does not offer any bachelor degree courses, Bloomstrom said it would be wonderful if they were able to in the future.

Students are currently able to get an associate of arts degree, a degree that is designed to easily transfer to other colleges.

The offerings at the campus are plentiful.

Developmental education coursework, or pre-college courses are available, preparing students for college level work. Adult basic education and basic skill classes are also available at the school.

Other adult special interest courses are offered for non-credit. Typically a small fee is associated with them. For example, Bloomstrom said, a person could take a pilates class either for college credit, or just as a community member for fitness and personal enrichment.

More About Centralia College East

Centralia College first held classes at its East County Center in 1983. At the time one classroom in Morton High School was used. Now, residents of eastern Lewis County utilize a 5,000 square foot structure that sits adjacent to the high school.

The facility is equipped with up-to-date technology and is a fully functional satellite program of Centralia College. Centralia College East is located at 701 Airport Way in Morton. For more information, visit www.centralia.edu/cce/index.html or call (360) 496-5022.

The water and sewer is finally hooked up and volunteers help landscape.

CC East holds the first classes in the new building. The sewer and water is still not hooked up. Portable restrooms are temporarily used.

The construction of Centralia College East begins

City of Morton secures funding so sewer lines can be replaced. The moratorium on new sewer hookups will be lifted when lines are replaced.

Local contractor Andrew Noel Construction is awarded the project.

Design and specifications for the new building are completed. The College Foundation requests contractors to submit bid proposals.

Morton School Board approves the transfer of 0.9 acres of land to Centralia College. This parcel will become the future site of CC East. The Centralia College Foundation submits an application for the USDA Forest Service Rural Community Development Grant and is awarded $250,000 for the construction of CC East. The fundraising campaign begins for the $500,000 project.

Altrusa International funds initial design.

Through the urging of the East County Center Advisory Committee, Centralia College completes a feasibility study for a new building. The Centralia College foundation submits the CCEast project's pre-application to the Lewis County Commissioners which in turn submit the pre-application to the Washington Community Economic Revitalization Team.

Among its offerings, the college has some technical computer based courses available for those seeking credits as a medical administrative assistant, for example, and some of the nursing and diesel program prerequisites are offered.

To meet a growing demand of varying interests, the East campus added a snowshoeing class and roadside geology class, both of which are new this quarter.

Courses vary from quarter to quarter, Bloomstrom said, and right now about 40 classes are being offered at the East campus.

The campus has 7 to 10 faculty members at any given time and two pro-rata faculty members.

"Because we have adjuncts, we don't offer the same courses every quarter so faculty rotates," Bloomstrom said. "We have probably about 15 adjuncts, but they are not always working every quarter."

Pro-rata faculty are teachers who would typically teach the same classes every quarter, Bloomstrom said, while the adjunct staff teaches courses that their expertise lies in.

Currently the campus has a headcount of about 127 students, a number that is slightly higher than the average.

Most of the students reside in Lewis County, although Bloomstrom said once in awhile people from Pierce County enroll for classes at the college.

As a graduate of Centralia College who started her educational path at the East campus, Bloomstrom said the school provides a great opportunity for those in the area.

"I think it's just a great place to start your degree or come for a kind of fun class," she said. "I think it's important to be able to have a campus in our backyard... Centralia College means a lot in general to the community and it's just wonderful we can share that here in the east."

How a Married Gay Catholic Couple Live Their Faith

By Patricia Montemurri

Detroit Free Press

DETROIT — Because their Catholic faith is against samesex marriage, Bryan Victor and Thomas Molina-Duarte made their wedding vows this summer before a Protestant minister in a Detroit Episcopal church.
Those in attendance included many family members, including Victor's uncle, who is a Catholic priest and Macomb County pastor. The Rev. Ronald Victor did not officiate but was there because, he told his nephew, the Catholic Church "needs more examples of gay holiness."

When Victor and Molina-Duarte attend Mass every Sunday, the couple go to an east side Detroit Catholic church, where Bryan Victor's mom and dad join them in the pew. In their shared Catholic faith, Victor and Molina-Duarte find spiritual sustenance. And at their parish, they've also found accep-"We remain in the church rather than leaving," said Bryan Victor, 30, a Wayne State University doctoral student in social work. "The reason is that it's my faith. It's one of my guides. It's how I treat people. It gives me a deep sense of community."

The practice of his Catholic faith, said Molina-Duarte, 29, a leadership coordinator for the Highland Park Ruth Ellis Center, which serves many LGBT youth, "is right and life-affirm-

"If it challenges things," said Molina-Duarte, "that's more of an afterthought."

But the Catholic Church is being universally challenged from the pews to the pulpit, by the evolving ways society and many everyday Catholics include and welcome LGBT people.

It was a year of triumph for the LGBT community because the U.S. Supreme Court declared same-sex marriage legal throughout the country. Yet gay Catholics still wrestle with their church's condemnation of homosexuality as "disordered" and the church's prohibition against same-sex marriage.

Pope Francis has signaled more inclusive tone toward LGBT people, through his words and actions, even as his open-arms position draws fire from some conservative Catholics. But doors continue to open.

In 2012, Austrian Cardinal Christoph Schoenborn overruled an Austrian priest who wanted to ban a gay Catholic man, in a civil registered domestic partnership with another man, from taking his seat on the parish council after other parishioners elected him.

Retired Detroit Auxiliary Bishop Thomas Gumbleton, a longtime advocate for liberal Catholic causes, often describes how he came to be an outspoken supporter of gay rights in the years after his brother came out as a gay man. When Gumbleton's elderly mother asked him if her gay son, in a committed relationship with another man the family had come to know and love, was "going to hell," Gumbleton assured her otherwise.

"That's how God wanted him to be. That's who he is," Gumbleton said he told her, as he spoke Saturday at a meeting of the Fortunate Families support group for Catholic families with gay family members. The group is not officially recognized by the Catholic Church.

Gumbleton said Catholic teaching has long allowed Catholics to let their consciences, in part, be their guide in participating in the church's rituals and sacraments, even when they may be at odds with church teachings. Gumbleton predicted Catholic teaching against same-sex unions eventually will change, as he noted did its onetime support of slavery and capital punishment. 'It's clear the movement is there," said Gumbleton, "but it takes a long time for the teaching to permeate the whole church, and people will fight it."

Tom Molina-Duarte, left, 28 and husband Bryan Victor, 30, pose for a portrait on Oct. 3 in their Detroit, Mich., home. The couple married in August but had been dating four years prior. They say that their Catholic faith is very important to them. "We were driven to our marriage by our faith and not by the marriage equality law," said Molina-Duarte.

Society's changing norms, however, will not change church teaching that sex is for a man and a woman united in marriage, said Catholic moral theologian Janet Smith, a professor at Detroit's Sacred Heart Major Seminary and an adviser to the Vatican's Pontifical Council on the Family.

Jesus encountered many who "were misusing their sexuality," said Smith, noting that refers to "cohabitors, adulterers, fornicators, you name it."

"He treated them very lovingly, and he wants them under his roof," said Smith, "but his words to them were that they should repent and sin no more.

To receive the Catholic sacrament of communion at mass, said Smith, Catholics should be in a state of "sanctifying grace That means, said Smith, that 'you don't have on your soul any of what we call sins that involve serious rejections of God's plan for the world, including the church's teachings on sexuality."

Detroit Archbishop Allen Vigneron said through a spokesman that he couldn't comment for this story without knowing more specifics about the men. Officially, the archdiocese offers the ministry program Courage, to urge gay Catholics to abstain from sex; and another program, EnCourage, to counsel Catholic families with gay members.

At the men's wedding ceremony, family was in force.

"They are two very holy guys," Catholic priest Ronald (Ron) Victor said of his nephew and nephew-in-law. "I do see their union as being sacred and sacramental, in the sense that it reflects God's love."

To officiate at their wedding could have led to discipline by his superiors. But Ron Victor, the pastor of St. Isidore Catholic parish in Macomb, said he had considered blessing their union privately, although his nephew told him the couple didn't want anything clandestine or controversial.

The priest and his nephew became close when Ron Victor was assigned to a St. Clair Shores parish, where Bryan attended elementary school. After the school day, instead of going to latchkey to wait for his working parents to pick him up, Bryan went to the rectory.

"It's been one of those things when somebody you know and love a lot comes out, it kind of changes your perspective," said Ron Victor.

Ron Victor said he was moved by the wedding ceremony, and at the same time, "a little angry and a little disappointed that we couldn't do it in a church where I could have officiated."

He said he believes many priests would be open to blessing same-sex unions, although "they can't be real public with that."

Ron Victor said he's comfortable being public with it now. Through his priesthood, he said he has tried to practice

"They are two very holy guys, I do see their union as being sacred and sacramental, in the sense that it reflects God's love."

> Ronald (Ron) Victor Catholic priest

what Pope Francis so poignantly and pointedly captured with his famous observation about gay Catholics.

The priest said he doesn't know the transgressions or every sin of all who present themselves for Communion. "As long as they're seeking God, who am I to judge," said the priest, citing the pope's memorable expres-

The church calls gay sex "intrinsically disordered" because it cannot result in procreation. Yet Ron Victor said the caring, monogamous relationship between his nephew and Molina-Duarte "reflects God's love."

"While it's not necessarily life-giving in a biological way," said the priest, "it's life-giving in other ways."

Other members of the couple's families agree.

Lennie Victor, Bryan's father and Ron's sibling, said he's never heard his brother the priest "tell people how they should behave or what they should believe."

"If the church makes you choose between your family and your faith," said Lennie Victor, of him and his wife Maureen, "I guess we voted for family.'

"I'm very proud of them," said Nancy Kiely, Molina-Duarte's mother. She's a nurse whose Catholic volunteer work was recently honored by the Archdiocese of Hartford, Conn. "Hopefully, things will change. I don't know whether it will be in my lifetime. Honestly, it was the best wedding I've ever been to."

Pope Francis, said Molina-Duarte, "completely flips the script" when it comes to ministering to gay Catholics.

Pope Francis, while not changing church teaching against gay unions, has made outreach to LGBT people a hallmark of his papacy. When the pope visited the U.S. in September, he met privately with a former student, who is gay, and the man's partner. But that came after another revelation that confused and contradicted previous papal images of the pope's outreach to gays — when Francis also privately met with the Kentucky county clerk who refused to issue gay marriage licenses.

Still, said Bryan Victor, the pope "doesn't operate out of fear ... and has a gospel of encounter with those on the margins."

Although Catholic teaching says their union and their love are sins, both men say they are at home, and even at peace, in a Catholic church. They have not encountered condemnation or cruelty. Only one relative refused the invitation to their wedding because of opposition to homosexuality.

Both men are Catholic school graduates, and both stopped going to church as young men wrestling with coming out.

"I think for my own mental health, I stepped away," said Molina-Duarte.

Said Victor: "I came out because I was suffocating and clinically depressed. Living in the closet is a health hazard

The two met in late 2010 through a mutual friend in Chicago, where Molina-Duarte was living at the time. Together they found a mutual commitment to social justice issues. They had long-distance relationship as Victor studied for a master's degree in social work at the University of Michigan. Victor found himself missing the ritual and inspiration he found at Catholic mass, and Molina-Duarte began to join him at services in Ann Arbor.

"I felt too unattached from regular church life," said Victor. "I wanted to embed myself in the life of the church."

And because of Victor's faith, Molina-Duarte said he could imagine a spiritual home for himself.

"I hadn't met someone my age who was gay and had a deep and respectful reverence for the church," said Molina-Duarte. 'Bryan was able to have both."

Victor and Molina-Duarte moved to Detroit in 2012. They attended masses at a few parishes, but felt most engaged and most welcomed at St. Charles Borromeo near Van Dyke and Kercheval in Detroit's West Village neighborhood. Bryan's paternal grandparents grew up in the parish and were married there.

The congregation is integrated and active, with outreach to group homes for disabled and elderly people on East Grand Boulevard At St. Charles, at the point in the mass where Catholics exchange the Sign of Peace handshake, there's a five-minute interlude where folks leave the pews to hug familiar faces and strangers alike.

In this light-filled sanctuary, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, Victor said he finds a welcoming place for "the real-lived experience of people" — and people from society's margins and the poor.

That they present themselves to regularly receive Communion is not a sin, both men say.

"We examine our consciences and we know that our love for each other does not take us out of a relationship with God," said Victor. "It takes us into a closer relationship with God. And for that reason, we feel comfortable presenting ourselves for Communion."

Their sexuality is God-given, said Molina-Duarte. "You're called to be in community and seek justice and how can you do that in a closet?"

"I carry that Gospel message out to the secular world, and my work is reflective of the church, said Victor. "I am sustained and nourished by the church. I'm sharing my gifts and talents within the church."

On a recent Sunday, Molina-Duarte celebrated his 29th birthday with morning Mass. The week before, his dad had visited from Connecticut and joined him and Victor at St. Charles. To mark Molina-Duarte's birthday, Bryan Victor, and Bryan's parents Lennie and Maureen, were in attendance before a birthday breakfast.

It's practice at the end of Sunday Mass at St. Charles for the pastor, Capuchin priest Rev. Ray Stadmeyer, to ask if any Mass-goers are celebrating birthdays or anniversaries. Molina-Duarte jumped up from the pew and bounded down the aisle. Bryan Victor whispered: "I don't know anybody who loves birthdays more."

At the front of the church, Brother Ray as he's called, extended his hand out. Stadmeyer did not want to comment for this article, but this is what he told his congregation, before they sang "Happy Birthday" to Molina-Duarte.

"Bless our brother Thomas. Bless him in his relationship," said Stadmeyer. "... We thank him and Bryan for all the goodness they bring to us. May they know God's tender graces.'

Voices of Faith: What Does Your Faith Say About the Power of Prayer?

The Kansas City Star

The Rev. Duke Tufty, Temple on the Plaza: I believe there are two types of prayer.

Petitionary prayer is beseeching God to give us something good, take away something bad or make something happen that is aligned with

It is based on the belief that there is somebody (a higher deity), somewhere, listening to our plea, then deciding whether our prayer is worthy of granting. Why some prayers are answered and others aren't, God only knows.

The other type is affirmative prayer and

Jesus said, "When you pray, believe you already have what it is you desire and it will be yours." (Mark 11:24) I don't believe he meant this in a material sense where we could pray for a new car, believe we have received it and it will show up in our driveway. Prayer is of a spiritual nature and provides in a spiritual way.

If you are going through a difficult time, affirm that you have the strength to make it through, express gratitude for that strength, and it will be yours. If you are experiencing a great conflict in a relationship, affirm that you have the compassion, understanding and capacity to forgive, express gratitude for those attributes, and you will find a way to move beyond the conflict. If you are facing great fears, anxiety and stress about the future, affirm that you have the peace, faith and confidence to rise above and move beyond the fears, and you will.

You have everything you need to live a comfortable and fulfilling life.

Affirmative prayer reminds us of that during disturbing times and calls forth the power within to calm the turbulent waters of life.

The Rev. Joe Nassal, Precious Blood Center, Liberty, Kan.: I received a note from a young man who was about to become a father for the first time.

He and his wife were praying for a healthy baby. But he asked, "My dilemma is praying to God for something specific to happen and if it doesn't, what does that say about God, or our

He wrote that he was much more comfortable "praying for God's blessing, for strength, for peace of heart, for clarity."

When we look for instant answers or specific solutions based on our prayer, we treat God like a genie that may or may not grant our wish. If our prayer goes unanswered, we think we lack sufficient faith; or perhaps our prayer was not pleasing to God.

In our prayer, we can imagine God is like a Supreme Court justice rendering a decision. After a long and thoughtful deliberation, God decides the answer to our prayer is "No."

Prayer is not about saying the right thing but being in the right relationship with God. My faith tells me the power of prayer is in nurturing and deepening this relationship with God.

We pray to center our lives in the presence of God. We pray not to bend the will of God to our desire but to be united in love with God and one another. Here we find the power of prayer: Because of God's love dwelling within us, we are not alone but are in communion with one another in our common need.

1886FisherBoxSleigh

By the Northwest Carriage Museum

About two years ago, an old unrestored box sleigh was donated to the Northwest Carriage Museum in Raymond. wood on this sleigh was in very rough shape. The dash board was broken and several floor boards were damaged and loose. Remarkably, the sleigh still had its original maker's tag which indicated it was made by the G.W. Fisher in Machias, Maine. Museum curator, Jerry Bowman recently completed a full body off restoration of this historic little sleigh. The sleigh's body was disassembled from the runners. Numerous bolts were cut off and eventually replaced. The dash and floor boards were repaired using much of the original wood. Runners were repaired and needed pins replaced. The entire body and runners were painted and some pin striping was added. Once reassembled, the seat was beautifully reupholstered to its original look.

Research on G.W. Fisher was difficult. Through his normal channels and contacts, Jerry was unable to find much information on this maker which led him to contact a local genealogist and historian in Machias. With her help and by searching census records from the 1800's, it was determined that George William Fisher was born in Machias, Maine, in 1851 and died in Lubec, Maine, in 1909. His first wife, Lillie Livingston, died in 1886 and his second wife, Jessie Campbell, lived until 1938. All three are buried in the Court Street Cemetery in Machias. George's occupation was listed as blacksmith and carriage maker in both the 1880 and 1900 census. This beautiful box sleigh is now on display at the Northwest Carriage Museum in Raymond along with 42 other historic horse-drawn vehicles. On tours, Jerry likes to tell visitors, "If only this little sleigh could talk, imagine what we might learn about life in the 19th century!"

If you enjoy history and museums, a visit to the Northwest Carriage Museum is a must. We are located at 314 Alder St. in Raymond. Open Daily from am to pm. Group tours are always welcome, visit us at www.nwcarriagemuseum.org or call (360) 942-4150 for information.

Laurie Bowman, director, and Jerry Bowman, curator, stand next to a Brewster Summer Coupe Brougham at the Northwest Carriage Museum in Raymond. The museum houses one of the best collections of historic horse-drawn vehicles in the country. Laurie manages the museum while Jerry does restorations and historical research.

Fastbacks and Barracudas Perfect Cars for the Family Life

Submitted by Sarah Chapman Mittge / for Our Hometowns

Jerry Chapman, of Littlerock, pictured around 1970, was very proud of this olive green Mustang Fastback, which he bought with money earned baking pizzas at Shakey's. Later he sold the Mustang and bought a Barracuda, a car he deemed appropriate for a family man such as himself. The Barracuda was the only family car and Jerry would bike to and from work in order to leave the car at home for his family. He worked at the Weyerhaeuser research center in Centralia, 9 miles each way from their Newaukum Hill home west of Chehalis.

On Jan. 16, 1888, the territorial legislature re-enacts the suffrage law under a new title, "An Act to Enfranchise Women." Women regain the vote, but are no longer permitted to serve on juries.

Women constituted 38 percent of the electorate, and they had strong support among legislators for whom they had voted. Nevertheless, the legislature paid heed to the anti-suffragists' most emotional argument: that women should not serve on juries with men, because they would be exposed to discussions of sordid acts, such as sodomy, incest, and rape.

U.S. Army Air Corps Douglas B-18A Bolo, With Seven Airmen Aboard, Disappears After Takeoff From Mcchord Field

On Jan. 16, 1941, a U.S. Army Air Corps Douglas B-18A Bolo bomber with seven airmen aboard takes off from McChord Field (Pierce County) in clear weather en route to Muroc Field in Southern California to participate in train-bombing range. While flying south through the Chehalis Valley, the pilot encounters strong winds and rain squalls and turns east in search of better conditions. Low clouds cover the higher elevations of mountain foothills and 30 miles due south of McChord Field, the aircraft crashes in the Snoqualmie National Forest in a remote area called The Rockies. Search and rescue aircraft, hampered by continuing bad weather, are able to fly only sporadically and ground searches prove fruitless. After two weeks, the aerial search for the missing bomber is suspended until spring. On Feb. 3, 1941, two woodsmen, conducting an independent search, find the wreckage of the aircraft on Deschutes Peak (elevation 4,322 feet), the highest point for miles in any direction. There are no survivors. The official cause of the accident will be listed as pilot error.

On Jan. 16, 1951, a Northwest Airlines, Martin 2-0-2, passenger plane en route from Minneapolis to Seattle, with several scheduled stops including Spokane, crashes on a farm near Edwall in Lincoln County. Three crew members and seven passengers are killed in the mishap. There are no survivors. The Civil Aeronautics Board will conclude that the probable cause of the accident was the pilot's sudden loss of control

Living Smart: 5 Healthy Home Habits to Start in 2016

By Oseye Boyd

Angie's List

It's the time of year when we're inundated with articles on how to be healthy, start good-for-you habits and dump the bad ones. But, what about giving some attention to another major investment in your life — your home.

To help get your home in tip-top shape, here are five healthy home habits to start in the upcoming year:

1. Create a home maintenance and repair budget

Don't break the bank when your washing machine stops or the hot water heater leaks. Create a budget now for expected maintenance projects, and set aside extra funds for those unexpected, emergency repairs that always seem to occur at the most inopportune time. According to financial pros, you can expect to spend about one to four percent of your home's value annually on repairs and maintenance.

2. Clean refrigerator condenser coils

Help your refrigerator live longer and stay cool by cleaning the condenser coils. Appliance repair pros say it's the No. 1 refrigerator maintenance task. Condenser coils, which are located under or behind the refrigerator, eventually become covered with dust and pet hair. Keeping the condenser coils clean can save up to 10 percent on your energy bill. A professional cleaning costs around $100. However, you can do it yourself with a vacuum cleaner and an inexpensive coil brush.

3. Service your garage door

Regular garage door maintenance ensures safety and helps prevent costly repairs. In many houses, the garage door is the most used door — and it's a big, heavy one. Hire a garage door pro to check the tracks, rollers and hinges; tighten screws and bolts and lubricate the moving parts. According to professionals and Angie List members, garage door inspections cost $40 to $100.

4. Hire a chimney sweep

Regardless of whether you use a wood-burning fireplace or a gas log fireplace. A gas fireplace burns clean, meaning there's no creosote or soot, but you want to be sure the ceramic logs, valves and connections work properly. A gas log fireplace poses the risk of carbon dioxide poisoning if not properly ventilated.

For wood-burning fireplaces, highly flammable creosote builds up in the chimney walls and can cause a fire if not removed. The National Fire Protection Agency (NFPA) advises hiring a Chimney Safety Institute of America (CSIA) Certified Chimney Sweep.

Also, inspect the chimney for debris, such as bird nests or other objects that could block ventilation.

5. Schedule a furnace tune-up

Annual furnace inspections and cleanings cost less than $100, but can potentially save you hundreds of dollars in repairs by keeping your HVAC system in optimal working condition and catching problems early. HVAC maintenance contracts typically cost $150 to $500 per year. Don't forget to change the furnace filter as a clogged air filter puts extra stress on your HVAC system.

ADVICE: Dear Abby

Three Cats Become a Crowd in a One-Bedroom Apartment

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend and I live together. We adopted a cat off the street. A few months later, the cat became pregnant and had four kittens. We ended up keeping two, and now we have three cats in a one-bedroom apartment. I've tried being OK with it, but it's making me stressed and unhappy. The litter box must be constantly cleaned; they get into our food and pee on our furniture.

By Abigail Van Buren

I've tried talking to my girlfriend about putting one or two of them up for adoption, but every time I raise the issue, she gets mad and dares me to get rid of them. I don't want her to resent me, but I also don't like living in the circumstances I'm living in. Please help. — SURROUNDĔD BY CATS

DEAR SURROUNDED: You and your girlfriend appear to be irresponsible pet owners. I hope you realize that if the stray cat you adopted had been spayed, this could have been avoided.

The litter box should be cleaned regularly and, because the cats belong to both of you, the responsibility should be shared. If the cats urinate on the furniture, it should be discussed with a veterinarian rather than disposing of them.

That said, you are not married to this woman. If you're not happy under the current conditions, perhaps it's time to consider moving.

DEAR ABBY: I really need your help. I'm 13 and I know I'm a little young, but there's a boy I have known for a while. We used to text all the time, and then we got into a fight. We both said rude things, and then after a while he started talking to me again and acting like he didn't care. In fact, he told me that. Then we stopped talking again and he blocked me on Instagram.

Well, this school year he came to my school, and he's very popular. He stares at me every day when we pass each other and once he said hi

What I'm confused about is why does he keep unblocking me and blocking me on social media? Why is he doing everything he's done? I hope you can help. — BLOCKED IN MISSOURI

DEAR BLOCKED: The first time he blocked you, he probably did it to punish you for having hurt his feelings during the fight. Now he may be doing it to get a rise out of you, or because for some reason he doesn't want you to be able to see what he's saying and doing.

The opposite of love isn't hate; it's indifference. Because he stares at you in the hallway, I suspect he still likes you. Don't chase him just be patient and let this play out because it could be interesting.

DEAR ABBY: My niece got married and some of the gifts got separated from the gift cards. Individual cards were found apart from the gifts. So how do you thank the individuals who left gifts without knowing the gift they gave? - UNSURE IN THE WEST

DEAR UNSURE: While it is preferable to mention the gift when thanking the giver, no rule states that you HAVE to do so. Your niece should start by writing thank-you notes for the gifts that have cards with them, and for those few (I HOPE few) that don't, the givers should be told how meaningful it was to have them present on the special day, and thanked for their generosity. Period.

PS. A helpful hint to anyone sending a wedding or shower gift: Note on the gift card what has been sent (waffle iron, baby blanket, etc.).

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.
